DEWEY IS READY TO PRESENT HIS CASE TO VOTERS

Big Issues Emerge in Campaign.

Turn to the Graphic section of today's Tribune for a sketch of Mrs. Thomas E. Dewey, wife of the Republican Presidential candidate, by Marcia Winn.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2.—The campaign for the Presidency—the most momentous political battle since the war to save the Union—will get under way this week.

Gov. Dewey of New York, the Republican candidate, will open his drive with a speech in Philadelphia Thursday. From there he will journey to the Pacific coast and back, presenting to the voters the case against the New Deal and the arguments for the election of the Republican ticket.

Having considered Mr. Dewey's thesis for Republican victory, President Roosevelt will lead off for the defense with a speech to the teamsters' union here on Sept. 23.

Many Issues at Stake.

Thus will be inaugurated a mighty struggle for control of the national government. The American people are to choose whether to continue leftward under the New Deal to new manifestations of totalitarian government partaking of both fascism and communism or to turn to the right under a Republican administration to restore democratic government and free private enterprise.

Many are the issues before the voters. Most of these issues stem from the deep division between conservative Republicans and Democrats on the one hand and radical Democrats and Republicans on the other.

There is the issue of the fourth term, which would give Mr. Roosevelt 16 years in the White House, reject anew the two term tradition, pave the way to outright dictatorship, and perpetuate the New Deal.

G. O. P. for Limited Tenure.

By silence in their platform the Democrats stand committed to no limitation on the tenure of the Presidency. The Republican platform declares for an amendment of the Constitution providing that no person shall be President "for more than two terms of 4 years each."

There is the issue of the "indispensable man" to wage the war to a successful conclusion and negotiate a favorable peace. The Democrats quote Lincoln's adage of the 1864 campaign that it is unwise to swap horses while crossing a river.

The Republicans retort that this argument, even if valid, lacks force, for what with Germany virtually defeated and the conquest of Japan a certainty within a matter of months the river is as good as crossed. Then they also quote Lincoln, who said, likewise in 1864, that "this government does not depend upon the life of any man."

"Essential" for Peace.

Patently conceding that the imminent end of the European war takes the ground from under the horse swapping argument the Democrats now, as evidenced by Sen. Truman's acceptance speech, are veering to the contention that Mr. Roosevelt must be retained in office to construct world peace.

To which the Republicans retort that in view of plans to occupy Germany for five years or more and to devote 10 years to the development of permanent peace machinery, the new Democratic tactics amount to a proposal to retain Mr. Roosevelt for not only a fourth but a fifth term if not for life.

Finally the Republicans refute the Roosevelt indispensability argument by quoting Roosevelt himself who said in 1933 that "there is no indispensable man."

Boasts of War Machine.

In contrast with the boast of Prime Minister Churchill that he

How Communism Pays Off.

Those who get their signals on the true course of liberalism and freedom for the working classes by radar out of Moscow will be interested in the account of Henry Cassidy, an Associated Press correspondent who returned recently to the terrors of American free enterprise after four years in the communist capital. No reasonable man would accuse Mr. Cassidy of public prejudice against communism, because, like all well trained AP men, he is a political neuter. Long years of supervision have removed private opinions from his copy, and the news service which employs him has no opinions, except as to accuracy. It can be presumed that all Mr. Cassidy brought back from Moscow, besides his luggage, was fact.

He says that the soviets retreated from communism last March so far as to set up a number of capitalistic stores, where anybody with sufficient rubles could purchase any article in stock. The low priced state stores still exist, but they dole out goods under the ration system, limiting quantity. The new stores are ration free, and include well patronized department stores, food shops, and restaurants.

In one of the new department stores, Mr. Cassidy says these prices prevailed as of Aug. 1: A man's woolen suit, 4,500 rubles; a pair of men's shoes, 1,600 to 3,700 rubles; a pair of rayon stockings, 380 rubles, and a bar of toilet soap, 85 to 150 rubles. In one of the new food stores a pound of sweet butter brings 366 rubles; a pound of sugar, 295 rubles, and eggs are 15 rubles each. These are not black market prices; they are posted publicly.

The ruble is pegged at 20 cents—about the value of the Mexican peso—but is sold to members of the diplomatic corps at 8½ cents each. Mr. Cassidy figures purchasing power by estimating the average Russian worker's salary at 600 rubles a month, double what it was when the last statistics were issued before the war. By that index, a member of the working class in Russia would have to labor more than seven months to buy himself a suit of coupon-free clothes, and nearly three weeks for a pound of unrationed butter.

Rents are much lower than store prices, according to Mr. Cassidy. He paid 480 rubles for

THE REAL AND THE PHONY PARADES

FRENCH SHOOT 6 VICHY TRAITORS

Crowd Stands in Rain to See Execution.

'Parade of Traitors'

AMIENS, France, Sept. 1 [Delayed]—(AP).—This city on the Somme was overcome with joy tonight but mingled with the exultation was a smoldering fury against collaborationists. All afternoon young Maquis searched houses and brought out shrieking girls and sullen women, who struggled, screamed imprecations, and sometimes cried hysterically. They were hoisted into trucks and carted off to the city hall to await judgment. Men suspects also were seized. Thousands jammed the city's main street to see the "parade of traitors."

GRENOBLE, France, Sept. 2 (AP).—Six young Vichy French were executed for treason today after the first purge trial in the liberated area of south France. Thousands of Grenoble citizens stood in a cold rain to watch the executions.

The six members of Joseph Darnand's militia, ranged in age from 17 to 22 and were among 10 who faced courts-martial in Grenoble's medieval palais of justice only a few hours earlier. Two were sentenced to life and two to five year terms in prison.

Despite the downpour, a frenzy gripped the throng as the condemned were taken from police cars to a lot beside a factory where less than two months ago the Gestapo executed 22 Maquis [patriots].

Shots Drive Back Crowd.

Shouts and shrieks filled the air as each was led to an iron stake in front of a stone wall. Several spectators broke from the police cordon and spat in the faces of the condemned. Guards fired shots in the air to drive the crowd back.

The youths stood stolidly as they were bound to the stakes. As each was bound an officer inquired whether he had anything to say. All replied in the negative and disdained blindfolds.

The officer quickly stepped aside and a firing squad of 20 Maquis leveled their rifles.

The shots barked out above the shrieks of the crowd.

One Survives Volley.

Five bodies slumped to the ground but a 20 year old still stood, staring ahead, his lips moving inaudibly. An officer advanced with a revolver for the coup de grace and murmured something to him. Then, with all eyes fixed on his head, the youth died.

Soldiers untied the bodies and placed them in coffins which were put into hearses.

Then the citizens, whose anger and vengeance had been piling up for four years, streamed homeward chattering excitedly.

Red Mata Hari Drama Bared in Jailing of U. S. Diplomat

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2.—The state department today made public a report on the war's most publicized and mysterious espionage case, the arrest and imprisonment in 1940 of Tyler Kent, 22 year old clerk in the American embassy in London.

Tyler Kent.

The 2,000 word report unfolds a dramatic story, rivaling spy fiction, of the youthful diplomat and a beautiful Russian Mata Hari with such lurid details as 1,500 confidential documents, duplicate keys to the embassy code room, spies, and Scotland Yard agents against the background of London at war.

[Mata Hari, an actress, was accused of being a spy for the Germans in the first World war and executed by the French in 1917.]

The setting of the story is the stately American embassy in fashionable Grosvenor square, a secret trial in a historic London court and grim Brixton prison on the Ile of Wight.

Documents Given to Germans.

The report charges Kent turned over to the Germans, while America was not at war, documents which "might have been useful to the enemy and which were, at the same time, prejudicial to the safety or interests of Great Britain." It adds that he also violated the British larceny act by stealing the documents.

The report, which the state department labeled as comprehensive, contains no mention of charges aired in the British house of commons and in the United States senate that Kent was imprisoned because, as code clerk, he got possession of messages exchanged by President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill, before the latter became prime minister. The messages reputedly contained some such phrase as "together we can rule the world."

Ramsey Case Not Mentioned.

There also was no mention of the imprisonment of Capt. A. H. M. Ramsey, a member of parliament, who was arrested at the same time as Kent. It was charged last June by an Independent Laborite member in commons that Ramsey was jailed because he might make a sensational disclosure of pre-war negotiations between Mr. Roosevelt and Churchill.

The state department report contained a lengthy defense of the surrender of young Kent to British authorities for trial when diplomatic immunity might have been claimed for him. The report said the question of American procedure against Kent will be decided when he is released from the British prison and again comes under the jurisdiction of American courts.

Kent, whose Virginia forebears fought in every American war, entered the foreign service as a clerk from Washington, where his mother, Mrs. Anne H. P. Kent, has been conducting a four year fight for his release.

Studied Abroad.

Kent attended Princeton and George Washington universities and studied at the Sorbonne in Paris, and the University of Madrid. He spoke French, Russian, German, and Italian.

His first assignment was to the American embassy at Moscow. He was transferred to the London embassy in the fall of 1939 as code clerk.

In May, 1940, according to the report, a member of Scotland Yard called at the embassy to report Kent had become an object of attention thru association with a number of persons suspected of conducting pro-German activities under the cloak of anti-Jewish propaganda. In turning over American documents to the Germans, the report charges Kent

HELSINKI ACTS TO MAKE PEACE WITH RUSSIA

Armistice Terms Now 'Better.'

LONDON, Sept. 3 [Sunday]—(AP).—Finland is getting out of the war and the Germans have agreed to withdraw from the country, Premier Hantti Hackzell announced last night.

"We do not know what terms the soviets will impose, but they have not demanded unconditional surrender," he said in disclosing that Russia already has been asked to grant an armistice.

Later a Helsinki dispatch passed by the Finnish censorship to Stockholm said "Finland broke completely with Nazi Germany tonight as the first step toward withdrawal from the disastrous war with Russia, amid indications that seven or so German divisions would quit northern Finland immediately."

Nazis Given 14 Days.

Premier Hackzell said that because Finland had a chance to get out of the war without unconditional surrender she had accepted Russian terms and informed Germany that the latter must withdraw her troops within 14 days.

Hackzell described the conditions as "better than those presented before because they would not mean unconditional surrender and gave an opportunity which could not be passed."

[Finland rejected Russian peace terms last April as too stern. President Risto Ryti and his government resigned in August. Carl Gustav Mannerheim became president and named Hackzell premier.]

Tells of Red Negotiations.

Finland, Hackzell said, established contact with Russia on Aug. 25 in Stockholm and on Aug. 29 obtained the Russian conditions for receiving a Finnish armistice delegation at Moscow.

Terms were submitted "in the name of Britain and the soviet with the approval of the United States," Hackzell said.

In addition to withdrawal of the Germans, the Russian demanded a diplomatic break with Berlin.

The Finnish parliament, which met twice today in secret session to approve the government's proposals, "decided to appeal to Germany to do this [evacuate] and hopes Germany will accept the conditions because it will really be an advantage to itself," Hackzell continued.

He expressed the hope Finland and Germany "would continue on a footing of ancient brothers in arms."

Nazi Pact Illegal.

Developments in the Baltics and in Finland itself when the Russians drove to Viipuri he called "impelling reasons" for making peace. Former President Ryti's signature pact with Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, he declared illegal because it did not have parliament's approval.

Germany was so informed, he continued, adding that "Germany has not given the help it promised [under the Ryti pact] and the troops which arrived already are in the process of being withdrawn."

Hackzell expressed a hope Russia would believe "our people are filled with an honest will for peace."

He said "the military situation has become worse for Germany. Many German forces no longer believe in victory."

BARES WARNING TO PRESIDENT ON BRITISH WAR AID

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 [Special].—New fire was added to the Phillips incident today with release by Sen. Chandler [D., Ky.] of documents purporting to show that William Phillips, recalled United States ambassador to India, warned President Roosevelt in May, 1943, that the United States will have the "prime responsibility in the conduct of the war against Japan."

"There is no evidence the British intend to do more than give token assistance," the diplomat informed the President, according to what Chandler said was a copy of a letter Phillips wrote May 14, 1943.

This letter and a portion of what Chandler said was an official British telegram from New Delhi, India, to London were made public by the Kentucky senator in support of charges in congress this week that recall of Phillips has been maneuvered by the British because of his views on India independence.

Answers Halifax Denial.

Chandler said he was giving out the documents in answer to denials by British Ambassador Halifax that the British government had requested Phillips' withdrawal or made representations against him.

The telegram asserted the British Indian government could not regard Phillips other than persona non grata and that "we could not again receive him" because of the "views he had stated."

The letter, ostensibly following up an oral report by Phillips to the President, stressed the importance of political peace in India at a time when United States forces are using that country as a base for operations against the Japs.

Adviser to Eisenhower.

The state department recently announced that Ambassador Phillips is returning to this country for personal reasons. Since leaving India more than a year ago, Phillips altho retaining his rank, has been serving in London as political adviser to Gen. Eisenhower.

Charges that the British were instrumental in the recall of Phillips were made in the senate by Chandler Monday. In the house Wednesday Rep. Calvin Johnson [R., Ill.] demanded that the United States retaliate by declaring a British and an Indian minister in Washington persona non grata.

Halifax deplored that statements concerning the affair had been "made in responsible quarters without steps being made to verify the facts." Halifax said regarding one of the statements: "I hope it will not be repeated."

Message Sent From India.

Chandler said the telegram was sent by Olaf Caroe of the department of external affairs of the Indian viceregal government to the secretary of state for Indian affairs in London. One paragraph was deleted by Chandler. The remainder read:

"We feel strongly that the British embassy should be supported in carrying this matter further with the state department. We have stopped this particular message from coming into the country [India] and are doing our best to prevent entry of newspapers or letters carrying text of Pearson article. ## HITLER TO BROADCAST 'SENSATIONAL' TALK TODAY, LISBON HEARS

LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP).—Adolf Hitler will make "a sensational" speech tomorrow, German diplomats in Lisbon announced today. There was no immediate amplification of the diplomats' statement nor any indication of what decision Hitler might broadcast to the people in this darkest period of German fortunes in five years of war. In some quarters here it was believed that Hitler would announce the crossing of the German frontier by Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's tanks and summon the Germans to battle on their "holy soil."

TWO 1ST ARMY COLUMNS DASH ACROSS BORDER

Hint Yanks Also at German Frontier.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

2—Northern France 410 miles [from Sedan].

3—Southern France 595 miles [from Voiron].

4—Italian front 590 miles [from Pesaro].

BY E. R. NODERER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 3 [Sunday].—Two swiftly moving columns of the American 1st army today were smashing deeper into Belgium after infantry and armored units under the command of Gen. Courtney H. Hodges crossed the border in twin drives yesterday.

Tournai, five miles inside the Belgian frontier, was captured by one column moving up in the west. This town is 43 miles from Brussels. Another spearhead crossed the border at 11 a. m. from Hirson, and the St. Michel forest in the southeast.

[Radio Atlantic, clandestine transmitter, reported yesterday that American tanks had crossed into Germany and Luxemburg as well as Belgium. The advance into Belgium, it said, reached Namur and Charleroi in the east.]

Smash Fleeing Nazis.

Just before crossing the frontier the Americans in the west captured Maubeuge on the French side of the frontier.

Swiftly moving units of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's 3d army were reported moving east toward the Thionville-Trier, the Metz-Saarbrucken, and the Nancy-Strasbourg area. These three drives may already have resulted in some Americans reaching the German frontier.

CHEERS GREET YANKS

BY DON WHITEHEAD.

SELOIGNES, Belgium, Sept. 2 (AP).—Laughing, cheering, and weeping natives decked American tanks, trucks, and jeeps with garlands of flowers today as Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' 1st army drove into Belgium.

The Germans withdrew last night and this morning and our troops met only scattered resistance in the push north.

I crossed the border with Harry Harris and Pete Carroll, Associated Press photographers, at noon, and our jeep looked like a rolling flower garden after the first few miles.

Crowds Laugh and Cheer.

At a crossroads hamlet, the doughboys were congregated on a side road with the natives crowded about them laughing and cheering and giving the boys flowers, eggs, cognac, and wine.

"This is the greatest welcome I have received since I came across" laughed Corp. Robert Rinehart, Bradford, Pa., with a garland of flowers dangling from his helmet.

"There is not much doubt these people are glad to see us," said Sgt. John Marston, Boston, Mass.

The last of the Germans had pulled out just two hours before these Yanks drove up the road. Then the Belgians broke out their hidden flags of black, gold and red along with homemade American emblems and flags of France and Britain.

The first column in our sector entered Belgium under the command of Lt. Col. Charles T. Fort, Winston-Salem, N. C., and was directed by Maj. Gail Brown, Sheridan, Wyo.

Shower Flowers on Illinoisan.

In Seloignes, Maj. Albert Bruchac, Elmhurst, N. Y.; Maj. Keene Wilson, Selma, Ala., and Pvt. Joseph H. Moore, Niantic, Ill., were smothered with flowers before they drove forward on a reconnaissance mission to try to make contact with the retreating enemy.

None of the villages bore many scars of war. The Germans were too hurried to do any damage except in a few places.

In two French villages just below the Belgian border, however, retreating SS [Elite Guard] troops machine gunned some civilians and set fire to houses.

Leave Bodies in Street.

"The French people put out their flags in celebration of the arrival of the Americans too soon," one officer said. "When the last column of Germans came thru town they were furious. They burned many houses and machine gunned some of the townspeople, leaving their bodies lying in the street."

American armor now threatens the German forces massed in the Pas de Calais region, about 100 miles to the northwest.

One American corps headquarters jumped ahead 80 miles yesterday in a move to keep pace with the swift advance of the division.

"I am tired of traveling so much," said Pvt. Raymond Noel, 506 N. Randolph st., Champaign, Ill.

Long Columns Roll In.

Driving toward the border we passed long columns of tanks, and trucks rolling thru the rich green countryside with no sound of battle ahead. A chill wind swept the fields as a reminder that winter was not far distant.

The road wound thru dark wet groups of trees in the forest of Michele and it was like taking a pleasure drive at home in that quiet, untouched woodland. The birds sang in the thick foliage.

At one town a celebration was under way. All the villagers turned out to give the doughboys a welcome and the troops were showing the natives their vehicles, guns, and equipment.

WAR NEARS GERMANY

SUPREME HDQ. ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sept. 2 (AP).—The war thundered nearer Germany today. Already the din of battle may be echoing in the Saar, for the Germans said strong American forces had knifed thru Nazi annexed Lorraine to within 11 miles of the border.

[A report from Sweden said all German civilians were being evacuated from districts west of the Rhine, and a German transocean agency reporter said numerous villages "within range of the Maginot line" were being emptied of civilians. Swedish railways announced that Berlin had advised that the Belgian frontier had been closed to all transit goods.]

Pilots raking the enemy line of retreat reported that the 15th German army was abandoning the robot bomb row along the channel coast all the way to Pas-de-Calais and beyond as British patrols popped up in the village of Pernes, 38 miles south of Dunkerque.

Indicate Resistance Grows.

Dispatches from Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's 3d army, driving on the Siegfried line to the east of Verdun, said American patrols were up to the Moselle river and a bag of 1,200 prisoners indicated resistance was rising.

The Germans declared that these forces had lunged to the area of Thionville, on the Moselle, just 11 miles short of the reich border and well into Lorraine.

The same German broadcast said one armored column of this force had reached Longwy, two miles south of the border of the tiny duchy of Luxembourg.

Thionville is 17 miles north of Metz, well thru the old Maginot line, and within 20 miles of the outposts of the enemy's Siegfried line.

On the southeastern end of the front, the 3d army was driving for the old Lorraine capital of Nancy from St. Mihiel, 32 miles to the northwest, and the Germans were reported fleeing the city.

Advance on 30 Mile Front.

The British 2d army on the west was racing for the Belgian frontier in the hope of heading off the Germans.

They drove 15 miles northeast of Arras to Douai, 14 miles from Belgium and 65 miles from Brussels.

Racing thru Flanders, they seized Vimy ridge, north of Arras, where the Canadians won their great victory in 1917. Patrols reached Lens, 18 miles below the railway city of Lille and Armentieres, and Pernes, 38 miles south of Dunkerque and 40 miles southeast of Calais.

Behind these lines the Canadians were mopping up along the channel and fighting into the outskirts of the Atlantic port of Le Havre.

Knifing north along the coast from Dieppe, British elements of the Canadian army entered St. Valery, 11 miles northwest of Abbeville, and found the town deserted. Branching out, they seized three bridges over the Somme between the coast and Abbeville, sealing off any forces which may remain to the south.

In the center north of Paris, the Americans crushed relatively strong forces in the forest of Compiegne.

The German radio said Americans moving in to wipe out the 15,000 to 20,000 Germans holding out in the Breton port of Brest had broken into the western sector of the city.

GERMAN ROBOT BOMBS LAND IN SEINE SECTOR

PARIS, Sept. 2 (AP).—Some German flying bombs landed in the Seine basin area last night, causing damage and casualties.

[This apparently is the first serious attempt by the Germans to use against troops the bombs they have employed against London since mid-June.]

Allied Columns Strike Into Belgium—Yanks Drive Up Rhone Valley

AMERICANS NEAR LYON IN 16 MILE DASH UP RHONE

Win Vienne; French Gain on West Bank.

ROME, Sept. 2 (AP).—American 7th army troops drove on Lyon tonight after capturing the Rhone valley town of Vienne, 14 miles to the south, in a 16 mile dash.

Earlier Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's forces had thrust quickly thru the village of Beaurepaire, 30 miles south of Lyon.

The official announcement of the latest gains declared "action has been linked largely to enemy defense of road blocks and patrol clashes."

French Gain in West.

Nowhere in southern France was any German unit still attempting a determined stand, and even the rearguards were losing heart as the threat of being cut off from escape to the reich grew steadily with the advance of other American forces toward the German and Swiss frontiers.

On the west side of the Rhone river French columns continued mopping up operations and passed Montfaucon and Tournon, both more than 40 miles below Lyon.

Earlier observation had shown that the enemy was digging some defensive positions around Lyon. Swiftness of the American advance, however, might cause the Germans to relinquish Lyon without a real fight.

During the day it was announced that prisoners taken by the 7th army now exceeded 55,000, and that in their eastern fanning out maneuver along the Mediterranean they had occupied Contes, eight miles northeast of Nice.

Movement of the Americans in the area north of Grenoble, from which they could by-pass Lyon and get astride the German northward escape routes, remained officially vague.

Report Yanks 20 Miles into Italy.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CHIASSO, Switzerland, Sept. 2.—Allied troops rushing from Nice in southern France have crossed the Italian border, advanced 20 miles into Italy territory, occupied Ventimilia, Bordighere, and San Remo, and still are pushing eastward, according to information reaching here from both France and Italy.

Farther north the Germans are said to be attempting to wrest the Mount Genevre pass from Partisan forces. In anticipation of the arrival of American troops, on this second front in Italy, the whole Piedmont area is said to be in a state of extreme tension, especially Turin and its environs.

GERMAN PLANES BLAST VERDUN IN REVENGE RAID

Fortress City Fired; U. S. Writer Is Hit.

VERDUN, France, Sept. 2 (AP).—Waves of vengeful German heavy bombers, dive bombers, and fighters blasted and strafed Verdun for an hour last night, setting parts of the old fortress city aflame.

It was the first heavy pounding of modern warfare for the historic bastion which had gone thru this war with hardly a scar.

There were American casualties, including one war correspondent who was hit in the arm with a steel fragment.

[Military regulations did not permit the immediate identification of the wounded correspondent.]

Yanks Defend City.

American gunners threw up a barrage which looked and sounded like a small scale edition of London's defenses.

The Germans demolished a number of business establishments and hotels, but did not damage any historic monuments.

The bombs were scattered aimlessly. Streets were strafed by planes coming in at rooftop level.

Group at Famous Hotel.

The wounded correspondent was among a group which had gone to a hotel once favored by American tourists. He owes his life to J. A. Bockhorst, New York pool newsreel camera man who found him, applied a tourniquet and carried him from the wrecked hotel to a temporary aid station.

Besides Bockhorst other American correspondents included Edward D. Ball, Associated Press; Joseph Driscoll, New York Herald Tribune; Ed Currivan, New York Times; Pierre Huss, I. N. S., and Ralph Morse, Time and Life photographer, all of whom were uninjured.

Chicagoan Heads Hospital.

Wounded were treated at a field hospital some miles away commanded by Lt. Col. Howard H. Bass, Graemere hotel, Chicago, Ill. His staff, headed by Maj. Harry D. Nesmith, Salem, Ill., worked thru the night.

A wounded German airman who was shot down came in shaking from shock, took his place in line and was treated when his turn came. Obviously surprised at the way Americans do things the beetle-browed young Nazi was taken away composed and smiling.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—A new war time holiday record was set today at Paddington railroad station when, within 30 minutes, four trains estimated to be carrying more than 5,000 persons, left for resorts on west England coasts.

VERDUN BURIAL WILL BE DENIED PETAIN, SAYS VET

VERDUN, France, Sept. 1 [Delayed]—(AP).—An old sergeant who was a French courier in the last World war said today that Marshal Henri Philippe Petain would be denied burial here among the 300,000 who died under his command. The sergeant said the action was taken by the "Ancient Combatants," a veterans' organization, over a year ago. The organization decided the magnificent crypt built here for the famed defender of Verdun would remain empty forever, he said, adding: "The decision was irrevocable. His conduct with Hitler settled that."

Tens of thousands of the fallen heroes of Verdun lie buried in the cemeteries on the slopes about Fort Douaumont, while others lie in the shell craters of the tortured earth or in the "Hall of Dead" memorial which stands amid the shattered battlements of the fort.

The sergeant said Hitler visited Verdun two years ago, and ordered some tablets destroyed when he became enraged at their references to the Germans. But the occupation forces were so busy dealing with the balky French they never carried out the order.

YANKS WIN PISA AS BRITISH POUR THRU GOTHIC LINE

ROME, Italy, Sept. 2 (AP).—The American 5th army lashed out in a new offensive today, burst across the Arno river on a wide front, seized Pisa and stormed dominating heights on the east in concert with a drive by the British 8th army thru a 20 mile hole in the Gothic line.

The Gothic line, which Marshal Albert Kesselring had ordered held for three more weeks to hold open a route of escape thru the Brenner pass, appeared crumbling on both the east and west.

Taking advantage of German preoccupation with the smash of the British, Canadians, and Poles at the Adriatic end of the line, the Americans first launched a flanking movement across the Arno.

Threatened with encirclement, the Germans hastily evacuated Pisa, famed for its leaning tower. The announcement of Pisa's fall said Americans had driven four miles beyond to the Serchio river.

While the German left wing crumpled before British blows, the 5th hurdled the Arno at many points along the 45 miles from Florence westward to the sea.

Negroes Storm Mountain.

Negro troops of the 92d United States division, making their first appearance in the battle line, stormed up the southeast slopes of Monte Pisano.

Simultaneously, American born Japanese in another 5th army column swung across the river and occupied the southwestern slopes. The Pisano mass lies east and north of Pisa.

Other forces reached for the high ground north of Florence to link up with the British.

The 8th was performing with the dash it displayed in the days when it was chasing the Germans out of North Africa. Again there was the intricate maneuver of shifting the striking force from one front to another where it was not expected.

Battle on for Week.

The battle began on Aug. 26, a week ago, after the bulk of the 8th was transferred secretly over the Apennines to the Adriatic coast.

The British struck from Pesaro, on the Adriatic, to 20 miles inland so unexpectedly that the Germans were caught in the act of relieving one division and unpacking mines.

The 8th—British, Canadians, Indians, and Poles—ripped and tore thru the stoutest defenses. The line broke Thursday, and yesterday the army was from three to four miles deep into the belt of fortifications and still hammering the Germans back.

The Poles, who had been locked with the Germans in street fighting in Pesaro, were pressing ahead despite tank opposition.

Ten miles southwest of Pesaro British infantry forged across the Foglia river and engaged in a desperate struggle with enemy infantry and tanks south of Gridolfo and in the area of captured Montecchio.

To the west there also was heavy fighting for Calvo and in the mountains east of the upper Tiber river valley.

Prime Minister Churchill watched the first day's battle.

GERMAN WAR REPORT.

Berlin's broadcast army bulletin said yesterday:

"The vigor of the enemy large scale attack in the Adriatic coast section increased yesterday. In heavy fighting, inflicting great losses on the enemy, our divisions repelled all attacks apart from one local penetration which was sealed off, thus again scoring complete defensive success.

NAZIS CANCEL MORE LONG RUN EXPRESS TRAINS

BY WILLIAM STRAND.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The rapid advances of allied forces have resulted in the imposition of a drastic travel ban inside the reich, according to the German radio today. It was announced 60 or more long distance express trains are to be withdrawn from their regular runs Monday.

The measure follows the cancellation of leaves for the armed forces, the Nazi spokesman said. Following are canceled express schedules beside East Prussia: Berlin-Silesia, Berlin-Hamburg, Berlin-Munich, Berlin-Rhine area, Rhine area-Hamburg, central Germany-Vienna, Munich-Tyrol.

Meanwhile all German writers, musicians, painters, and actors have been ordered to report to local labor exchanges for war work by Sept. 15. According to a decree by the German man power controler, quoted by the German raido, the reich is being told that "now that cultural life has been suspended, all persons belonging to these categories become available to the total war effort."

BALLOONS GUARD AIR AT ANZIO; STORY IS TOLD AT 'SKY' SHOW

How barrage balloons were used to strike at enemy aircraft over the Anzio beachhead in Italy was related to visitors at the army air force's "Shot from the Sky" show in Grant park yesterday by Capt. Robert Marconi, 26, of 10034 Wentworth av., whose balloon downed four Stukas [dive bombers] at Anzio.

Dynamite bombs were attached to the balloon's dangling cables, he said, and a release mechanism was devised to cut off any section of cable hit by a plane. A parachute carried in a can steadied the section of cable in contact with the enemy plane.

The show, set up on the Congress st. plaza, will run thru Tuesday night, with afternoon and evening musical programs, as well as stage entertainment at night. The 346th army service forces' band will play at 3:30 and 7:30 p. m. today.

FRENCH RESORT UNWILLING HOST TO WOUNDED FOE

Nazis in Best Hotel at Aix-les-Bains.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AIX-LES-BAINS, France, Sept. 2.—Aix-les-Bains has been host to many people of many nations in the four centuries during which it has been a fashionable watering place but never have such guests been forced upon it as it has at present. Its largest hotel, the Bernascon, where Queen Victoria, Stanley Baldwin, and J. Pierpont Morgan, among other notables, have stayed, now is a convalescent hospital for 1,300 enemy wounded.

Normally lovely, tree shaded Aix should be at the height of its season now. But that has been forgotten since France fell in 1940. Instead Aix has bitter memories of German soldiers who burned two other of its famous hotels, the Mirabeau and the International Palace, and executed 17 of its citizens, including three physicians, all of whom had participated in the resistance movement.

Nazi Cadets Trample Lawns.

After the country collapsed four years ago 500 Alsatian refugees came to Aix. Then, in 1942, the Germans were housed in the town for officers' school and the young Nazi cadets trampled over the matchless lawns.

Last year the enemy started sending his wounded from all fronts to the spa and there are some there now from the Normandy and Brittany. The Germans had employed many buildings for rest centers but early in August they moved all their cases into the Bernascon.

The resistance movement always has been strong in this area and on Aug. 21 the Maquis surrounded the town. Five hundred well armed German garrison troops prepared to shoot it out but the chief Nazi medical officer, Col. Keisel, dissuaded them because of his wounded charges. So an armistice agreement was reached. The German soldiers agreed to leave the town but left the hospital cases behind along with Keisel and his staff of 47 Nazi medical officers and 132 nurses.

Two Hotels Destroyed.

Before the enemy departed the Mirabeau and the International Palace hotels were destroyed. The Germans declared the burning of the buildings was accidental but the Maquis assert it was done to destroy supplies and ammunition stored there.

Natives today escorted us to the Church of Notre Dame off the Boulevard Descotes and showed us a place at the rear where they said 14 patriots had been shot by the enemy before their withdrawal. The three physicians reportedly were taken to near-by Chambery as hostages and shot there. The bodies were found a few days ago.

In the Bernascon's big sunrooms the convalescents, including Germans, Poles forced to fight with them, and three Russian, prisoners impressed into labor details, rested on rows of cots today. The spacious salons have been converted into spotless operating rooms. A French doctor who is supervisor of the hospital administration said there had been no demonstrations against the Nazis since the Maquis won the town.

NAZI 'PICKABACK' BOMBS HURLED AGAINST BRITAIN

BY E. R. NODERER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Two "pick-a-back" or composite planes were sent against this country by the Germans last night for the first time, the air ministry announced today. It reported that, altho the explosion of one which landed in open country was terrific, they caused only slight damage and no casualties.

The new pick-a-back bomb is described as consisting of a fighter with an obsolete JU-88, filled with explosives, slung beneath it. The fighter and the Junkers take off with both planes' engines running. At the appropriate moment the fighter pilot releases the Junkers, which glides or flies under its own power until it crashes like a regular bomb.

Heavy Load of Explosives.

The Junkers reportedly carries a heavy weight of explosives in its nose. Estimates vary from 4,000 to 8,000 pounds.

In its original role as a bomber, the JU-88 could carry approximately four tons of bombs and had a cruising range of more than 1,000 miles, but now, as a bomb, inferior engines may have been installed. If highly developed aero engines are used, the latest method of bombing Britain would be extremely expensive, it was said.

It may be that when released the Junker is radio controled by the fighter pilot, but to obtain any degree of accuracy he would have to be able to see his target.

Heavier Than Robots.

While the weight of explosives carried by the new bomb may be considerably greater than the ton in V-1, the German robot bomb, it is doubted that so many of these new bombs could be launched. Moreover, the composite aircraft would be vulnerable to allied fighters, particularly in view of its slowness.

Altho little is known yet about the pickabacks' performance, experts say they may be able to operate from long ranges—even from Germany proper.

Some commentators point out that the new weapon had made its appearance precisely when allied advances had raised hopes that the flying bombs menace was ended.

With the robot bomb launching coast being rapidly overrun by allied armies in France, the robot attack on London ceased for many hours.

No robot bombs fell in Britain today and the last one reported was a solitary missile which fell in a country district of southern England Friday afternoon.

FLORENTINES GO ABOUT BUSINESS DESPITE BATTLE

Opposing Lines Run Right Thru Italian City.

BY CLAY GOWRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH ALLIED FORCES ON OUTSKIRTS OF FLORENCE, Italy, Sept. 2.—A strange kind of war is being fought in and around this ancient Italian walled city. The residents of Florence go unconcernedly about their daily business while two strong armies—the allies in the south and center of the town and the Germans less than a mile away in the northern residential districts—struggle for final possession of the city.

I spent yesterday within the walls of the city, shopping for souvenirs and visiting historical landmarks, while all the time shells from allied and German heavy artillery whined overhead. Often the Germans' shells crashed into buildings along the Arno river, which winds thru the center of the city, but the Florentines paid no more attention than if the shells had been mosquitoes.

Like a Sunday Auto Ride.

Traveling in a jeep to the southern outskirts of the city was no more eventful than a Sunday automobile ride thru the Chicago suburbs except that the roads were bumpier. It was not until we reached one of the bridges thrown across the Arno by allied engineers that any danger became evident. Buildings on both sides had been smashed by German shells seeking the bridge and a British military policeman perched on the rubble beside the road waved a warning hand as we passed.

"Wait until the truck ahead is almost over the bridge, then make a run for it," he shouted. "They're throwing them in here pretty often." We waited, made our run and arrived safely in the center of the city on the north side of the river.

People Are Unconcerned.

It was an amazing sight. The wine shops were open and the residents of Florence were gathered at their sidewalk tables drinking wine and commenting sagely upon the passing shells. The shops were doing a brisk business with the few allied troops in the city. The streets were filled with men, women and children, all totally uninterested in the thunder of war on all sides.

We drove first to an almost untouched building in which headquarters for the local allied military government are established. There a trimly clad British major, complete with a monocle, showed us on a map where our line extended thru the city.

"You want to be careful driving around," he cautioned with a smile. "The way you fellows speed you may take the wrong turn and find yourself asking directions from a German military policeman. Just watch for our signs. We have warnings put up."

Race to Cathedral.

As the guns thundered from the heights to the north and south of the river we raced thru crowded streets to the Piazza del Duomo, the site of the more than 600 year old cathedral of Santa Maria del Fiore.

Following our visit to the cathedral, Simone Sacerdoti, a middle aged Jew who is the caretaker of the Florence synagogue, took us on a tour of the building to show the vandalism wrought by the Italian Fascists as the Germans withdrew from this section of the city.

Using dynamite and nitroglycerine, the Fascists destroyed the priceless old mosaics, blew up the balconies and totally obliterated the altars. Sacerdoti's 10 year old daughter ran up carrying a stick of dynamite she had found in the wreckage and wanted to show the "Americano correspondente." Sacerdoti said that the Germans deported more than 500 Florentine Jews to Germany. He and many others evaded arrest with forged credentials obtained from Roman Catholic priests.

Flee Thru Sewers.

From Sacerdoti and others I obtained the story of how, at the height of the street fighting in the center of Florence, hundreds escaped from the German to the allied section of the city by crawling, wading, and swimming three miles thru sewers. Many were suffocated en route and their bodies still have not been recovered.

As we left the synagogue we could hear the rattle of rifles and machine guns three-quarters of a mile away where Italian Fascists and Partisans were fighting in the streets. This battle has been going on since the first allied troops appeared near Florence more than a month ago, but nobody pays any attention to it.

Nazis Half Mile Away.

Leaving Florence we stopped at an artillery observation post high on the crest of the hills overlooking Florence. Two lieutenants had been keeping watch there in an abandoned and partly wrecked house for 10 days, spotting German artillery batteries and directing fire onto them.

When I asked where the nearest Germans were he took me to a window. "See that little strip of woods?" he said, pointing to a spot a half mile away. "Well, they're in there. We don't know how many, but every night they send patrols past us here.

"But don't worry about it," he said, grinning. "Now, how about a cup of coffee?"

American Soldiers Parade in Paris Liberation Celebration

Champs Elysees echoes to marching feet of thousands of Americans during liberation celebration in French capital. In background is Arc de Triomphe.

PARIS REVIVING, BUT SHORTAGES CRAMP ITS STYLE

PARIS, Sept. 2 (AP).—Reviving Paris, altho still partly paralyzed by war, hailed in irony the anniversary of the German invasion of Poland and received reports of the latest allied battle gains with the feeling that the battle of France is nearly over.

The capital, altho vibrant with liberation activity, still has only a shell of its peace time grandeur. It is still under crisis conditions in three big essentials: food, heating, and transportation.

There is no hot water in the city. The crux of the problem is coal, which comes principally from war ridden northeastern France and on which the city depends for electricity and gas.

Restaurants Closed.

Emergency supplies of food continued to pour in thru the facilities of the allied armies, and there are no reports of any one starving, but the shortage has caused many problems.

Most restaurants still are closed except for a few black market places charging $10 to $15 for a meal.

Angry rumors are circulated that the bulk of the emergency food supplies are being grabbed on arrival by members of the French Forces of the Interior, the most powerful group at the moment, to the detriment of a large portion of the population which is not in the F. F. I.

There are also reports, undoubtedly true to some extent, that in the confusion of straightening out the ration system after liberation, some individuals managed to get four or five cards.

Military Eats in Messes.

To ease the shortage, allied military personnel are forbidden to eat in public restaurants. They are being served in messes improvised in a number of luxurious hotels where, incongruously, French waiters are serving up mundane Spam, corned beef, and the dehydrated products of the army's C-rations repertoire.

Most "spots," like the Cafe de la Paix, with sidewalk cafes are flourishing, serving a limited list of drinks—beer, white wine, champagne and French aperitifs, and the sidewalk tables are dotted with the khaki of everybody from privates to generals.

The fuel shortage continues to cripple the subway and bus lines—it is estimated they may be running in a fortnight—and traffic continues to be a great swarm of bicycles. There are a few bicycle taxis, with little covered trailers hitched on behind the rider. They charge a dollar per mile, and more.

YUGOSLAV ARMY TAKES BELGRADE, SAYS BROADCAST

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—A British radio French language broadcast reported by the OWI said tonight that Marshal Tito's Partisan troops had entered Belgrade, the capital of Yugoslavia.

Claim Seizure of Rail Town.

LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP).—A broadcast war bulletin from Marshal Tito's Yugoslav headquarters said today Partisan troops have captured Dubci, northwest of Uzice on the Sarajevo-Nis railway, and Berane and Savnik in Montenegro. The Morocco radio said Tito's troops were fighting in the suburbs of Belgrade, but the report lacked confirmation elsewhere. Tito's bulletin accused the Chetniks of starting a new wave of terror killings in the Belgrade area.

'NONTRAITOROUS' POLES PROMISED RETURN OF LAND

MOSCOW, Sept. 2 (AP).—Andre Vitos, vice president of the Polish Committee of Liberation, was quoted by the Soviet press today as declaring in Lublin that if big estate owners come back to Poland their estates will be returned to them, providing they were not traitors.

The first manifesto of the committee had declared that large Polish estates above 125 to 250 acres, would be divided up, depending on their location.

Vitos' declaration that property would be handed over to the owners was taken as probably meaning house furnishings and a portion of the estate. The report said peasants had taken over protection of property in many places before instructions were received.

PARIS' SUBWAY A PLANE PARTS PLANT FOR NAZIS

BY ROBERT SAGE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Sept. 2.—A section of the Paris subway was closed last June and transformed by the Todt labor organization into a fully equipped underground factory to turn out spare parts for the German air force, it was learned today.

Rails and sleeping cars were removed and the right of way floored with concrete. At the Porte des Lilas station, one of the deepest in the capital, machinery and supplies were lowered into the plant on large elevators normally used by subway passengers.

Power Piped In.

Electric power was diverted and a transformer installed in the Belleville station. Thirteen hundred men and women were taken on and the factory worked at full blast until Aug. 9. Then the workers were discharged "due to circumstances" of the allied invasion.

In the four years since the German air force set up headquarters in the 300 year old palace of Marie de Medici—which since the Third Republic has served as the senate—the Germans converted a portion of the surrounding Luxembourg gardens into a mysterious labyrinth of fortifications and tunnels.

Connect with Catacombs.

Altho the possible presence of mines so far has prevented the exhaustive exploration of these subterranean passages, it is known that they connect not only with the subway system but with the famous maze of catacombs that covers square miles of the left bank of the Seine river.

A reporter of the newspaper, Ce Soir, was admitted into the closed Luxembourg gardens and shown an immense hole in the ground near the fortifications. Below the hole lay the entrance to a series of corridors leading to the subway, sewers, and catacombs. The guards reported hearing the sound of footsteps underground during the night, but all attempts to trace the exact spot in the gardens from which the sounds came ended in failure.

American War Reporter Injured in Jeep Accident

LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP).—John F. Chester, Associated Press war correspondent, and Edward Connolly, a reporter for the British Exchange Telegraph agency, have been injured in a jeep accident while covering the advance of the British army in France. Neither was seriously hurt. Chester, a native of Falls Church, Va., formerly was in the Christian Science Monitor and Associated Press bureaus in Washington, D. C., and once was AP bureau chief at Boston. He went abroad in 1943 on assignments in London, Cairo, and Italy before going to France.

"It is regrettable to have to use censorship in defense of such attacks by our greatest ally.

Representative of F. D. R.

"We understand designation of Phillips is still the President's personal representative to India. Whether or not he was connected in any way with leakage, views he has stated would make it impossible for us to do other than regard him as persona non grata and we could not again receive him. His views are not what we are entitled to expect from a professedly friendly ally. Viceroy has seen this telegram."

The letter from Phillips to President Roosevelt asserted that, assuming India is to be an important base against Burma and Japan, "it would seem to be of the highest importance that we should have around us a sympathetic India rather than an indifferent and possibly hostile India."

Phillips previously had suggested that the British should assure India of independence at a specific date after the war.

AMERICAN C. OF C. AT PARIS GETS BACK TO NORMAL

PARIS, France, Sept. 2 (AP).—The American Chamber of Commerce of Paris, closed since June, 1941, was reopened today under direction of its old president, W. Roy Weeks, formerly of Jackson, Mich.

Weeks, a paint merchant, said the Germans took charge of his business and handled it thru administrators.

About 10 days before the American army arrived in Paris one of the administrators, he said, called and told him to call and get his files. "I have not had a chance to learn what condition the business is in," Weeks said, "but I am confident the Nazis didn't make any money for me."

Weeks was not sent to a concentration camp because he is more than 65.

21 VILLAGERS DIE AS NAZIS AVENGE ATTACK BY F. F. I.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY ON THE BELGIAN FRONTIER, Sept. 2.—Until Wednesday morning the village of Tavaux had been virtually untouched by the war.

Today it is a hamlet of burned homes and ruins. Two children, 11 women, and eight men are dead. They were shot to death, bayoneted, or turned into human pyres with gasoline hurled by young Nazis of the Adolf Hitler 1st SS [elite guards] Panzer division.

For nearly three hours on Wednesday these Nazis ran amok among the 120 homes in Tavaux, which is five miles from Montcornet. Three tanks coursed the streets and blasted houses while soldiers searched almost every home, dragging screaming women in the streets or killing old men as they walked in from the fields.

When the Germans had finished, 86 houses were burning or had otherwise been damaged. Only 30 escaped.

Reprisal for F. F. I. Attack.

The attack by the SS troops was made in reprisal for one of their officers being killed and two soldiers wounded in skirmishes in the village with French Forces of the Interior. In this skirmish one F. F. I. man was killed. But when the German tanks returned the Nazis slaughtered the civilians, not one of whom had borne arms.

In company with officers of a board of inquiry, I have seen Tavaux. I have seen all the dead before they were sealed in their coffins. With the official board I have talked to the survivors.

Making the inquiry were Maj. Lewis Leeney, Iowa City, Ia., corps headquarters commandant; Capt. Robert Rang, Washington, Ind., corps medical officer; two French liaison officers attached to the corps, Maj. Henri Redel and Aspirant George Ragache; Harold Austin, war correspondent for the Sydney Morning Herald, and I. Pictures were taken by two photographers representing the United States photo pool.

Find Houses Still Burning.

As we walked thru the village the ruins of two homes were still burning. Women, their eyes red from weeping, stood beside them. Others, clutching flowers, were going toward two homes where coffins had been assembled.

We went first to the small brick home of Pierre Mangan. He was the district chief of the F. F. I., commanding a force of 1,500 men, 30 of whom came from the village, but he and his men were not in the town when the Nazis attacked it. After the skirmish, they had fled to a wood.

Mangan was beyond tears when we arrived. In a bedroom lay the body of his wife, 30, and the mother of his five children.

Arm Broken, Legs Slashed.

An examination by Capt. Rang showed that her right arm had been broken. Both thighs had been slashed as if by bayonet or knives. She had been shot, too.

"My neighbors told me this," said Mangan. "When the Nazis came some soldiers entered my home where my wife and another woman and our five children were hiding. They broke her arm. They stabbed her legs. They shot her. While some forcing them to watch, they poured gasoline over her and the other woman in the kitchen and set them on fire. My neighbors say my wife was still alive at the time. The Boches shouted they would kill the children, too, and lined them up on the wall outside, but the children cried and the Boches did not kill them."

Four Shot in Street.

We went on to another house. On the grass lay four bodies. A peasant, 74, and his wife, 70, rested together, covered by sacking. They had been shot while walking along the street, said a villager.

A woman of 80 had been shot thru the head. Beside her was a youth of 18.

On past the smoldering ruins of another home we walked down Tavaux's street of sorrow.

Carpenters hammered on coffins outside another house. In the shallow stream bed which passed it stood a horse cart ready to receive the coffins.

In one group apart were two large coffins and two small ones. The smaller ones contained Jocelyn, a girl of 11, and her brother, Roland, 8. Their grandmother, aged 66, rested in a larger coffin.

One Shot in Back.

A man, 55, had been shot down from behind while coming in from work, then bayoneted, the villagers said.

On down the street similar tragic stories were told. The ages of the victims were 8 to 87.

Ragache said the SS officer in charge of the reprisal had dropped a document that apparently was the company roster. The list, he said, may identify the Nazis who put Tavaux to the torch.

ADM. LAND URGES CARGO TONNAGE BE CUT IN HALF

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Vice Adm. Land, chairman of the maritime commission, today recommended a post-war cut of more than half the present American merchant marine tonnage.

In an article in Sea Power, the Navy league magazine, Land said the United States "probably will come out of this war with a cargo fleet of about 50,000,000 deadweight tons."

"We cannot maintain a fleet of this size in peace time," he said, "but I am of the opinion that we can and should operate 15,000,000 to 25,000,000 tons deadweight, taking into account the services that Japanese and German merchantmen provided before this war began and which they will not have when peace comes."

Bullitt, Now Major in French Army, Visits Paris

PARIS, Sept. 2 (AP).—William C. Bullitt, former United States ambassador to France and now a major in the French army, visited Paris yesterday. Bullitt is attached to the headquarters staff of the French Gen. De Lattre de Tassigny and landed recently with French troops in southern France.

RAILWAY MAN ELECTROCUTED.

Raymond Gruenberg, 39, of Michigan City, Ind., employed by the Chicago, South Shore and South Bend Railroad company, was electrocuted yesterday when he touched a live wire as he worked atop a railway car in the Randolph st. yards.

ALLIES WIN 65 NAZI AIR FIELDS IN FRENCH DRIVE

LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP).—The great sweep thru northern France has put more than 65 German air fields in allied hands, the United States strategic air forces announced tonight in reporting on the record breaking aerial assault on the German armies and the reich during the past month.

The captured fields include the great bases in the Paris region as well as Juvincourt, St. Dizier, and Montdidier in the Laon-Amiens-Reims area, which has just fallen to the allies. More than 25 German fields in the Marseille-Toulon area in southern France also have either fallen to the allies or been made untenable to the Germans.

Fly 60,000 Sorties.

In the past month, the United States strategic air forces report showed, more than 60,000 sorties were flown and 75,000 tons of bombs dropped on the Germans, compared with 59,000 sorties and 73,000 tons in July, the previous biggest month.

It gave this recapitulation of the work of fighter planes alone during August:

2,225 locomotives hit; 14,750 railroad cars damaged or destroyed; 1,770 trucks and other vehicles destroyed, 1,280 damaged; 767 oil cars damaged or destroyed; 82 tanks knocked out; 94 ammunition carriers hit; 270 canal barges strafed; 58 bridges attacked.

891 Nazi Planes Destroyed.

The strategic air forces definitely destroyed 572 German planes in the air and 319 on the ground during the month, plus "several hundred more in attacks on nearly 100 air fields," the report said.

[The German high command reported yesterday that Nazi forces shot down 2,186 British and American planes in August.]

During the month British based allied heavy bombers broke all records by dropping 155,775 tons of bombs on the enemy. July, when a total of 137,400 tons were dropped, was the previous high month.

Bomb Every Day of Month.

The bombers, which operated every day of the month, attacked targets all the way from the western tip of France to the Baltic, the Balkans, and the Mediterranean.

The largest force of heavy bombers that ever went out on a joint operation from Britain and Italy, 1,900, hit German synthetic oil plants and other targets on Aug. 24.

Total bomber sorties for the month were more than 34,000.

BOMBERS POUND LINES OF FLEEING ENEMY SHIPPING

LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP).—British planes tonight pounced on an almost continuous stream of German vessels leaving French channel ports.

"The Germans used everything from torpedo boats to large trawlers and merchant vessels converted into flak ships," the announcement said. Four British aircraft were missing.

During the day United States 8th air force fighters shot up German transport in Belgium, the Netherlands, and France, further hampering the German army's retreat, while big R. A. F. bombers attacked German shipping at the Brittany port of Brest.

The admiralty said that in three channel engagements two enemy escort vessels were sunk and other ships damaged.

In one engagement between Boulogne and Calais, Dutch ships sank two escort vessels.

WATCH STOLEN IN WASHROOM.

Hugh Morley, employed in the building at 310 S. Michigan av., complained to police yesterday that his wrist watch had been taken from a wash stand.

NAZIS CAN FIGHT A LIMITED TIME ONLY: COL. LANZA

Ring Closes on Enemy from All Sides.

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA.

[Regular contributor to the Field Artillery Journal and recognized as an authority on military matters.]

From the standpoint of the allies, the military situation on all fronts could hardly be better. In all theaters of operation, there have been great successes. Considering the French, Italian, and Russian fronts together, the ring is closing in on Germany. She may be able to fight on for some time. But barring some event, such as the appearance of a new German secret weapon, which is possible but not probable, it seems reasonably certain that the German armies can resist only for a limited time.

In northern France the Germans are in full retreat and there is no indication where they will make their next stand. At present they are resisting on their right near the coast, and withdrawing on the left, east and northeast from Paris.

Four Armies on Offensive.

German field service regulations call for retreats being made by furious resistance in some places and next to none at others. The idea is to confuse the attackers, and prevent them from discerning what the German plan may be.

At this time the allies have four armies—all on the offensive.

The 1st Canadian army, which contains, besides Canadians, British, Dutch, Belgian, and Polish troops, is attacking from the sea to Rouen, and has been meeting strong resistance. Next in line is the 2d British army which covers the Seine between Rouen and Paris. The British are meeting resistance, but less, apparently, than the Canadians.

On the right of the British is the 1st United States army, covering Paris. This army is encountering less resistance than the British. Farther east is the 3d United States army, which is largely armored and is meeting the least resistance of all.

Fights Weak Rear Guards.

Until Aug. 29, the Germans could not tell whether the 3d army which had reached the vicinity of Troyes would turn north [it did], would go straight ahead, or would move south. Allied bulletins and reports of correspondents say this strong American army is fighting only weak battalion rear guards.

A rear guard of one battalion a road, or three battalions for as many roads, is what German regulations call for in an orderly retreat. When retreats are disorganized, the rear guards are to be scratch organizations of any troops that happen to be around.

It is not certain whether the reports on German battalion rear guards mean regular battalions. If they did it would indicate that the Germans are making a deep retreat in the manner provided by their system. In this case, there may be no organized resistance until the German frontier is approached.

Replacements Assembling?

There are no indications that the German armies in France have received any substantial reenforcements from Germany. It is possible that replacements and new equipment are being assembled in the rear of present lines. The Germans may find it easier to go backward to where supplies are than to bring the supplies forward under the present terrific air bombings.

As they evacuate occupied countries, the Germans automatically release troops who have been on garrison or line of communication duties. These men are available to fill vacancies in the ranks of the field divisions if proper equipment for them is at hand.

If the Germans had plenty of troops, the movement of the 3d United States army northward would be a dangerous maneuver. If its right flank were attacked by an army coming from the direction of Sedan or Metz, it might be in a perilous position. This would be the same kind of maneuver used by Marshal Joseph Joffre in 1914 to win the first battle of the Marne. It is assumed that 3d army leaders have disregarded this risk because they know the Germans haven't the troops to make an attack.

Gain 100 Miles in South.

The invasion of southern France began Aug. 15. A day later Gen. Henry Maitland Wilson announced that the 7th United States army had landed, and was on its way to join Gen. Eisenhower's armies in northern France.

In two weeks the 7th army has advanced slightly more than 100 miles up the Rhone valley. It has about 160 miles more to go to reach the Dijon area and communication with the 3d United States army.

The 7th army has now been transferred from Gen. Wilson's control to that of Gen. Eisenhower. This is as it should be.

The German 1st and 19th armies and their garrison troops are withdrawing from southern France. This movement started about a month ago. There is no definite information as to how the movement is progressing.

RESCUED TWICE BY GIRL GUARD, THEN ARRESTED

A 17 year old girl life guard at Oak Street beach towed John Bulinski, 51, of 1028 N. Sacramento av. to shore twice within a few minutes yesterday. The first time Bulinski jumped into the lake, the girl guard, Corinne Sloan, 1415 Henderson st., brought him out alone. He jumped again, almost at once, Corinne went after him again, with the aid of Joseph Zejac, 1445 W. Huron st. Bulinski was arrested by Park Policeman Ralph Miller and booked to appear in Municipal court Tuesday. Corinne, a senior at Lake View High school, had made six previous rescues this summer.

From a Captured Jap Album

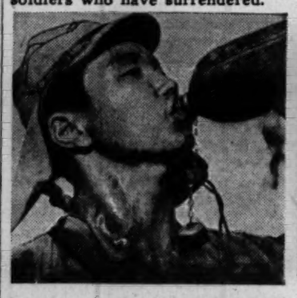
These Philippine Islands scenes are from a Japanese collection captured in the Pacific and sent to America by Arthur Veysey, Tribune war correspondent.

This, says the Japanese caption, shows "the city of Iloilo with columns of black smoke arising to the sky—a sacrifice to the American army's scorched earth tactics."

The Japanese described these as "groups of American-Filipino soldiers who have surrendered."



"Japanese soldier drinks from United States army canteen," reads the Japanese caption.

"Carrying loud speakers to the foremost battle lines" is the Japanese description.

MacARTHUR'S AIR ARM POUNDS JAP PHILIPPINES BASE

38 Planes Destroyed in Big Davao Raid.

In the Graphic section of today's Tribune appears a description of the Bonin Islands, bombed yesterday by American planes.

GENERAL HDQ. SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Sept. 3 [Sunday]—(AP)—The pre-invasion air war on the Philippines flamed into heavy action as a strong force of Liberators wiped out 38 Japanese planes in a 110-ton assault on Davao Friday, while other bombers blasted Palau, defense base near the Philippines, with 137 tons.

Headquarters reported the attacks today.

The Tokyo radio said 40 Liberators dealt the blow at Davao and one was downed, but Gen. MacArthur acknowledged the loss of two there and one at Palau.

The attackers destroyed 26 enemy fighters and 11 bombers on the ground at Davao, capital of Mindanao Island. One interceptor was shot down.

Damage Called Extensive.

"In the first heavy bombing strike on the Philippines since 1942, our heavy units hit enemy airdromes in the Davao area with over 100 tons of fragmentation bombs," the official report said. "Damage at air fields was extensive and large fires were left burning."

The heavy blow, which followed a recent series of night reconnaissance and light bombing raids on Davao, came as Tokyo broadcasts warned that "enemy activity against Davao bears watching.

At Palau, the Jap "Singapore," 600 miles east of the Philippines, large fires were started by bomber attacks Thursday and Friday. There was no interception, but one raider was lost to anti-aircraft. At airdromes, defenses, and waterfront installations big explosions were set off.

Five Freighters Blasted.

Plans of the far eastern air force sank or badly damaged five Jap freighters in the Molucca sea on Friday.

The Japs, after their invasion of the Philippines, first felt the weight of American air attacks there on April 19, 1942, when Brig. Gen. Ralph Royce led Flying Fortresses and Mitchells in a raid on Luzon. Then for more than two years the Japs in the Philippines were unmolested. Last Aug. 10, small units of American bombers from advanced bases won by MacArthur's ground forces off Dutch New Guinea began hitting Mindanao.

Raid Japs on Wide Front.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Pearl Harbor, Sept. 2 (AP).—Aerial blows against Japanese island strongholds over a wide Pacific front were reported by American fleet headquarters today.

There was no confirmation, however, of Radio Tokyo reports that units of the powerful United States Pacific fleet and waves of carrier planes blasted Chichi Island, in the Bonins, 615 miles southeast of the Japanese capital.

The navy announcement revealed a dramatic attack by one search plane on a Jap convoy near Iwo Island, in the Volcano group, on Thursday. The Yank airmen sank a cargo vessel and strafed another.

Sink Vessel in Marshalls.

Another navy plane sank a sampan near Jaluit, a by-passed Jap position in the Marshalls.

Rocket firing planes hit Pagan Island, in the Marianas, on Wednesday and Thursday.

One army Liberator bomber continued the harassment of Yap Island in the western Carolines, on the same days. Marine dive bombers and fighters and army Liberators blasted Mili atoll in the Marshalls.

Nauru, the much attacked phosphate island south of the Marshalls, was plastered Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Chungking reported that night raiding Liberators, flying from bases in China, blasted a large concentration of Japanese ships in Takoa harbor, southwestern Formosa, and bombed airdromes at Hongkong and Canton. Several ships were destroyed or damaged.

GEN. MARSHALL WINS SUPPORT IN CAPITAL FOR CITIZENS ARMY

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 (AP).—Gen. George C. Marshall's advocacy of a small but efficient post-war professional army backed up by a well trained citizen reserve won widespread approval on Capitol Hill today and gave impetus to a move for early consideration of peace time draft legislation.

Sen. Chandler.

No dissenting voices challenged the assertion of the chief of staff that a large standing army "has no place among the institutions of a modern democratic state."

Sen. Johnson [D., Colo.], a senate military committee member, said he believed a small professional army was all that was necessary in normal times, provided it consisted of well trained and specialized units.

A committee colleague, Sen. Chandler [D., Ky.], withheld comment on Marshall's proposal and said he would request that the army's head explain in detail to congress the plan he proposes.

NAVY TUG SINKS AS PROPELLER CUTS IT OPEN

Astoria, Ore., Sept. 2 (AP).—A navy tug sank in the Columbia river here last night when it was torn open by the propeller of a troop transport it was attempting to berth at the naval station dock.

The tug's crew of five was saved by a commercial fishing boat returning to port from sea.

The transport was being delivered to the navy from a Henry J. Kaiser shipyard in Portland.

BURIED ALIVE, 2 GUAM CHILDREN BARE MASSACRE

BY HAROLD SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GUAM, Aug. 9 [Delayed].—Recovering from deep neck wounds, a Guamian boy and girl today told of their escape from enemy executioners who had accused them as spies. They are believed to be the only survivors of a mass killing early July 20, the day before our amphibious forces began the reconquest of Guam.

The two are Juan Cabrera, 16, of San Antonio, near Agana, and Beatrice Flores Perez, 15, of Agana.

Juan, a thin, pallid lad, appeared badly undernourished and is suffering from five wounds in his neck and back, the largest 6 inches long and 3 inches deep. Beatrice, tiny and dark, has a deep 4 inch cut at the base of her skull which severed all the muscles in the back of her neck.

Escape from "Grave."

Both children said they received their wounds from Jap bayonets while they and nine other men and women knelt at a bomb crater near Agana spring. After the bayonets repeatedly slashed the victims' necks, all were pushed into the crater and hastily buried, Juan and Beatrice said, but they later escaped. After five incredible days of wandering 15 miles thru jungle and field they received their first medical aid, they said.

The two began their story with their seizure by the Japs on July 18, while Guam was under terrific preliminary pounding by our aircraft and battleships. With them, the Japs arrested nine other men, women, and boys accused of spying, tho all said they were innocent. The party was herded into a deep cave near Agana spring and kept there for nearly two days without food or water.

Their only offense, they insisted, was remaining in Agana after the Nips had ordered the native population back into the hills.

Marched to Bomb Crater.

"About 3 a. m. on the second day we were marched to the big bomb hole not far from our cave," Juan said.

"The Japs made us kneel. We could see soldiers with bayonets take their places, one behind each of us. At a shouted signal the bayonets started swinging.

"I felt blow after blow. I was hurt, but I didn't lose consciousness. I fell half forward and was pushed into the hole. I was afraid to move, so I played dead. Soon dirt came raining into the hole on us. I cautiously clawed a hole so I could breathe. Then when I thought the Japs had left I crawled out of the hole and ran into the woods.

Wandered Thru Brush.

"I was in great pain and only wanted to rest. My back was caked with dirt and my blood but there was no one to care for it. I don't know what happened to the others, tho I saw one climb out of the hole. I wandered around in the brush for a couple of days. Then I met Beatrice."

Beatrice said that when the Jap soldiers found her in Agana they took her to some officers, who questioned her closely.

"Did you wave an American flag at any American planes over Agana?" she was asked. She said she replied that she did not own an American flag. "We don't believe you and we are going to cut your head off," she said one questioner told her.

Her tale leading up to the actual execution closely paralleled that of Juan. Of her escape she said:

"I clawed the dirt away so I could breathe, and then crawled out of the hole. I was in great pain and terribly thirsty. My clothes were soaked with bloody mud. I managed in the two days I was alone to get a little water from the base of big leaves. Then Juan came along."

Go to Concentration Camp.

The two decided to return to Agana, where Juan owned a native house where he had secreted some rice. They ate it, then walked to the home of Juan's uncle in Maagas.

The uncle directed them to the Japs' civilian concentration camp near Manengon, about eight miles south of Maagas. There they were united with their families and received the first medical care for their badly infected wounds from a native nurse.

Within two days the natives made liaison with the American troops and Juan and Beatrice were hospitalized.

Neck Almost Severed.

A doctor expressed astonishment at the hardihood of the boy and girl. "One would never believe either could survive," he said. "The girl's wound almost severed her neck, but miraculously did not reach the spine. Both now are out of danger."

In another example of Jap sadism and massacre, 51 headless, or nearly headless, bodies were found in jungle abbatoirs today. The corpses were those of men ranging from youth to old age. Their hands and feet had been tied as some headsman swung his sharp blade.

Yanks Use Many Women Pilots in War, Say Japs

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—A Tokyo broadcast heard here today said that "the Americans are using many women pilots in the Pacific battles." The theme of the propaganda offering was that "America is getting short of pilots."

BRITAIN DETAILS AID TO U.S. FORCES UNDER REVERSE LEND-LEASE

LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP).—Britain disclosed tonight that her contributions to the American fighting forces under reverse lend-lease ranged from an underground communications center for D-day to paper, Jettisonable gasoline tanks for long range aircraft and waterproofing of United States tanks for channel crossings. "Nothing conceivably helpful was withheld," the ministry of production observed as it issued a report apparently in response to persistent protests in the London press that Americans do not understand the extent of British participation in the mutual aid supply line.

The report said that at least 2,250 aircraft were provided by Britain to the United States air force in Britain and overseas, and it estimated at $440,000,000 the cost of operational airfields, repair depots, equipment, storage and ordnance depots, and supplies for the air force, which occupied by the end of May more than 100 fields.

To accommodate American troops, the British requisitioned apartment buildings, offices, estates, clubs, rest centers, studios, and hotels, including some of the finest in England and Scotland, the report said, and added that under lend-lease there were turned over battle training areas, necessitating evacuation of more than 3,000 persons from one area alone. In turning over this land the government said it accepted liability for the compensation of the dispossessed and for damages.

CHINA HINTS JAP FORCES GAIN ON HENGYANG FRONT

CHUNGKING, China, Sept. 2 (AP).—The Chinese high command tonight indicated the Japanese had made further progress in a converging move aimed at the rear of the Chinese forces threatening Hengyang from the southwest.

Japanese pushing southwest from that strategic Hunan rail city have veered west and are being engaged 22 miles southwest of Hengyang, it was announced. A Jap column striking west from points northwest of Hengyang was engaged 35 miles west and suffered considerable losses, the Chinese said. Another Jap force heading toward Changning, 37 miles southwest of Hengyang, was reported halted in heavy fighting.

The Chinese continued to mop up Japs east of Hengyang and broke into Liling, 75 miles northeast of Hengyang.

In Hupeh province, north of Hunan, the Japs counter-attacked 75 miles west of Hankow, while the Chinese recorded small gains in the Chungsiang sector farther west. In the Yunnan province campaign to clear the overland route across Burma to India, the Chinese advanced in street fighting in the Jap stronghold of Tengchung. Japs in the near-by base of Lungling were further compressed.

MOVIE CAMERA STOLEN.

CONVICT FLYER IN BOAT KILLING OF AGED WOMAN

Pilot Dismissed, Gets 18 Month Term.

Selfridge Field, Mich., Sept. 2 [Special].—Lt. Kenneth W. Wassing of Minneapolis, Minn., leader of a flight of three army planes which "buzzed" occupants of rowboats on a Michigan resort lake Aug. 2, and resulted in the fatal mangling of an elderly woman, today was convicted on two counts of reckless and negligent flying by a general court martial after three hours deliberation.

Lt. Wassing was ordered dismissed from the service and sentenced to 18 months imprisonment at hard labor by Lt. Col. John B. Pattison Jr., president of the court martial. He will be confined to quarters under guard until his case is reviewed by the judge advocate general's department in Washington, D. C.

Story Told by Her Son.

The victim was Mrs. Mary Meyer, 72, of Madeira, O., who was vacationing with her son, Oscar Meyer, at Lake Margrethe near Grayling at the time of the tragedy. Meyer testified yesterday he and his mother were fishing in the middle of the lake at 11 a. m. when three planes "came at us like bullets and I dropped to the bottom of the boat." After the planes had passed, Meyer said, he discovered his mother almost cut in two in the bottom of the boat.

Lt. Wassing did not take the stand in his own defense. His chief counsel, Maj. Burns F. Bentley, told the court martial Wassing had "an admirable record as a cadet." He quoted Capt. Edmond G. Griffin, supervisor of flying at the sub air base at Oscoda where Wassing was helping train Free French pilots, as saying he "would be glad to have Wassing as my wing man in battle."

Held Responsible as Leader.

The defense contended the prosecution had failed to prove the identity of the pilot whose plane killed Mrs. Meyer and therefore, the defense argued, Lt. Wassing should not be found guilty.

The prosecution had introduced testimony earlier that Lt. Wassing was in charge of the flight with two Free French pilots and should be held responsible regardless of which plane killed Mrs. Meyer because the other pilots "were obliged to follow the squad leader at any level he might choose."

JOAN BLONDELL'S DAUGHTER, 6, IS BITTEN BY A DOG

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 2 (AP).—Ellen Blondell, 6, daughter of Screen Actress Joan Blondell, was bitten so severely on the face by a police dog today that 17 stitches were necessary to close the wounds, her mother said. Dr. Harry Singer said the child probably would escape scars, altho plastic surgery will be necessary later. Miss Blondell reported that the police dog attacked Ellen's collie, and the child was bitten when she endeavored to drag the police dog from her pet. The dog was held for a rabies test.

MEET MARINES' MR. FIXIT; HE'S TRIBUNE WRITER

Smith Takes Tool Kit on Six Invasions.

BY JAMES W. THACKER JR.

[Marine Corps Corporal of Staunton, Va.]

GUAM—[Delayed].—Harold Smith, war correspondent for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, is gaining a reputation among his field associates as a "fix-it" champion comparable to a Seabee—there can be no higher comparison.

Smitty has yet to run across anything mechanical that can baffle him. He has repaired everything from wall clocks to airplanes.

The war correspondent made six landings with marine units, in addition to covering the Japanese counter-attack on Bougainville, on which he always carried a small kit of tools. He has never collected a penny from his mechanical services—with him they're just a hobby.

The Tribune writer's skill as a "fixit" once helped save the lives of himself and 14 other passengers aboard a transport plane bound from Kodiak, Alaska, to Seattle, Wash.

Saves Transport Plane.

Flying over mountains at 8,000 feet, the plane ran into a storm and was icing up rapidly. The top on the propeller tank was stuck and the deicing alcohol couldn't be replaced. Smith went forward to the pilot's cabin, brought out his kit, and made the necessary repairs.

While covering the fighting on Makin Island, Smith helped a soldier pinned down in a foxhole by Japanese riflemen. The follower retaining pin on the American's rifle had broken. He had replaced it with a match stem but was afraid to fire, fearing the piece would blow up in his hands.

With a C ration key and a pair of pliers, which he obtained from a communications lineman in a nearby foxhole, Smith satisfactorily replaced the pin.

Makes Telescope Repairs.

On Saipan, Smith combined the head of a dental drill with parts from a sewing machine into a gadget for repairing telescopes. From two damaged clocks, he made one that kept accurate time.

During the Guam campaign, Smith repaired typewriters, one of which was taken from the wreckage of Agana town, and Japanese bicycles. The bicycle, which he rode to many parts of the island as Tribune correspondent, was made from the parts of many. The tires and tubes came from one storehouse and the pedals from another. The frame itself was picked up beside a road.

"Can Fix Anything."

"Smitty can fix anything," he said. "Not only that, but he has taught us everything about living in the field, putting up shelters and so on. He even gets mad when we do something for ourselves on our own. He has certainly been a great help to us."

Smith took part in the landings on Roi, Eniwetok, and Parry in the Marshall Islands and on Makin, Saipan, and Guam.

LEFTISTS JOIN GREEK REGIME IN UNITY MOVE

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 2 (AP).—Leftist forces in Greece, united in the EAM liberation front, finally joined the Greek government in exile today after many months of differences.

Six representatives who took office under Premier George Papandreou arrived in Cairo yesterday and were sworn in today in the presence of Crown Prince Paul, who is regent in the absence of his brother, King George, in London.

Two Communists, John Talaganis and Porphyrogennis, became ministers of agriculture and labor, respectively. Other new officials include Alexander Svolos, minister of finance; Askoutsis, minister of communications; Tsirmokos, minister of national economy, and Angelo Anghelopoulos, undersecretary of finance.

NAZIS GET AIR LINER TO LISBON AFTER 12 DAYS

LISBON, Portugal, Sept. 2 [Reuter].—After 12 days during which the Lufthansa service to Spain and Portugal has been suspended, the Germans sent an enormous passenger plane here today.

It contained four well dressed, middle aged German women, a child of 3, a German diplomatic courier, and a pretty young nurse in the uniform of the Reichswehr nursing corps.

The four engined plane left Berlin last midnight and, making the long and dangerous journey across France, reached Barcelona this morning. An hour later it left for Madrid and arrived at Lisbon this afternoon.

Starts Back at Once.

It was met by the local Lufthansa chief, Count von Beroldingen and his wife.

Almost at once it started back again, this time taking 20 passengers, including three German diplomats and three members of the Japanese legation who a fortnight ago had been prevented from leaving because their passports were not in order.

Hopes to Make It at Night.

Before taking off the pilot remarked: "I do not like this at all. It is a nerve wracking business carrying passengers over enemy territory."

REVEAL GERMAN TANK CAPTURED 'JOCK' WHITNEY

ROME, Sept. 2 (AP).—Col. John Hay [Jock] Whitney, Mediterranean air force staff officer and well-known sportsman, was captured in southern France Aug. 21 after the jeep in which he and four companions were riding was attacked by a Nazi tank, air force headquarters said today.

Col. Whitney.

Whitney and the others were "proceeding in an area believed free of the enemy when a concealed tank opened fire," the report said. The group dived into a ditch and made their way to a farmhouse. The tank fired on the house and the Americans were forced to surrender to avoid certain death.

TRY TO IDENTIFY PATIENT.

Central police last night were trying to learn the name of a man about 35 who suffered a heart attack while he was walking thru an alley near Jackson blvd. and Wabash av. He was taken to County hospital.

RUSSIANS CLEAR DANUBE RIVER ON BULGARIAN LINE

Reach Border on 150 Mi. Front to Black Sea.

LONDON, Sept. 3 [Sunday]—(AP).—The Red army hurled the Germans across the Danube river on a 65 mile front southeast of Bucharest yesterday and reached the Bulgarian frontier on a winding 150 mile front extending inland from the Black sea coast to the big river port of Giurgiu, Moscow announced last night.

In a Balkan disaster surpassing that at Stalingrad the Germans and former pro-axis Romanians lost 418,600 men killed or captured between Aug. 20 and 31, a special Moscow bulletin announced. Of those captured, 97,100 were Germans.

Moscow said the 2d Ukraine army had killed 100,000 enemy troops and captured 108,400, and the 3d army had killed 110,000 and captured 100,200. In addition, great stores of booty were captured or destroyed.

The new casualties raised to 1,200,486 the number of axis troops killed or captured in Russia's summer campaign that began June 23, on the basis of Moscow announcements.

Capture 130 Places.

The 2d Ukraine army captured 70 towns and villages in clearing the north bank of the Danube between Oltenita and Fetesti, 80 miles east of Bucharest, the soviet war report said.

Farther east, beyond the curving Danube, the 3d Ukraine army captured 60 localities in reaching Bulgaria on the plains of Drobruja. There were no indications yet that Red troops had crossed into Bulgaria.

The soviet bulletin did not tell of the Red army's swift westward progress toward the Yugoslav frontier, but dispatches said the Russians were within 150 miles of the border.

Reports from both Budapest and Bucharest agreed that Romanian troops had penetrated into northern Transylvania, beyond the Carpathian mountains.

Claim Romanians Halted.

One Romanian column was said in a Hungarian war report to have been halted three miles inside the Hungarian-annexed part of Transylvania, 18 miles north of Brasov. Fighting also was reported in two other Transylvanian areas.

The anti-axis Romanians were attacking with the aid of Russian troops also in the Oituz and Ghimes passes to the northeast, Berlin and Budapest said. The Hungarians admitted that cracking of the Carpathian mountain wall has necessitated enlargement of the axis front.

The soviet war report, one of the shortest issued in the big summer offensive, did not mention the Warsaw sector, or any other except the area below Bucharest.

Street Fighting in Warsaw.

A Polish statement issued here in behalf of Gen. Bor's guerrillas fighting in Warsaw told of heavy German bombardments which were killing women and children indiscriminately and destroying large parts of the Polish capital.

A Berlin broadcast told of intense street battles in the city and said most of Warsaw was in ruins. Russian troops last were reported attacking only nine miles northeast of the city.

F. D. R. PRAISES LABOR; TELLS OF BIG JOB AHEAD

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 (AP).—President Roosevelt said today American workers can observe Labor day this year "in the proud knowledge that in the battle of production their free labor is triumphing over slave labor."

"It was their determination to safeguard liberty and to preserve their American heritage for coming generations," the President said, "that made possible the greatest production achievement in the world's history. . . . We now have the enemy on the run. Yet we must face the prospect that the hardest fighting and the biggest job of supply are still ahead of us."

Meanwhile, George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, declared the "continuing flood of war production constitutes proof positive that there is no complacency within the ranks of labor."

ELECTOR QUITS; BLASTS POLICY OF DEMOCRATS

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 2 (AP).—Asserting the Democratic party has adopted a policy "insulting" to the south, Sam. M. Johnston, Mobile attorney, withdrew today as one of Alabama's 11 Democratic Presidential electors. In his letter of withdrawal, sent to Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the Alabama Democratic executive committee, Johnston said:

"As for me, I prefer that the south go down as a victim of a magnificent defeat, rather than in a triumphant but grotesque procession composed of Communists Browder and Hillman, Negro Leader White, Bosses Kelly of Chicago, Hague of New Jersey, and Flynn of New York. . . ."

He declared the Democratic platform was largely "spurious" and added "I should want a ticket headed by Senators Byrd of Virginia or O'Daniel of Texas, or some other Democrat of their stature, integrity, and political principles."

BULGARIA PUTS FRIEND OF ALLIES AT CABINET HELM

Report German Flight from Balkans.

LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP).—Amid indications that the German armies have begun a mass flight out of the Balkans, Bulgaria today gave up her dream of edging out of the war thru a "neutrality" back door and resumed her attempt to make peace with Britain and the United States.

Mediterranean air force flyers said German troops and supplies were moving from Romania, Bulgaria, and Greece thru Yugoslavia and allied bombers attacked them.

The formal capitulation of Bulgaria was held up temporarily by fall of Premier Ivan Bagrianov's government on Friday, leaving its peace delegation in Cairo, Egypt, without authority.

Allies Friend Heads Cabinet.

The German DNB agency, however, reported today formation of a new government under Constantine Muraviev, saying that he and his new foreign minister, Petko Stainov, were both known leftists.

Muraviev, who has a pro-allied past, is remembered in London as war minister of the pro-allied Alexander Stambolisky cabinet of 1923.

Stainov, also an opponent of the pro-German policy, was minister to France in 1934 and recently law professor at Sofia university.

It was not apparent whether this government wolud be acceptable to Moscow, whose press attacks on the Bulgarian attitude preceded the fall of the Bagrianov cabinet. Bulgaria is looking to Moscow in her hopes of getting a temperate peace with Britain and the United States.

Peace delegates from Romania, which quit Hitler 10 days ago and then declared war on Germany, waited in Moscow to sign formal armistice terms with Russia. The delegation was headed by Lucretiu Pateascanu, Communist minister of state.

Slovak Army Head Ousted.

Other German satellites also appeared to be nearing developments favorable to the allies.

The Nazi Transocean agency broadcast that Dr. Josef Tiso, president of the puppet state of Slovakia, had dismissed Gen. Ferdinand Catlos, commander of the Slovak army. No reason was given, but Slovak guerrillas and Czech patriots have been prosecuting uprisings in that mountainous little fragment of Czechoslovakia.

Rumors continued to circulate that Hungary was asking the allies for an armistice. There were without confirmation, but Moscow reported that popular unrest was increasing, with many anti-German riots, arrest of 2,000 persons, numerous train wrecks and attacks on German settlers and a shakeup in the Hungarian general staff.

Hungary's dictator, Adm. Nicholas Horthy, was reported supervising a purge of "unreliable" officers as his regime tried to brace itself to combat a Russian onslaught.

MEXICAN ATTORNEYS SEEK BUSINESS HERE FOR DIVORCE MILLS

Mexican lawyers who peddle divorces to American couples have started to mail circulars again to Chicago law firms, advertising their services as collaborators in obtaining quick, easy, secret decrees.

Reputable Chicago attorneys repeatedly have voiced resentment against the tactics employed in an effort to induce them to interest clients in Mexican divorces. The divorce firms in Mexico send their propaganda leaflets to law offices in this city every year or two, emphasizing the "advantages" of loose divorce laws in various Mexican states.

Judge John A. Sbarbaro of Superior court said yesterday that the leaflets "fail to indicate one vital defect—Mexican divorces are absolutely no good in Illinois."

2 Killed, 9 Others Hurt in Navy Yard Explosion

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 2 (AP).—Two men were killed and nine others, including five soldiers, were injured today in an explosion in a small building at the Philadelphia navy yard, the 4th naval district announced. The explosion was followed by fire. The injured army men included Pvt. Stewart B. Bloom, 21, Chicago.

TELLS HOW KING OF ROMANIA LED ANTI-NAZI COUP

MOSCOW, Sept. 2 (AP).—Young King Michael of Romania began plotting with the Communists back in 1943 under the very noses of Nazi occupation generals and played a major part in the coup which overthrew the rule of Premier Ion Antonescu, a member of his new government disclosed here today.

King Michael.

In a dramatic climax to this tense, undercover preparation, young Michael defiantly told the Germans in strong terms he had ordered a Romanian armistice with the allies.

The youthful monarch was won over to the plan of the Communists early in 1943, said Lucretiu Patrascanu, minister of state and justice, who told the story of how Michael, in true Balkan tradition, plotted for the liberation of his country.

King Showed Courage.

Michael exhibited great courage and political maturity during the long waiting and planning, Patrascanu said, and often took the initiative in the plotting.

But because Antonescu had bled the nation of troops for the Russian front to bolster the sagging Nazis, and because the Germans controled Bucharest and most of Romania, nothing could be done until early this year.

However, events moved rapidly in 1944 with the rout of the Germans before the surging Red army, and all the parties realized, Patrascanu said, that it was no longer necessary to hold back a complete reversal of foreign policy. In April military and political preparations for Antonescu's overthrow commenced actively.

Coup Plotted in May.

Direct contact was established between the king and the Communists, and in May the Communists and other parties' representatives met Michael and plotted the coup.

At the end of May the Germans had some 660,000 troops in Romania. At the front were 450,000; in reserve, 15,000 more; 55,000 around Bucharest and the rest throughout the country. Nine armored divisions were included in this total, and aside from all these there were 8,000 "civilian" Germans disguised as tourists, business men or journalists. The troops were so arranged that they encircled the Romanian army, and the outlook for the plotters did not seem promising.

The Communists proposed immediate uprising and direct action. The king agreed. It was decided to mobilize all partiotic forces and set up a military committee. The plotters also decided to get in touch with the allies.

Solid Front Set Up.

By late May or early June a solid front of parties opposed to Hitler and Antonescu was established, and on June 20, the national democratic bloc issued its declaration.

"Thus," said Patrascanu, himself a Communist party member for 25 years, "was created the instrument to overthrow Antonescu."

On Aug. 22 the bloc held another meeting with the king presiding, and Aug. 26 was named as the day for a coup, because Antonescu had arranged a palace interview for that day.

But the premier showed up three days early. All parties got busy. When the dramatic moment came, the 22 year old king looked calmly at his unwanted premier, and ordered him to conclude an armistice with the allies or resign. Antonescu refused flatly.

Premier Arrested.

Immediately the king placed him under arrest along with his bodyguard and personal party, and during the following hours of excitement the interior and war ministers and the Bucharest chief of police also were arrested. That evening the new government took power and the king issued a proclamation which was broadcast.

Two German generals rushed into the palace at 2 p. m. the following day. The king was unimpressed. He told them in strong language what had happened. They promised to withdraw troops without reprisals, and took two Romanian generals with them to help carry out the withdrawal.

Hardly had they reached their cars when the Germans arrested the Romanian generals, and at 4 a. m. the Germans outside Bucharest began attacking the city. Hastily mobilized Romanian soldiers in the capital opened fire on the Nazis.

Bucharest Bombarded.

"On Aug. 25 there was real war," Patrascanu said. A savage bombardment of Bucharest began Aug. 24, but the new government was firmly entrenched, its headquarters in the basement of a bank.

Patrascanu said a peace delegation has seen soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov twice. Principal sessions are expected shortly, he said. Asked if he had seen Americans or British in Moscow, he replied he expected to do so soon, and said his government was "waiting for an invitation."

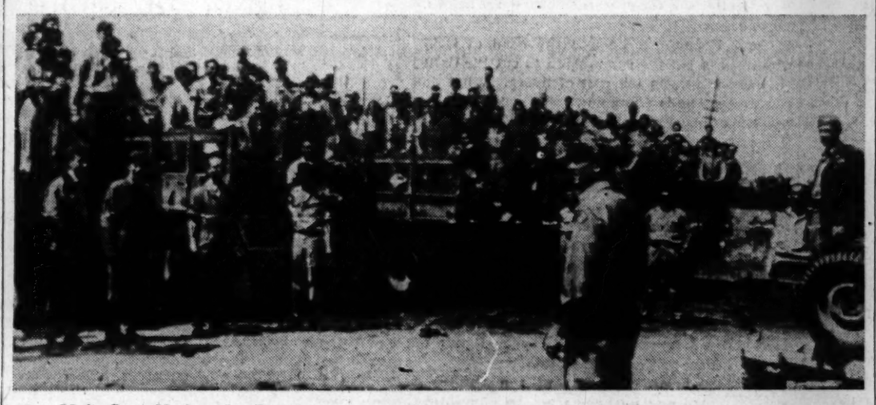
American Flyers, Freed from Captivity, Back in Italy



Maj. Gen. Nathan F. Twining, commanding general of 15th air force (foreground) addresses American airmen in Italy. They were flown back after liberation from Romanian prison camps.

HEROIC COLONEL TELLS HOW HE RESCUED FLYERS

Deal Made as Nazis Ripped Bucharest.

[The man largely responsible for the return of more than 1,100 captured American airmen from Romania is Lt. Col. James A. Gunn III. His resourcefulness at a moment of crisis when Romania capitulated and the Germans were bombing Bucharest is one of the vivid chapters of the war. Gunn is a native of Kelseyville, Cal.].

BY LT. COL. J. A. GUNN III.
[Written for the Associated Press.]

15TH AIR FORCE HDQ., Italy, Sept. 1 [Delayed].—I was shot down over Ploesti, the hottest target on earth, at exactly 11 a. m. Aug. 17. The first flak caught us and three motors were shot away.

When all the crew were safely out I jumped and I never felt such a sense of relief as I got away from the ship which had become an inferno.

I landed in a cornfield and two soldiers and two farmers discovered me. I was driven by auto to Ploesti and imprisoned with other members of the crew. Later we were taken to Bucharest and placed in a great three story school which served as a stockade for interned Americans. Prisoners lived in the second and third floors and Romanian officers occupied the ground floor. I was the ranking officer.

Prepared to Fight.

The night of Aug. 23 at 10:15 we heard King Michael broadcast the news that Romania had changed sides. At once we held a staff meeting and decided to arm ourselves and fight it out rather than be overrun by the Germans.

We asked the Romanian colonel in charge to give us back our sidearms, which amounted to 20 pistols. At first he hesitated, then said he would have them ready and give them to us if the Germans tried to storm the school.

We were in the center of Bucharest. Every night we put some of our force into air raid shelters so not too many would be killed if the school were hit.

Prison Opened, Guns Distributed.

On Aug. 24 the colonel told us he was delighted Romania was fighting on our side, opened all exits to the prison and gave us our guns. We could hear street fighting in the distance.

When the Germans began to bomb the city, the Romanians got mad. They killed many Germans, but many civilians also were killed by the German bombings, which went on day and night.

Our people were getting jittery. No real protection was guaranteed us. On Aug. 24 I sent two officers out to make radio contact with 15th air force headquarters and sent a third officer to see what chance we had of evacuating the men to the safety of rural areas.

By noon of the 26th none of these officers had been heard from.

Gets War Minister's Aid.

I made a request to see the Romanian minister of war, Gen. Racovita. Within two hours he received me. I told him the men should be evacuated to the country. He agreed and instantly sent an officer to reconnoiter the southwest section of town, which seemed the likeliest exit.

I asked the general to send me in a plane back to Italy to arrange to evacuate the men by air. He said maybe we had better talk with the chief of staff.

The chief of staff, readily accessible, took me to see Air Minister Gheorghiu, who said: "It is an excellent idea. I will do it."

Next morning I was presented to a lieutenant commander who took me to an air field and we boarded an old Italian plane which barely got off the ground. In 30 minutes we were in such trouble that I wondered whether we would get back to the field.

Meets 64 Plane Ace.

It was pretty disheartening to return but the air minister then introduced me to Capt. Carl Cantacuzino, a tall, handsome man of 30 who is Romania's ranking pilot with the astonishing number of 64 allied aircraft to his credit.

He said he would get me to Italy in his Messerschmitt 109. We painted an American flag on the fuselage and white stars on the wings. After the radio equipment was removed I got into the fuselage, he screwed the plate over the side, and we were ready to go.

At the field in Italy we came in at deck level, wagging our wings and hoping the attack gunners would see the stars. Cantacuzino went in as if he had lived there all his life.

The last thing he had said before we took off was:

"Colonel, I promise you one thing — we won't be shot down. If fighters intercept us I will make a belly landing. If the Americans won't shoot us on the ground we will be all right."

Spots Colonel's G. I. Shoes.

It was a tense moment when we came onto the field. I'll never forget the sense of relief when the wheels hit the ground and we still were not shot at. People crowded around the ME-109. I heard Capt. Cantacuzino say: "I have somebody here you'll be glad to see."

One of the men yelled, "Look at those G. I. shoes sticking out."

They removed the plate from the fuselage and I climbed out. Gen. Twining [Maj. Gen. Nathan Twining, commander of the 15th United States air force] wasn't at the field so I went into a huddle with Gen. Born [Brig. Gen. Charles F. Born] and we then went to headquarters. I told the story to Eaker and Wilson [Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, allied air commander in the Mediterranean, and Gen. Henry M. Wilson, commander in chief in the Mediterranean.]

Presented with Escape Plane.

They asked me to leave the room and made the decision that resulted in evacuating all these happy kids.

As for Capt. Cantacuzino — he gave up his ME-109 and we sent him home again happy in a P-51. When he got in it he yelled:

"No wonder you shoot down so many Germans in a swell ship like this."

HOW COMMUNISM PAYS OFF.

a three room apartment, and a Russian factory director he knew paid the same price for similar space. The ordinary laborer, with the 600 ruble income, however, is fortunate if he has a single room for his family of three or four persons, and generally he shares the kitchen and bathroom with one or more families in the same building. The worker's furniture usually consists of beds separated by screens, a cupboard, and a table and chairs, all in the same room. Mr. Cassidy says that most Moscovites pad along the streets head down, looking at other people's shoes. When they see a pair of shiny new shoes they look up to see what remarkable and fortunate creature is wearing them.

The Communists in Moscow haven't been able to spread the wealth very well and equalize everything, as they promised to do, even tho they put the people thru a bloody social revolution and destroyed all property rights to do it. Factory directors and other important executives draw salaries up to 10,000 rubles a month, a cut above the 600 ruble pay allotted to the supposedly all-powerful masses. If they are thrifty, these select personages can buy a caracul coat for 17,000 rubles, or a piano for 20,000 rubles—two months' pay—in the new department stores. Then there are concessions—a 10 per cent discount for factory workers, 20 per cent for Red army officers and government employes, and 40 to 50 per cent for heroes of the soviet union, Stalin prize winners, and others who have distinguished themselves. There aren't supposed to be any classes in communist Russia, but enterprise pays off there, just the same.

The Russian equivalent of a CIO worker, who draws 600 rubles a month, does not cause traffic jams in the new nonrationed soviet stores, but there are enough buyers with big money so that Mr. Cassidy reports queues five blocks long in front of some of the larger establishments, and instances where comrades waited hours simply to buy a cake of soap or an onion, or took a day off from work to make a single purchase.

This is the way of life that the communist brains in the CIO and the New Deal are offering to America's $80 a week war workers, along with the opportunity of contributing a dollar to the political action committee to bring it about. This is the economy that Earl Browder, Sidney Hillman, and Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal planners hope to achieve when communism has liquidated private enterprise and property rights in America, overthrown the profit system, and distributed the national wealth. Moscow is the holy mother of communism, and its society benefits from nearly 30 years of Red experimentation under the master, Lenin, and his pupil, Stalin. Communism couldn't be any better here; take Moscow's word for it.

It is strange that the disciples of collectivism in America stayed here to promote the fourth term when they could have enjoyed the benefits of soviet social revolution which Mr. Cassidy describes. It must be that the American Republic feeds and comforts its people so much better.

MR. BROWN DOES GET AROUND.

Profits of public utility companies are limited by state regulatory agencies. The ceiling is the amount that represents a prescribed return on the value of the property employed. Whenever profits go beyond that limit, the rates have to come down. Utility companies are not allowed excess profits by state standards.

But the federal tax laws don't define excess profits the same way that the state utility commissions do. Many companies whose profits are found to be not excessive by the commissions actually pay large amounts as excess profits taxes to the federal government.

One of these companies is the Detroit Edison company. As is related in an article in the Public Utilities Fortnightly for Aug. 17, the city determined that the company would pay an excess profits tax around $6,000,000 in 1942 and applied to the Michigan public service commission for a reduction in electric light rates. The Detroit corporation counsel asked for a rate cut because it would have the effect of "rechanneling excess profits of utility companies from the federal government to the city."

Prentice Brown, at the time chief of the office of price administration, asked to be made a party to the proceedings, in order that it might get part of the credit for saving a nickel or a dime a month to the average light customer. The OPA, a branch of the federal government, was here in the position of seeking to cut down the revenue which another branch, the treasury department, was seeking to augment.

The commission denied the city's application, holding that the excess profits tax was like any other tax and was fully deductible as an expense. There was an appeal to the Supreme court of the state.

While the case was still in the courts, one of the bright boys in the city hall hit upon the idea of accomplishing a similar result in a different way. He said it's a crying shame to let this money get out of town. If our electric light users can't have it, said he, let's take it for the city. So he proposed and secured the adoption of an excise tax of 20 per cent with a provision that the maximum collected should be the amount that would be payable to the federal government as excess profits. The company took action to have the legality of the tax determined and in the meantime withheld payment.

So here was 6 to 10 million dollars up for grabs. The federal government would get it as taxes if the courts turned down both moves of the city. The users of electricity would get the money and there would be nothing for the treasury if the rate cut was approved. The city treasury would get the money and both Uncle Sam and the subscriber would be out if the excise tax was approved.

In May the Michigan Supreme court decided the rate case. The court told the commission to consider rates again, remembering that it had the power to exclude any and all unnecessary expenses. If excess profits constitutes an unnecessary expense, the commission could direct the company to avoid it. Of course the tax can be avoided only by bringing down profits thru a rate slash. At the same time the decision told the commission not to forget that stockholders "are at all times entitled to a fair return on their investment."

That is where the issue now rests. The rate case is before the commission and the 20 per cent city excise tax is in the courts. The treasury is getting its quarterly remittance as before. No one seems to have profited except Prentice Brown. Remember, he was the head of OPA who tried to get the commission to cut the light bills to keep down the cost of living. What do you suppose he is doing now? Why, Mr. Brown has been made the chairman of the board of Detroit Edison.

MR. ROOSEVELT CAMPAIGNS.

Mr. Roosevelt, the fourth term candidate, has shown an irritable resentment of political questions and comment. As chief executive he could avoid questions by not meeting the reporters who ask them. As a candidate he can't avoid comment. That is still, even as to Mr. Roosevelt and his fourth term, an expected part of an American political campaign.

He started his campaign with a theatrical stunt. There was no known reason of military security or preparation which required his presence in a Pacific coast navy yard the day he was nominated for the fourth term, or that, a few days later, demanded his visit to Hawaii. It was plain that he had put on a show. The fourth term candidate wanted to be busy as commander in chief when he received his nomination. What other excuse was there for the timing?

The candidate could have accepted the submission of the holders of his feudal fiefs in the White House or he could have come on to be a part of the performance in the Chicago Stadium, as he has done before, if he had not wanted to create an effect by identifying himself at that moment as the commander in chief and by using the war effort of the American people as his political scenery. What he undertook to make appear as the call of duty at that particular time was theater business. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to appear in this role many times before November.

Four years ago, as the third term candidate, Mr. Roosevelt tried to avoid the war. He said it was political falsehood to accuse him of involving the nation in foreign conflict. In each campaign he has said things he didn't mean and meant things he did not say. This year the war which was avoided in 1940 is all important to the fourth term candidate. He will campaign as head of the armed forces, commander in chief of the army and navy, and he will use the facilities of the army and navy to advance his political interests. This candidate can travel in a battleship, and does.

The head of the fourth term ticket has announced that he will make a political speech in September. That is proper campaigning. A candidate is expected to make political speeches. When Mr. Roosevelt is on the radio asking people to vote for him he is in his proper character in the campaign. He is a man running for office in the approved fashion. He commands a great audience of people willing to listen to him. He is an excellent radio speaker and when he talks he has every outlet in the country. He isn't too busy to make political speeches. The fourth term is the chief business of the day from now until November.

Mr. Roosevelt the political speaker is not the sly candidate. The sly politician is Mr. Roosevelt the commander in chief. He probably has in mind some major bit of showmanship. English newspapers say he is heading for the Arc de Triomphe in Paris. Mr. Churchill has been in Rome. Mr. Roosevelt may take a swing along the Appian way himself, if Berlin is not open in time for campaign purposes.

SOME SOLDIERS WHO DIDN'T VOTE.

The CIO United Steel Workers won a national labor relations board election at the hardware plant of Lawrence Bros., Inc., in Sterling, Ill., and the plant was closed the next day by the management. The management says that it has run out of war orders and that its employes ought to get jobs elsewhere where they will be more useful in prosecuting the war. A CIO union leader says it's a lockout.

These occurrences have served to obscure a more important circumstance in connection with the NLRB election. The company has 137 employes on leave of absence in military service. The management contended that the soldier employes ought to have a voice in the selection of a bargaining agent in the plant in which they have a legal priority on post-war employment. The NLRB agreed with the CIO that to send the ballots to the soldiers would delay the election.

A total of 241 employes took part in the election. Assuming that this figure would represent the maximum peace time employment in the plant, the absent soldiers who will return and displace some of the present employes, as the law dictates that they have a right to do, will find themselves a majority represented by a union that they had no voice in choosing and which, judging from the expression in letters sent back from the front, a majority of fighting men thoroly abhor. Soldiers' prejudice against the CIO is an obvious reason why the pro-CIO labor board disfranchised these absent workers.

This incident is called to the attention of Sen. Lucas, State's Atty. Courtney, and all of the rest of the New Dealers who have been howling up and down the country the false charge that soldiers are going to be disfranchised if the states do not set aside their legal and orderly system of absentee ballots and permit the use of the fraudulently conceived federal bobtailed ballot. The New Dealers are quite willing to disfranchise soldiers to help their pet, the CIO. They wouldn't be for the bobtailed ballot, either, if it weren't that it opens an unparalleled opportunity for fraud, intimidation, and ballot box stuffing.

Editorial of the Day

FREEDOM TO WORK.

[Kansas City Star.]

The labor practice of putting arbitrary restrictions on work by union members has been dealt a blow by government seizure of a group of machine shops in San Francisco. Last spring the war labor board ordered the local union officials to cease limiting union members employed in the shops to a 48 hour week. The order was ignored and the government seizure of the shops finally was resorted to as that would make possible legal proceedings under the war labor disputes act.

The purpose here, Chairman Davis of the war labor board explains, was not to force any employe to work longer than the 48 hours per week but to get the arbitrary restriction removed so that any worker who desired to stay on the job longer would have the opportunity to do it. The restriction was interpreted as interference with vital war work. The move against it not only is justified with respect to war production demands but the freedom that workers rightfully should have.

OUR GEOGRAPHIC STRENGTH

[Following is the address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK.

Last Saturday, I pointed out how America's entry into the war changed a doubtful issue into a complete triumph. Newspaper readers have read in recent days that the Russian army moved thru Bucharest entirely on American made vehicles.

Our chief strength, of course, is the courage and skill of our fighting men, and our second strength is our superiority, or rather, our supremacy, in producing weapons.

Beyond these is our unparalleled geographical position. All the other powers of the world jostle their neighbors. Smaller countries are threatened by larger. Larger countries threaten each other. From time immemorial, they have grouped themselves into alliances either for mutual protection or mutual advantage, and it is hard to believe they will ever do anything else.

For years, of course, with command of the sea, Great Britain was independent and could use her position for gain, and did so use it. Of late years, with the submarine, the airplane, and the robot bomb, the protecting Channel has become just another river, and England is a very small country, which, in the event of misfortune, could be over-run as easily as France has been.

We have Russia's great advantage of vast space, and we have the advantage, which Russia lacks, of being separated from any potential enemies by oceans 3,000 and 6,000 miles in width.

On the south, we have a small neighbor—Mexico. The two countries have been learning to understand each other more and more, and certainly each would oppose any attack upon the other; and the same is true of most of South America.

We have on the north a neighbor with whom we have lived for 130 years in complete peace, and whose ideas are sufficiently near ours to assure our being able to compromise any differences that may arise.

Our far greater size furnishes a guarantee to Canada. The fact that she lies between us and any bombers from the old world means that she has become our first line of defense, as any attack upon us would violate her territory.

When first annexed, California might have been a military weakness, but this was cured by the building of the Union Pacific railway. There are now many railroads across the country. The automobile has furnished us with hundreds of motor roads running in every direction; air lines criss-cross everywhere. Our rivers are navigable so that the country is bound together as solidly as it is vast.

Our only adventure in imperial politics gave us the Panama canal, which makes one American warship worth two of any other nation. The protecting outposts of Puerto Rico and Guantanamo, gained from the Spanish war, have now been multiplied to include most of the islands of the Caribbean.

Bermuda and Newfoundland constitute outposts in the Atlantic and stepping stones for post-war aviation.

Iceland has recently said, "We want no American posts in Iceland after the war." That's just as well. It relieves us of responsibility.

On Greenland, we have many posts at the present time, but I am sure that, when we have driven the Germans out of Denmark, Denmark will be glad to cede them to us, so that we shall be well on our way across to Europe after the war.

Alaska was purchased with no thought of military value, but its western islands constitute our principal menace to northern Japan.

The Hawaiian Islands came into our union at their own request. They are the most important—perhaps the only—indispensable naval, military, and air bases in the world.

Before the attack on Pearl Harbor they were feebly held. I am sure that any post-war condition will include the provision that every able-bodied man on the islands be militarily trained, armed, and made ready to repel any kind of attack.

Samoa also came into our hands at the request of its inhabitants, and is another one of the native populations in the Pacific devoted to the United States.

You have all been told how the Guamians welcomed our return. So will the Filipinos. When freed of the Japanese invaders and rendered their independence, they will be a strength to us in the far Pacific, where all the other native populations are weaknesses to their exploiters.

San Francisco to Hawaii to Wake Island to Guam to the Philippines is an almost direct air route, while San Francisco to Hawaii to Samoa is three-quarters of the way to the Southwestern Pacific.

Alaska and the Aleutian Islands make a close approach to the coast of Asia, so we control the northern, the central, and the southwestern air routes across the Pacific.

So you see that not only in a military sense, a naval sense, a flying sense, not only in productive capacity, but in geographical advantages, the United States is many times stronger than any other country on earth.

It is interesting to learn that in New York state, where the law covering soldier voting was under most vigorous political attack, soldier ballot applications are running far ahead of those in the rest of the country. Apparently our soldiers haven't heard from the demagogs that the law was designed to curb them.—New York Sun.

HOW TO KEEP WELL by Dr. Irving S. Cutter

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Cutter will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

QUIET TUBERCULOSIS.

THE above title is used designedly because, in its beginning stages, this malady makes no fuss and exhibits no symptoms. It creeps on so slyly that the patient is wholly unaware that anything is wrong.

So far as we know, there has been little if any change in the behavior of the disease in several thousand years. Old Hindu manuscripts have recorded the dictum that the consumptive who has a good digestion and who starts his cure soon enough, will regain health. When the victim reaches the point at which obvious fatigue is detected, weight loss observed, with an annoying cough, there is no justification for terming the disorder "early." These signs mean that it is substantially entrenched.

All too often the individual comes to the doctor with manifestations so well advanced that there is no mistaking the diagnosis. Even without the aid of X-ray films, the skilled medical man can spot the presence of trouble within the lung. In fact, 85 per cent of all our cases will show sufficiently extensive inflammation so that recognition is not difficult.

The important thing is to catch the affliction before cavities have formed, areas of lung tissue have become softened, and live bacilli are discharged in the sputum. As a rule, this can be done with careful X-ray plates. If young people within the 18 to 28 age group would take it upon themselves to employ this safeguard, we could cut short the duration of the illness and save many lives.

Fortunately, modern methods of treatment have made it possible to speed convalescence, particularly if the ailment is discovered in plenty of time. In fact, the physician can say truthfully to the patient, "You have no worries and your period off duty will probably not exceed one year." Such a remark can be made only to the one who presents minimal evidence of infection.

Collapse of the involved lung will not only facilitate recovery but will make it more certain. Thru the introduction of air [pneumothorax], the working parts are put at rest. Thus the healing process is able to go forward under ideal conditions. This procedure is repeated periodically as absorption of the introduced air allows the breathing tissues to expand.

Bed rest alone is valuable but it is rarely complete. There is too much jumping around, going to the bathroom, etc. When it is absolute, the sufferer is not permitted to move at all, not even to read or converse. Some of the best results I have seen followed a program which included strictly enforced repose, plus the intelligent use of pneumothorax.

Here is a word for friends and relatives. There is no occasion to ostracize a victim of the white plague. He has learned how to dispose of his sputum and there is rarely the slightest chance that he can communicate the infection. Children, however, may well be kept at a distance. They are highly susceptible. Nevertheless, long and persistent association with one who has tuberculosis is necessary before it can be acquired. The disease runs in families but not because it is hereditary. It isn't. The explanation lies in the constant contacts which come to members of the household.

SKIN DISORDER.

Mrs. C. S. writes: My son, recently home from the South Pacific, tells me that many of the boys have developed a fungous eczema on their hands and face. Is this curable?

REPLY.

Probably ringworm, which can be eliminated with proper and persistent treatment.

MAGIC.

Mrs. H. writes: Will wearing a piece of camphor ice protect a child from infantile paralysis? I don't believe it but most of the mothers in my neighborhood are using this "preventive."

REPLY.

Useless but harmless. An old time remedy—a bag of asafetida—is more potent when it comes to keeping companions away.

DISEASED TONSILS.

F. D. writes: What can be done for a person who averages two attacks of quinsy sore throat a year?

REPLY.

Wait until inflammation quiets down completely and then have the tonsils removed. Otherwise these structures will continue to pour toxins into the system.

HORMONES.

J. C. writes: Are hormones habit forming?

REPLY.

These preparations should never be taken unless there is a positive indication for their employment. The patient should be under the watchful eye of the family doctor. No danger if administered properly.

BLOOD SPOT.

A. L. writes: What causes a blue spot to develop on the lips?

REPLY.

A ruptured or dilated capillary. A tiny blood tumor has formed. This may absorb in time. If circulation is still intact, it will remain.

NOT SO.

W. F. writes: Is 65 too old for a cataract operation?

REPLY.

Not at all. Be sure that you are in the hands of a skilled eye specialist.

ARMY WIVES' PROBLEMS.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—In regard to the letter, Aug. 27, "Why Army Wives Crack Up," I am a mother with a son and two sons-in-law in service and many times I have thought exactly what this writer states. It would be a good idea to have posters or cartoons printed on kindness to service men's wives, just as we have reminders about the U. S. O.

My girls and I are reading this letter over and over because it covers so much of the heartaches my family goes thru and the nervous tension they are under, having made a promise they will not let the world see them cry until the day their men come home.

In army camps, the U. S. O.'s have luncheons and entertainment for the army wives but here in Chicago, the only girls who dare to stay out after 9 p. m. are single girls. When I read about soldiers' wives neglecting children I can't understand it, but I do understand their loneliness.

MRS. L. P. BALKAM.

Oak Park, Ill., Aug. 27.—I agree with "One of Millions" in that service wives are social outcasts. But our true friends [and they are always a minority] do not let us down. Those who do are not worthy to be called friends and let us remember that our husbands have made very close friends from all parts of these United States who will be more worthwhile to know.

About our men having a little enjoyment. Don't you think they deserve some distraction from the military life which is so foreign to most of them? Perhaps a few go haywire but those men would eventually go haywire in civilian life.

The best aid we can give our fighting men is to trust them, quit griping and keep occupied. We are not suffering except in loneliness, but don't you think they are twice as lonely as well as very uncomfortable and often ill or injured? Letters are memories of the past, dreams of the future, and have a heart and a soul. If your letters from him lack that touch I suggest you check your letters to him. A NAVY WIFE.

SAYS VETERANS WILL VOTE REPUBLICAN.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—I was a civilian guard at Navy pier for nine months and I had the pleasure of talking to many hundreds of sailors who had been on the Wasp, Lexington, and Hornet, and to leathernecks who had fought in several battles in the Pacific. These men were from every state in the Union. Plenty were from the south, where they know no other party than the Democratic, but several I talked to said if their parents voted Democratic this time they would disown them. More than 99 per cent were going to vote Republican. Those who were Democrats had not been in service long and had not seen any action except the battle of Navy pier in Mayor Kelly's navy.

My son-in-law is serving in Italy. His outfit was the first to land in Africa. He served in Africa, Lybia, Sicily, and Italy and has been wounded several times. I am a veteran of the World war. We both were born and reared in Texas as Democrats. We will both vote Republican this year. I started voting Republican six months after this administration took office.

ANOTHER VOTE FOR DEWEY.

LINDBERGH'S WORK.

Dallas City, Ill., Aug. 23.—Our family read with interest and appreciation your recent editorial on Charles A. Lindbergh, telling something of the work that he is doing as a civilian in connection with army and navy aviation. We feel that most of the intelligent American people appreciate the work that Mr. Lindbergh might have been able to do had his services been accepted by the government, but he is certainly to be commended for doing what he could working as a civilian. We sincerely hope that our people remember the warnings he gave to England and his own country.

C. G. MCHUGH.

" SEND THE OLDER SOLDIERS HOME."

Camp Grant, Ill., Aug. 29.—The editorial "Send the Older Soldiers Home" and the letters in your column this morning struck a responsive chord in me, as my experiences have been similar to those of "Chicago Private." Drafted into the army Feb. 20, 1941, altho married eight years, I have been in, respectively, the infantry, military police, and now the medical corps.

Put out of the military police Jan. 1, 1944, to make room for overseas replacement men, I was sent to a "replacement pool" at Fort Sheridan, where I did absolutely nothing but eat and sleep and draw pay for three and one-half months. Then I was told I was going overseas, given a furlough and told to clear up my affairs in preparation. When I returned, I waited around another two weeks, then was told to take another furlough to "kill time." When I returned this time, instead of going overseas, I was sent down to another pool at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., presumably to get rid of me.

Here I did exactly the same as at Sheridan—nothing—for another month, then was sent, all at government expense, practically back where I started from, to Camp Grant. After being around Camp Grant all summer, doing nothing of any value, I am now assigned to a medical malaria unit and told to prepare to go overseas for two or three years in the near future.

Whatever they do now, I am too disgusted to care much. I am 36 years old and also turned down for O. C. S. because of my age—not lack of ability. Nothing can surprise me now, and when I hear of a man power shortage what a laugh I get. This camp is full of men 35 to 40 years old, all in the same boat as myself, and with similar experiences. They are too old for anything worth while, but good enough to do any dirty work needed.

A PUSHED AROUND G. I.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—I would like to commend the letter and editorial in this morning's paper, "Send the Older Soldiers Home." My husband, who is now over 38, is in Italy. After nine months in a camp in Mississippi and a few weeks in another camp, he was sent overseas without any particular training or assignment, without any opportunity for advancement.

The camps seem to resent men in their later 30s being sent them by draft boards and they are pushed around and not given an opportunity to show what they can do. ESTHER FORD.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—My husband will be 38 in November. He has been in the army for 23 months. He limps and has arthritis and varicose veins. As the result of two basic trainings, numerous other ailments have appeared. He has had 12 years of service with a railroad and what is he doing now? Washing pots and scrubbing floors three times a day, and the railroad is crying for experienced help.

When he asked to go back to civilian life and do something to help the war, he was told that if he couldn't stand combat duty he couldn't stand railroad work. Let these older men get back to their regular jobs and I wager there will be fewer strikes and production will rise. A PRIVATE'S WIFE.

HOW CIO DEMANDS ARE ENFORCED.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—It looks as if organized labor, and in particular the CIO, has arrived at an arbitrary and essentially illegal formula for enforcing their demands upon industry.

1. Following some disagreement, fancied or otherwise, between labor and management, a sit-down or walk-out, or both, is called by the local labor bosses. Work ceases, and with it the production of critical materials.

2. The war production board protests this interference and recommends the case to the war labor board for possible arbitration.

3. Labor refuses to abide by the decisions of the war labor board, and refuses to return to work unless the government steps in and takes over the plant in question.

4. The case is referred to the President who acts in his capacity as commander in chief. He employs the usual formula of setting a date, and if the parties to the argument have not reached agreement by that time, he takes over in the name of the United States and seizes the plant, lock, stock, and barrel. Management has not even been consulted as to the legality of the seizure, nor as to the reasonableness in back of the apparent necessity for seizure.

5. After labor is sure that the government has taken over, and that management must abide by the dictates of outsiders sent to run the works, they go back to work, and the bill for the lost time, the lost production, and the increased cost of manufacture is presented to management for payment.

HE SUSPECTS THE GARBAGE MEN.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Victory gardeners, watch the garbage trucks. Several weeks ago several cabbages, the largest heads, were taken from my garden. Ripe tomatoes were taken from my plants and those of my neighbors. The garbage had also been removed that day.

A week ago, at the sound of the approaching garbage truck, my wife watched from our back porch. One of the garbage collectors thrust his hand thru our neighbor's fence, reaching for tomatoes, but quickly withdrew it when my wife called to him.

Last night at 11 p. m. we heard the garbage truck and stood guard on the back porch. Our garden, unlighted, was unmolested. As the truck moved on we saw by a street light one of the men enter neighboring gardens in a prairie. As I ran down the inclosed back stairs and up the alley my view was obscured, and the garbage man was back at the truck by the time I reached him. I cannot say whether he took anything. He claimed he hadn't been in the gardens.

Of course, most garbage collectors keep to their commodity. Four men of each crew, swinging shovels, do hard work. But several others go ahead of the truck or bring up the rear. What they do is a mystery. To learn the answer, all of my neighbors and I will watch them hereafter, day or night.

DEFENDS QUARTERMASTER DEPOT WORKERS.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—At the request of a number of employes of the Chicago quartermaster depot I rise in defense of the employes in that installation and take issue with Miss Isabell Greenberg for certain misstatements of fact in her letter "Too Much Work." Miss Greenberg charged that when the 54 hour week was instituted "every one was going to quit. They thought that this would frighten the government into keeping the 48 hour week." I did not threaten to quit, not to mention hundreds of others with whom I am in daily contact.

It is true, perhaps, that these employes who know no holiday during the year but Christmas, did not accept the 54 hour week with mirth and hilarity. Many women have small children at home, all who maintain a household were handicapped as to shopping facilities, and many are just worn out from long hours, heavy work schedules, impaired health, and war nerves. However, all were aware the 54 hour week was a temporary measure and accepted it as such. Sure, there were "squawks" because after all we are like any group of average Americans.

Chicago quartermaster employes have responded wholeheartedly to any and all calls of war time necessity. Among our employes are many who give blood regularly to the Red Cross, many too, are Red Cross workers, hospital aids, and civilian defense workers. During the fifth war bond drive the depot quota was set at $100,000. Thru the united efforts of depot personnel over $430,000 in war bonds were sold.

PHYSICAL EXAMINATION.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—1. Does the law requiring school children to have a complete physical examination make provision for the doctor's fees? 2. Does it apply to children whose parents' religion forbids such an examination?

L. B.

1. The act merely says that "physical examinations . . . shall be required of all pupils." Illinois Revised Statutes, Chap. 122, Sec. 523.4.

2. No. It exempts "pupils objecting . . . on constitutional grounds."

G. F. A. asks: "If a veteran wants to enter a business and obtain a loan under the G. I. law, and if he can purchase the business at a price to stay within the $2,000 guarantee limit of the law, is it possible for him to secure a supplementary loan from any source for equipment and stock?"

Section 502 [a] of the law apparently makes such provision provided: "That such second loan shall not exceed 20 per centum of the purchase price or cost and that the rate of interest thereon shall not exceed that on the principal loan by more than 1 per centum." We have data sheets on the various sections of this law available if a stamped envelope is sent.

T. E. L. asks: "If a soldier gives his age wrong [younger], in the event of his death, would this 'error' affect the payment of his insurance?"

No. The payments made to the beneficiaries is made according to the age of the beneficiary at the time of the Yank's death.

Issues of Campaign to Be Clarified.

had succeeded in bringing America into the war, the Democratic platform, written by the President, puts it the other way around, asserting that Mr. Roosevelt's administration "gained for our country and it saved for our country powerful allies." The platform also credits the Roosevelt administration with the construction of the American war machine and the energizing of the strategy that turned "the tide of battle."

The Republicans credit American industry and the army and navy high command with the successful prosecution of the war, despite "civilian interference," the euphemistic term employed by the Republican platform to characterize the ineptitude of Mr. Roosevelt as commander in chief.

The most tragic example of such ineptitude, according to the Republicans, is the Pearl Harbor disaster at the very beginning of the war, which cost America half her battleship fleet and enabled the Japs to take the Philippines and East Indies, thus prolonging the war for years at the expense of tens of thousands of American lives and billions of dollars.

Aid to Fleet Disposition.

The Pearl Harbor disaster is attributed by the Republicans to the disposition of the fleet by Commander in Chief Roosevelt and his neglect to order the No. 3 alert after he had served an ultimatum on Japan.

To the desire to suppress such damaging reflection on his capacity as commander in chief is ascribed the President's delay of the court martial of Adm. Kimmel and Gen. Short, the Pearl Harbor commanders, till after the election.

There are the issues of the forthcoming peace, beginning with the disposition of the army at the end of the war in Europe, which appears to be close at hand. The Republican platform pledges that "at the earliest possible time after the cessation of hostilities we will bring home all members of our armed forces who do not have unexpired enlistments and who do not volunteer for further overseas duty."

The Democratic platform is silent on this matter, wherefore the Republicans charge that Mr. Roosevelt has acceded to the desire of Churchill and Stalin to keep American troops in occupation of Germany indefinitely to police the division of Europe between British and Russian spheres of influence.

Pledge to Preserve Sovereignty.

With both parties committed to prosecution of the war to complete victory and to international coöperation to preserve peace, the principal points at issue involve the machinery of coöperation and the application of force to restrain aggression.

The Democrats were compelled to meet the Republican terms of international coöperation without surrender of sovereignty. The Republicans declared for "coöperative organization among sovereign nations to prevent military aggression and to attain permanent peace with organized justice in a free world." The Democrats espoused "an international organization based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all peace loving states."

The Democrats say that "such organization must be endowed with power to employ armed forces when necessary to prevent aggression and preserve peace." This declaration squints in the direction of an international police force over the American components of which congress, the sole war making power, would have no control, such as appears to be in the making at the Dumbarton Oaks conference.

Congress Control Implied.

The Republican declaration implies retention of control by congress of American forces employed to preserve peace. The platform says that the international organization "should develop effective cooperative means to direct peace forces to prevent or repel military aggression."

The Republicans recorded their opposition to any underwriting of an unjust peace, declaring that "the treaties of peace should be just; the nations which are the victims of aggression should be restored to sovereignty and self-government." This was palpably aimed at the partition of Poland and Russian annexation and domination of Baltic and Balkan countries which Stalin engineered at the Teheran conference. For his tacit, if not express, acquiescence in the Stalin program at Teheran Mr. Roosevelt was immediately compensated by Earl Browder's dissolution of the Communist party and dedication of the Russian dominated American Communists to a fourth term for the President.

Issue of Four Power Control.

Related to this Republican platform declaration was the recent charge by Gov. Dewey, denied by Secretary of State Hull, that the Dumbarton Oaks conference is fashioning a four power organization to dominate the world at the expense of the independence of Poland and other small countries.

The Republicans explicitly rejected the world state in which the one-worlders would incorporate the United States. The Democrats were silent on this proposal. The Republicans pledged themselves to "protect the essential interests and resources of the United States," a declaration aimed at the Roosevelt plans to continue lend-lease after the war, to put backward countries on an American dole and to extend the New Deal to the world, all at the expense of American taxpayers.

Issue of Foreign Bases.

It also is aimed at the disposition of the administration to dissipate American oil and other resources and to relinquish without compensatory consideration overseas aviation fields and strategic bases provided by American funds and arms.

The Republicans promised to submit any peace treaty or other internation agreement to the senate for ratification by two-thirds of the members thereof, in accord with the Constitution.

A similar provision appearing in the first draft of the report of the resolutions committee of the Democratic national convention was eliminated at the insistance of the President who may wish to circumvent the senate two-thirds provision by calling a peace treaty an agreement requiring approval by a simple majority of both houses.

He adopted this course to procure approval of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Agency involving an outlay of 1½ billion dollars by the United States—that is, adopted this course only after Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.] had blocked an administration plan to make the agreement without reference to congress.

Issue of Leftist Aid.

An issue of no little importance is the collectivist trend of the country under the New Deal, accentuated by the ascendency of Sidney Hillman's Communist dominated Congress of Industrial Organizations and American Labor party in the Democratic party and in the Roosevelt administration. The Democrats profess to abhor fascism but they never attack the no less totalitarian communism.

The Republicans assail both fascism and communism. In their platform they asserted that "four years more of New Deal policy would centralize all power in the President, and would daily subject every act of every citizen to regulation by his henchmen; and this country would remain a republic only in name. No problem exists that cannot be solved by American methods. We have no need of either the communistic or the fascist technique."

Pledge End of Regimentation.

The Republicans promise the unshackling of labor and agriculture and industry from the regimentation of the New Deal and the coercions and persecutions of the bureaucracy under boards that make and execute their own laws and punish offenders.

The Republicans say the Democrats and Hillman's affiliated CIO are planning to push the New Deal father toward Moscow if a fourth term be vouchsafed them by the people. They charge the fettering of private enterprise would be stepped up under a continuation of price, wage, and salary control after the war. They say labor control of the government would be manifested in continuation of the policy maintaining union membership thru employer-union contracts dictated by the administration and in forcing general acceptance of the closed shop.

While private industrial cartels and other forms of private monopoly are frowned upon by the Democrats the plans for the super-New Deal of the fourth term call for government managed cartels in coal, oil, transportation and other big business harmonizing with the Communist theory inspired by Moscow.

See Cartel Threat.

The Republicans assert that big business concerns that escape the government cartel treatment are to be subjected to anti-trust prosecution ostensibly in the interest of restoring competition.

Hillman, tho not a Democrat, and his CIO political action committee have virtually taken over the management of the Democratic campaign with New York headquarters overshadowing the Democratic headquarters. The PAC has a campaign fund that promises to reach 6 million dollars, beggaring the Democratic war chest.

Hillman frankly tells his followers that for their cause, by which he means the labor domination of government, it is Roosevelt for a fourth term or bust.

New York at Stake.

It was the 400,000 votes of Hillman's Communist dominated American Labor party that enabled Mr. Roosevelt to carry New York in 1940. Hillman plans to do it again and if he should succeed the 47 electoral votes of New York might easily achieve Mr. Roosevelt's re-election.

Like the Republicans and Democrats, the CIO has its political platform, including proposals to loan American government funds to "industrially backward nations," to furnish asylum "for persecuted minorities," and unlimited funds for foreign relief; to provide control of industry and agriculture by labor management councils, a "guaranteed annual wage," wage, price and rent regulation and food subsidies, higher taxes on high incomes and corporation profits, and a government guarantee to every citizen of a "decent home . . . within his means."

What the Democrats and the CIO propose is further regimentation and government control of all enterprise, treated as a "mature economy."

Dewey Asks a Reverse.

Rejecting this view, Gov. Dewey calls for a reversal of New Deal policies "consistently hostile to and abusive of American business altho it is in business and industry that most of us make our living."

There are many other issues including one of transcendant importance on which the Democratic platform is eloquently silent. That is money and the public debt. The Republicans promise to "maintain the value of the American dollar and regard the payment of government debt as an obligation of honor which prohibits any policy leading to the depreciation of the currency."

They promise to reduce the debt "as soon as economic conditions make such reduction possible." They also advocate restoration to congress of control of the currency "by repeal of existing legislation which gives the president unnecessary and dangerous powers" further to devalue the dollar.

Republicans attack great significance to the silence of the Democratic platform on this issue because of the widely prevalent view of New Dealers and associated Communists that the public debt in due time will be repudiated.

MINNESOTA G.O.P. ACCLAIMS SHIFT FROM NEW DEAL

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 2.—Minnesota Republicans consider their state likely to be one of the key states in November and that as the campaign now makes a real start all indications are that Minnesota will be in the G. O. P. column. The chief battleground will be the industrial centers, as is the case in other states such as Michigan, Indian, Illinois, and Wisconsin.

Rural Minnesota gives signs of going more Republican than ever. Farm sentiment against the New Deal appears to be as rampant as in the rest of the Mississippi valley states.

G. O. P. leaders hold that the real fight is in the three industrial areas—Ramsey county [St. Paul], Hennepin county [Minneapolis], and St. Louis [Duluth]. Here Sidney Hillman's CIO political action committee is most active.

Polls Indicate Shift.

In 1940 the three counties gave a combined plurality of 90,482 for Roosevelt, but rural Minnesota whittled down the Roosevelt plurality in the entire state to 47,922. Roosevelt got 51.9 per cent of the entire vote.

Polls indicate he is not as strong as four years ago, while Gov. Dewey is more popular than was Wendell Willkie.

At the state fair this week reports from persons from all parts of the state indicate their ticket will carry the state from top to bottom, Republican leaders said. A large undecided vote is still indicated.

The national candidates are to appear in Minnesota in October. Party chiefs believe their appearance will clinch the state. Four years ago Dewey was given a tremendous reception in Minneapolis in his preconvention campaign.

The Democratic party has been liquidated, and last spring it was amalgamated with the Farmer-Labor party. The latter was shelved in 1938 by an uprising of Minnesota voters because of its communist taint. The fusion, which was engineered by White House emissaries, now carries the name of the Democrat-Farmer-Labor party.

This political union has been in a state of rumpus. Old Line Democrats have been shouting they have been sold down the river, while recent elections show that the old Farmer-Laborites are heading back to the Republican party.

Republicans have denounced it as tied up with Hillman's PAC and declare that the hyphenated party is as subservient to Hillman as was the Democratic national convention in Chicago.

Benson Termed Power.

Elmer A. Benson, former Farmer-Labor governor, who was defeated for governor in 1938 by Harold Stassen by 291,576 majority in the revolt against communist taints in the Farmer-Labor administration, is reputed to be the man who really accomplished the amalgamation of the Democrat and Farmer-Labor parties.

He is not running for office this year. Instead, he is a member of Hillman's National Citizens' Political Action Committee. Its advertisment in the New Republic last month said under federal law "some election activities must be financed by contributions from individuals and not from union funds. CIO members are making their contributions." It invited citizens to kick in to the new committee. Benson is one of the directors. Indications are it is to operate in places where there are no CIO members.

In the governorship fight, Gov. Thye, who has great popularity, is expected by Republicans to win in a walk over Byron G. Allen, the Democrat-Farmer-Labor nominee. Allen, who runs a string of farms near Detroit Lakes, is from Iowa, where in 1940 he ran unsuccessfully as a Democrat for congress in a Des Moines district. In 1932 he was appointed secretary to former Sen. Smith Wildman Brookhart, a left wing Republican senator.

CIO War Chest Charged.

Roy Dunn, Republican national committeeman, who has done much in unifying the G. O. P. in the state, in a recent blast alleged that the CIO will have $250,000 to spend in Minnesota.

"Mr. Allen, the Democrat-Farmer-Labor candidate for governor has become spokesman for the Hillman-Benson PAC machine," Dunn said. "Benson recently went to New York to attend an executive committee meeting of the citizens' PAC, organized and financed by Sidney Hillman's PAC. He and his former secretary, Roger Rutchik, have been placed in charge of the Democrat-Farmer-Labor campaign in Minnesota. I am informed that Benson and Rutchik will have $250,000 to spend in Minnesota to campaign for the CIO ticket headed by Mr. Allen and Mr. Roosevelt."

TOO MANY SAFES SAVE APPARENT KIDNAP VICTIM

When James [Sawed-Off] Fire appeared at his saloon, 742 S. Dearborn st., yesterday afternoon, detectives from Chicago av. station were waiting to learn more about his experience at Oak and Dearborn sts. early in the morning, which his wife had reported as a kidnaping.

James Fire.

Fire said it was true two men had taken him away in a car. He said they sneered at the $17 he had in his pocket and demanded the combination of his safe. When he told them he had five safes, they gave up, he said, and let him out 15 minutes after they had taken him from his wife.

Police suspected a possible link with organized gambling, and a detective bureau detail also started questioning Louis Mondi, brother of the one time syndicate gambling head, James Mondi. Louis Mondi, the police said, has been reported in some kind of partnership with Fire.

FUR COATS AND PORTER GONE.

Jacob Lowenberg, 3314 Lake Shore dr., owner of a furrier's shop at 616 S. Michigan av., yesterday asked police to search for two fur coats valued at $1,600 and for a Negro porter whom he hired Thursday. Police said the porter was unknown at the address he gave Lowenberg.

Legislator Dies

GEORGE W. NORRIS.

NORRIS, FORMER SENATOR FROM NEBRASKA, DIES

Father of TVA Was in Congress 40 Years.

McCook, Neb., Sept. 2 (AP).—Former Sen. George W. Norris, 83, a veteran of 40 years in congress, died at his home this afternoon.

Norris, "father" of the Tennessee valley authority and author of the "lame duck" amendment, had not regained full consciousness since suffering a cerebral hemorrhage Tuesday at his home.

Fed Thru Veins.

Besides Mrs. Norris, his three daughters were at his home when he died.

Norris had rallied the day after the hemorrhage and was given a "good chance" to recover. But thereafter he weakened steadily and had to be nourished by intravenous injections.

Services will be held at the First Congregational church here at 4 p. m. [CWT] Monday.

[In Washington President Roosevelt, commenting on Norris' death, said: "A pillar of state has fallen."]

40 YEARS IN CONGRESS.

Shortly before completing 40 years' service in congress, George W. Norris speculated that perhaps he made a mistake when he went to Washington. He believed, he said, he "could have gotten more out of life" if he had remained a District court judge in Nebraska. Repeatedly he expressed a hope for retirement.

But when his state's voters fulfilled that hope in 1942 by rejecting his bid for a sixth term in the senate, despite President Roosevelt's plea that Nebraska should reëlect him as long as he lived, the veteran radical suffered his hardest blow.

Stumped for F. D. R.

He practiced law in Beatrice, Beaver City and McCook, Neb., and in 1895 was elected judge of the 14th Nebraska district. He was serving his second judicial term when in 1903 he was elected to the house of representatives as a Republican. In 1912 he entered the senate.

Following a philosophy founded upon liberalism and insurgency, Norris in 1936 achieved the formal designation of an independent and was the first member of the senate to be so elected. He had stumped for the third party Presidential candidacy of Robert M. La Follette in 1924, for Democratic Alfred E. Smith in 1928, and for New Dealer Franklin Roosevelt in his three successful campaigns.

Norris often was called the "father of TVA" for he authored the Tennessee Valley Authority act of 1933 providing for the development of navigation, flood control and power in the Tennessee valley.

RURAL VOTERS FAVOR DEWEY IN PRESS POLL

Rural voters of the United States favor Thomas E. Dewey by 53 per cent, according to a poll of more than 1,000 editors of weekly newspapers of the nation made by The American Press, trade paper for weekly newspaper editors and reported in its September issue.

The American Press, established in 1882, is a monthly publication devoted to editorial and advertising problems of weekly newspapers, and circulates among thousands of weekly publishers and editors.

The poll showed Dewey the favorite among rural voters in 28 of the 48 states. The electoral vote in the states favoring Dewey totals 342, or 76 more than are necessary for election.

"These editors made no attempt to predict the urban vote," the paper pointed out.

Dewey Ahead in Small Towns.

On the basis of the poll, it was indicated Dewey would win in 5,343 of the 8,872 towns covered by weekly newspapers and Roosevelt would win in 3,529. Roosevelt was ahead only in the southern states, in the border states of Oklahoma, Missouri, Kentucky, and West Virginia, and in the mountain states of Montana, Arizona, Utah, and New Mexico.

Dewey showed a strong majority in every New England state, having an average of 60 per cent. New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania each favored Dewey, averaging 66 per cent for the Republican nominee.

Illinois 63% for G. O. P.

Dewey averaged 64 per cent in the east north central section. Illinois editors gave him 63 per cent of the state's rural vote. The percentage was 72 in Michigan, 65 in Ohio, 64 in Wisconsin, and 54 in Indiana. Missouri was the only state in the west north central group favoring Roosevelt, the weekly editors giving him 51 per cent. Other states ranged from a Dewey high of 69 per cent in South Dakota to 53 in North Dakota, with an average of 59 for the section.

Each candidate carried four of the mountain states, Dewey leading in Idaho, Wyoming, where editors predicted a 70 per cent vote, Colorado, and Nevada, with an average of 53 per cent in his favor. The three Pacific coast states favored Dewey: Washington and Oregon by 54 per cent, California by 51 per cent.

F. D. R. Ahead in 3 Groups.

Roosevelt led in the south Atlantic group by 70 per cent, in the east south central by 67 per cent, in the west south central by 72 per cent.

That all is not solid for Roosevelt in the solid south was indicated by one Georgia editor who wrote: "Vote will be light. Many old line Democrats say they will not vote. Many of those who vote for Roosevelt will hold their nose." Much the same sentiment was described by a Texas editor who said, "The vote will be light here, as many Democrats will not vote." Another Texas editor reported "much anti-New Deal sentiment, but an area traditionally Democratic can't break loose."

Swing from F. D. R. in Montana.

In Montana, where Roosevelt led, one editor wrote: "This has been a strong Roosevelt district, but there is quite a noticeable swing away from him."

"I believe this a 95 per cent Democratic community," wrote a Kansas editor, but we are sick of fellows like the strikers who won't work with jobs aplenty."

A Maryland publisher reported: "Our guess now is Roosevelt with 51 per cent of the vote. But Dewey can win—and with the proper campaign will win."

REPORTS THEFT OF WATCH.

Viola Seibenthal, 661 Saylor av., Elmhurst, told police yesterday her watch had been stolen from a wash stand in the building at 332 S. Michigan av., where she is employed.

2 DEMOCRATIC TROUPERS DATED FOR DOWNSTATE

Lucas announcing the itinerary, called the election the most important since the days of Lincoln and said it would affect the nation's destiny for the next 75 years.

29 STATES OPEN FIGHT HERE ON WATER SEIZURE

Texans led by Gov. Stevenson will head a meeting of officials from 29 states to protest pending federal attempts to deprive the states of control over their water resources. The two day meeting, under the auspices of the National Reclamation association, will convene Thursday in the Stevens hotel.

Represented in the meeting, ready to carry their fight directly to congress, will be spokesmen for 17 western and 12 eastern states. F. O. Hagie of Washington, D. C., secretary-manager of the reclamation association, said demands would be made to guarantee local and state participation in plans for stream basin development and to preserve the integrity of state water laws.

Under attack are the omnibus rivers and harbors bill and the omnibus flood control bill, both of which have passed the house and are before the senate. The rivers and harbors bill seeks to vest broad powers in the secretary of war over control, distribution, and use of water stored in any dam or reservoir constructed under supervision of the war department.

FBI CAPTURES TWO HOLDUP SUSPECTS AS THEY TRY TO FLEE

Agents of the federal bureau of investigation yesterday arrested two of three men accused of robbing the North West Federal Savings and Loan office, 4861 Irving Park rd., as they sought to descend a washroom fire escape at the Players' club, 75 W. Randolph st.

Theo. Jagiello [top] & Leonard Brzezinski.

They are Theodore Jagiello, 27, of 1317 Haddon av., and Leonard [Weasel] Brzezinski, 20, of 2433 N. Harding av. Spencer J. Drayton, chief of the FBI office here, said Jagiello admitted his police record dated back to 1934. Brzezinski also has a long record, police said.

Both men were arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker. They pleaded not guilty to robbery charges. Comissioner Walker set a hearing for next Friday. Drayton said the third member of the trio, Raymond Kreek, 21, still is being sought.

DEWEY TO SPEAK IN BOSTON AFTER WESTERN TOUR

Pawling, N. Y., Sept. 2 (AP).—A campaign swing into New England and the industrial east was projected today for Gov. Dewey with the announcement that he would speak in Boston Nov. 1 after return from a western tour of 21 states.

Dewey probably will cover most of the traditionally Republican northeast before invading the middle west in October.

Beginning his speaking tour at Philadelphia Sept. 7, he will return to Albany Sept. 28. After a day or two of rest, he will make another trip expected to carry him into Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. Whether he will go south, possibly to Florida, remains in doubt.

C. F. BUCK, 74, ILLINOIS G. O. P. LEADER, IS DEAD

Funeral Services Today at Monmouth.

Services for Clarence F. Buck, for many years a leading figure in Republican politics in Illinois, will be held at 4 p. m. today in the Luggs chapel in Monmouth, Ill. He died early yesterday in his home at Monmouth as the result of a heart attack he suffered 10 days ago.

Clarence F. Buck.

Born 74 years ago in Monmouth, where he operated an 800 acre farm until the time of his death, he became interested in politics at an early age. For 15 years he was postmaster in his home town. He was a member of the Illinois senate from 1917 to 1924 and was collector of customs for the port of Chicago in 1924 and 1925. In 1931 he was appointed state director of agriculture.

CURB FOR COLDS: ODORLESS VAPOR MIXED WITH AIR

Mumps Also Halted in Experiment.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Medicine and engineering have been coöperating at Northwestern university's technological institute to demonstrate on a large scale that common colds and other respiratory diseases can now be curbed by conditioning the air in buildings with an inexpensive, invisible, and odorless antiseptic vapor. The vapor also stopped a mumps epidemic.

During the four month demonstration, the health of 2,000 service men was studied in both vapor treated and untreated dormitories by Edward Bigg, associate in medicine, who with Burgess Jennings, chairman of mechanical engineering, devised the conditioning units. A year ago these scientists demonstrated the germ killing effect of the new vapor.

Three Results Stand Out.

But under large scale tests of the earlier discovery, three results stand out: Air borne diseases, especially colds, were far more prevalent in untreated dormitories; hemolytic streptococci in the throats of infected individuals were prevented from spreading by air to throats of others, and a small epidemic of mumps was brought under control.

The vapor, made from triethylene glycol, was described as odorless, noninflammable, and inexpensive. Its presence cannot be detected except by scientific tests. It is converted from a liquid in a specially developed vaporizer and distributed uniformly thru the air by a duct and fan system.

The men under observation were divided into groups who were housed in both treated and untreated dormitories. They were not in the dormitories during the day. Hemolytic streptococci were detected in the throats of 34 per cent of one group. After six weeks in a treated dormitory the number was reduced to 8 per cent.

300 of 2,000 Affected.

Three hundred of the 2,000 men were suffering diseases caused by air borne bacteria during the four month period prior to the introduction of the vapor. This ratio is about the same as in office, school, or factory groups. The scientists pointed to the drop of 34 per cent to 8 per cent of those suffering from colds, mumps, rheumatic fever, catarrhal fever, acute tonsilitis, otitis media, chicken pox, and acute sinusities, as compared with the recorded annual loss of 100 million man days in American industry.

If equal control could be applied in industry as at Northwestern university, the 100 million man hour loss would be reduced to less than 25 million, it was pointed out.

Worry over the fate of his parents in Germany was believed to have caused George Fleischmann, 43, manager of a farm two miles north of Wadsworth, to hang himself yesterday.

DR. CUTTER TELLS HOW TO GUARD AGAINST POLIO

Chicago is one of the most lightly affected sections of the country in the current visitation of infantile paralysis, Dr. Irving S. Cutter, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, said yesterday. However, he cautioned all parents to be on the alert for symptoms that may indicate the disease.

Three new cases of infantile paralysis in Cook county outside Chicago were reported yesterday, two of them school children just returned from vacations outside Illinois, and the other, a 38 year old man in Evanston. There were no cases reported in Chicago in the 24 hours ending yesterday morning.

Contracted Away from Home.

The two children were believed to have contracted the illness away from home. One is a 12 year old Des Plaines boy, who returned from spending the summer on a farm near Winneconne, Wis., and the other is a 14 year old Wilmette girl who had been at Holland, Mich., two weeks.

From Jan. 1 to Aug. 31 only 75 cases and two deaths were reported in Chicago as against 396 cases and 41 deaths for the comparable period in 1943. The county record outside Chicago is light—37 cases and one death in the eight month period of 1944 as against 119 cases and 11 deaths in the 1943 period.

During August there were nine cases and no deaths in Chicago, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, said, while in August, 1943, 149 cases and 15 deaths were reported.

Keep from Crowds.

Dr. Cutter said a good rule is not to allow children to overplay or to get tired or exhausted. Another good rule, he said, is to keep them from crowds.

Infantile paralysis, Dr. Cutter said, starts with symptoms much like those of a common cold. Fatigue, nausea, vomiting and a sore throat may occur. Sometimes there may also be aches in the arms or legs. A striking warning signal, he said, is temperature.

Children's temperatures often rise while playing; that is normal, the health editor said. But if a child hasn't been exerting himself, and the temperature rises to 99.4 degrees the boy or girl should be kept in bed at least 24 hours and watched. Undue listlessness also should mean rest, the doctor said. Respiration ailments also should be watched.

Diagnosis Fairly Quick.

During the polio season, Dr. Cutter said, many parents and even some physicians, have mistaken other ailments for infantile paralysis. True polio, with definite aches and other reactions, allows certain diagnosis in two or three days. Respiratory polio sometimes develops in 24 hours, Dr. Cutter said. There are many grades of the disease. Paralysis does not always develop. Even a light attack, Dr. Cutter says, develops a certain amount of immunity.

"Be alert, watch nasal and respiratory trouble," Dr. Cutter urged. "Take temperatures and if they run to 99.4 degrees, put the suspected sufferer to bed." He warned parents against becoming panic stricken, however.

The south suburbs, including the Flossmoor-Homewood section, report no infantile cases. Most of the western suburbs also appear to be unaffected, Cicero reporting only three, and Maywood and Melrose Park one each.

North Shore suburbs have been much harder hit. Four cases and one suspected case have been reported from Wilmette, three from Highland Park, including one death, two from Winnetka and one each from Glencoe, Kenilworth, and Northbrook.

Virtually all of the North Shore victims are Boy Scouts who were among 800 Scouts from the North Shore area council who attended Scout sessions at Camp Makajawan, near Antigo, Wis.

SCHOOLS OPEN TUESDAY WITH FEWER PUPILS

Many to Stay on War Industry Jobs.

Chicago public schools will open Tuesday morning with several thousand fewer pupils than last fall. Conservative estimates place the decrease at 3,000. Others put it as high as 9,000. Enrollment after the first month of school last fall was 371,000 in elementary and high schools.

Many who should return to high school will remain in war jobs despite a concerted effort by school and civic leaders, with the coöperation of the war man power commission, to get them back to classes, Supt. William H. Johnson said. Others will be in military service.

75 Permanent Appointments.

School openings will bring 75 permanent appointments to elementary school teaching jobs to fill positions left vacant by deaths and retirements, Johnson said. High school and junior and teacher college staffs will remain about the same. Most of the graduates of Teachers college last spring will be used as elementary substitutes.

Teacher shortages experienced the last two or three years seems to have eased this fall, officials of both the city and county schools said.

Chicago's Catholic schools will open Wednesday, Msgr. D. F. Cunningham, superintendent, said. More than 195,000 students are expected to enroll in the eight colleges, 90 high schools and 403 elementary schools of the archdiocese. Increases are expected in both grade and high schools.

Most Cook county schools outside Chicago will open Tuesday, County Supt. Noble J. Puffer announced. Little decrease in enrollment is expected.

Urge Health Examination.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, urged parents to have corrected any deficiencies in their children's eyesight or hearing and to have them innoculated against diphtheria and vaccinated against smallpox as soon as possible.

Eleven public evening schools will open Monday Sept. 11, with registration to begin Friday. Vocational courses will be offered at Washburne Trade school, Jones Commercial High school, and Dunbar Vocational school. Regular night schools will be conducted at Lake View, Schurz, Wells, Englewood, Fenger, Phillips, Austin, and Crane High schools.

SERGEANT TELLS HOW HE KICKED BOMBS ON PLANE

Technical Sgt. James R. Spencer, a radio operator on a Flying Fortress and veteran of 63 sorties, 50 of which reached their targets, is spending a furlough in the home of his sister, Mrs. R. B. Finn, 7311 Quick st., River Forest, after two years in service.

Sgt. J. R. Spencer

Sgt. Spencer said one of his most vivid recollections was of a run in which he had to kick his bombs because they failed to drop when released. He also told of an instance in which his plane cracked up and he escaped unscathed.

He holds a distinguished unit citation, the air medal with seven clusters, three battle stars representing engagements in the Italian, Russian, and European theaters, and a good conduct award. He is on military leave from the United Air Lines.

On D-day he was in Russia. "The Russian people who follow every move of the war, were overjoyed," he said. "Whenever we went into a town after a raid the people would throw flowers at us." He praised the Russians for the rapidity with which they have reconstructed their war razed cities.

FIGHT TO SAVE SCHOOLS FROM PRESSURE BILL

Chicago leaders in a fight to keep freedom in free public education spoke out yesterday against what they called New Deal scheming for passage of a federal aid to education bill, which would distribute 300 million dollars a year to schools thruout the nation.

Freedom in public education ceases, they said, when the power of operating its own schools is taken from the local community and placed in the hands of Washington burocrats. The aid to education bill, proposed every year for the last five years and now about to be proposed again in the house of representatives, would remove local control, they said.

Called Pressure Group.

The National Education association, these leaders charged, has become a pressure group for the New Deal, seeking private gain, and is continuing "desperate" efforts to gain immediate consideration for the bill. N. E. A. leaders are urging teacher members to write their congressmen demanding the bill be brought out of committee and put to vote on the house floor.

The N. E. A. leaders see in the subsidy bill an opportunity to grab soft jobs for themselves and easy money for a multiple experimentation in so-called advanced education, the Chicago spokesman said.

The Chicago leaders include Mrs. Claude I. Palmer, president of the Friends of the Public Schools of America, with branches in every state; Wilbur Helm, first vice president of the national organization and head of the Illinois branch, and George W. Robnett, executive secretary of the Church League of America.

Example of Pressure.

The latest bulletin of the Friends of the Public Schools, edited by Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, retired, in Washington, asserts the activities of the N. E. A. are "another example of apparent pressure by secret political directives and high pressure methods of other types being used by the N. E. A. to get all education under centralized control."

The bulletin charges the union of school and state in a nationally controled educational system "is just as dangerous to human liberty as a union of church and state," which the nation's founders feared and provided against.

CUBA TO LET U. S. USE WAR BASES, GRAU DECLARES

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 [Special].—President Elect Ramon Grau San Martin of Cuba today pledged continued availability of his country's military and naval bases after the war for America's use in hemisphere defense.

He said at a press conference that worked thru a confederate who was anti-Jewish and pro-Nazi.

"Prominent in this group," the report stated, "was Anna Wolkoff, a naturalized British subject of Russian origin, the daughter of a former admiral of the imperial Russian navy. Miss Wolkoff had resided in Great Britain since emigrating, with her father, from Russia following the Bolshevist revolution, had been hospitably received, and had made a considerable circle of friends among Londoners of standing, some of whom had assisted in setting up the Wolkoff family in a small business.

"After the outbreak of the present war, the British had become interested in Miss Wolkoff's activities, believing she was in sympathy with certain of Germany's objectives; that she and some of her associates were hostile to Britain's war effort; that she was involved in pro-German propaganda; that she had a channel of communication with Germany, and that she was making use of that channel of communication.

"Kent had been observed by Scotland Yard as having been in frequent contact with Anna Wolkoff and in touch with others of a group known to her.

Kent's Rooms Searched.

Scotland Yard asked permission to search Kent's rooms in the belief Miss Wolkoff was receiving information from him. Diplomatic immunity was waived by Joseph Kennedy, then the ambassador. The search was made in the presence of an embassy representative.

"It revealed that Kent had in his possession copies of embassy material totaling more than 1,500 individual papers," the report continued. "He also had two newly made duplicate keys to the index bureau and code room; these being unauthorized and in addition to the keys furnished him officially for his use as code clerk. He explained tht he had these keys made so that in the event he should ever be transferred from code work to another section of the embassy he would still have access to the code room.

"Also found in his possession were two photographic plates of embassy documents believed to have been made by confederates for the purpose of endeavoring to transmit prints thereof to Germany, and certain printed propaganda material which was prejudicial to the British conduct of the war. Police established that some of the papers found had been transmitted to an agent of a foreign power."

Job in Berlin Sought.

Kent had applied for transfer to Berlin. When asked what he would have done with the documents in that event, Kent said he regarded the question as a hypothetical one, according to the report.

"Regardless of the purpose for which Kent had taken this material from the embassy, he had done so without authorization, in violation of the most elementary principles governing the rules for the preservation of the secrecy of the government's correspondence," the state department said. "By his own showing he had, while occupying a very special position of confidence within the embassy, displayed a shocking disregard for every principle of decency and honor so far as his obligations to the United States were concerned.

"The removal of so large a number of documents from the embassy premises compromised the whole confidential communications system of the United States, bringing into the question the security of secret ciphers. It was obvious impossible to continue his services, and Kent was dismissed from the government service as of May 20, 1940. Thereafter the question of diplomatic immunity did not arise."

Two Placed on Trial.

Ambassador Kennedy agreed to Kent's detention and he was placed on trial before a jury Aug. 8, 1940. The trial was held "in camera because of the harmful effects to British counter-espionage efforts." Miss Wolkoff was also placed on trial.

On Oct. 28, 1940, Kent was found guilty of violating the official secrets act. Sentence was postponed until the completion of Miss Wolkoff's trial. On Nov. 7 he was sentenced to seven years in prison and Miss Wolkoff was sentenced to 10 years.

"In reviewing the Kent case it is important to bear in mind the circumstances surrounding it," the state department said. "At the time of Kent's arrest and trial Great Britain was at war and the United States was not. The case involved a group of people suspected of subversive activities.

"The interests of Great Britain in such as case, at a time when it was fighting for its existence were therefore preeminent. Deep as was the concern of the government of the United States over a betrayal of trust by one of its employes, it is hardly conceivable that it would have been justified in asking the government of Great Britain to waive jurisdiction over an American citizen in the circumstances described."

MOZART EVENING THRILLS 30,000 AT AIR THEATER

Balmy Breezes, Moon Do Their Part.

BY CLAUDIA CASSIDY.

There are times when the weather man deserves a decoration. Almost anything can happen this time of year on the lake front, but last night the Chicago Theater of the Air drew balmy breezes and a great veiled moon for its Grant park farewell with the all Mozart program, "The Rebel of Salzburg."

More than 30,000 people found the combination irresistible, and their reward was an evening of unusual charm, highlighted by the appearance of Heinzl Weber, 11, son of Henry Weber and Marion Claire, who impersonated the young Mozart to play the first movement of the Sonata for two Pianos in D major with his father.

An exceptionally attractive boy, Heinzl took the whole thing in his stride, being far too absorbed in the music to let less important factors intrude. He simply sat down, a smaller, white suited replica of his father, and the two of them played with the intimate give and take, and at the same time the elegance of style that is Mozart for two people, or 30,000.

Quality of Intimacy.

The chief secret of tne evening's success was precisely this quality of intimacy, which knew it could rely on the sound equipment to reach its outflung audience.

Of all the concerts I have heard at Grant park, and they have been legion, this was the most adequately projected. What wizardry went into its engineering, I've no idea, but the sounds of orchestra and voices, even of the temperamental piano, were amplified with rare fidelity. Given good musicians, expert engineering, and the whole magic, almost matchless world of Mozart to choose from, Mr. Weber had a conductor's field day.

In music from the operas and the enchanting "Haffner" symphony, the W-G-N orchestra took on a laciness of texture, an exactness of style, even a blandness of tone rarely heard in open air performance. The chorus sang brilliantly in the "Ave Verum" and the jubilant Gloria, and the three vocal soloists, Virginia Haskins, Angelo Raffaelli and Reinhold Schmidt, kept up the high standard.

Sings with Flutelike Skill.

A Dresden figurine of a soprano, Miss Haskins sang the exultant "Alleluia" with flutelike skill, while Mr. Raffaelli's way with Tamino's air from "The Magic Flute" indicated we may have a new Mozart tenor on the way up. Mr. Schmidt tossed off the warlike railleries of Figaro as expertly as a stylistic juggler.

All this was broadcast over W-G-N and the Mutual network, and for the audience at the park there was more to come, including a taste of Symphonie Concertante, with Robert Quick, concertmaster, and Armand Roth, viola. Jack La Frandre was responsible for the production, and the dramatic cast got its biggest laugh of the evening when the young Mozart was offered a fine job at $75 a year.

Next Saturday night the Chicago Theater of the Air moves back to the W-G-N studios, to present a production created from the music and memories of George Gershwin.

BRIGHT FUTURE FOR SYNTHETIC RUBBER IS SEEN

Office Abolished

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 (AP).—President Roosevelt today issued an executive order abolishing the war time office of the rubber director and transferring most of its authority and functions to the war production board. Stockpiling and research programs become the responsibility of the rubber reserve company, which is under the direction of Secretary of Commerce Jones.

The rubber reserve company also assumes responsibility for operation of plants of the synthetic rubber program. J. A. Krug, acting WPB chairman, announced the appointment of James F. Clark, assistant deputy director of ORD, to head a new rubber bureau in WPB.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2.—Peace time benefits from the continued operation of the war born synthetic rubber industry will be enjoyed by all federal taxpayers and by all users of rubber goods. No one will be missed. The infant will have better waterproof panties and even the corpse will have the protection of better seals for his coffin.

Col. Bradley Dewey, upon resigning his post as rubber director with all the synthetic plants in production, insisted this new industry is here to stay unless it is suppressed for some fancy global political theory of aiding the British and Dutch South Pacific colonies. In a free market, Dewey said, synthetic can compete with natural rubber on a basis of price and quality.

Taxpayers Have Investment.

"The taxpayers have an investment of three-fourths of a billion dollars in these artificial rubber plants," said Dewey. "If there were no other reason for continuing the manufacture of artificial rubber, reason enough would be to get a further return to the federal treasury on this investment. To maintain them in idleness, as part of our permanent defense equipment, would be a further substantial drain on the treasury.

"Actually, the synthetic rubber industry will give the public cheaper, better, and more rubber goods, including tires. There will be many new rubber products on the market. There will be improvements in familiar rubber products.

Made Tremendous Strides.

"Synthetic rubber is a chemical creation. Its characteristics can be tailored to fit requirements better than can the natural latex with its inherent characteristics. For some uses, we need hard rubber; for other uses, soft rubber; for some uses, resistance to certain acids is essential, and for other uses, longevity is a main objective.

"The manufacture of synthetics in large quantities in America is less than two years old. Research has made tremendous developments in this brief time. Research is continuing to make rapid advancements, and they'll continue in peace time.

"The fluctuation in the prices of natural rubber was a serious deterrent to the manufacture of rubber goods in pre-war years. An enterprise could not calculate future costs of its raw material in planning to market a new product."

British-Dutch Cartels.

Prices in pre-war years were manipulated by a British-Dutch cartel assisted by their government. These empires, in their Pacific colonies now in the hands of the Japanese, owned plantations producing 90 per cent of the world's rubber supply.

"The cost of synthetic will be a ceiling on the price of natural rubber," Dewey continued. "Americans will get cheaper tires, telephone instruments, rain garments, electric insulation, tooth brush handles, and a multitude of other items than they would without the synthetic industry.

"The manufacture of rubber goods in America was a billion dollar a year business before the war, employing 207,000 workers. With price stabilization and the advantages of synthetic, this business is expected to expand in peace time from 50 to 100 per cent. The benefits, of course, will extend thru the wholesale and retail trade channels as the public buys and enjoys getting the new products.

Will Aid Taxpayers.

The manufacture of the rubber itself is a quarter of a billion dollar a year business that can be retained in America after the war rather than having this money drained from the country thru the purchase of imports. It's a bigger element in the economy of the country than any of the proposals for government financing of post-war unemployment relief projects. And, instead of costing the taxpayers money, it will make money for the taxpayers whose income levies and war bond purchases have bought 95 per cent of the manufacturing facilities.

HOLIDAY CROWDS RACE TO STAND IN TRAIN AISLES

Labor day celebrators divided themselves yesterday into two classes—those who stayed on the job to hurry the time for celebration of the end of the war and those who grabbed a double holiday opportunity to tax already overcrowded transportation facilities.

"We have no breathing room at all," commented one harassed railroad employe.

Railroad officials, whose stay-at-home-in-war time advice had been largely disregarded, said that today would be comparatively quiet, since the travelers seemed to have reached their destinations Friday night and wouldn't start return trips until as late as possible tomorrow.

One train from Kansas City and the southwest arrived Friday night with 544 seats and 1,044 passengers.

Automobile traffic from Illinois and Indiana was the lightest for a Labor day week-end in 30 years, said Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club.

The Chicago Motor club said that statistics for other holidays indicated that eight persons would meet death in traffic accidents in the Chicago area over the week-end and approximately 500 would suffer injuries.

Many factories, having no trouble in maintaining their production schedules, planned to shut down for Labor day. Ordnance district officials said, however, that every plant working on urgent orders for critical items would work full shifts.

MOVE TO HALT OVERCHARGE ON USED CAR SALES

New regulations aimed at halting the daily collection of thousands of dollars from Chicagoans in overcharges on used automobiles will be put into effect by the office of price administration Sept. 12, Rae E. Walters, regional administrator, said yesterday.

The new rules will affect "curbstone dealers" who charge the 25 per cent over base prices allowed by the OPA for reconditioning and warranty of used cars, Walters said, but who fail to make good in many ways. Legitimate dealers, he said, asked Chester Bowles, price administrator, to put new curbs on the vacant lot dealers. The amendments followed.

The new rules provide that all dealers must file inventory reports as of Sept. 11 with their local boards, and after that date certificates of transfers when they buy cars for resale. Buyers will be required to file similar certificates with their boards before they can obtain gasoline rations.

BOY ATTEMPTS TO POISON DAD; SISTER IS KILLED

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 2 [Special].—William J. MacKay, 19, who told police he "wanted to get" his father because "he was always after me to get a job," today was held without charge after police said he confessed poisoning foods and liquids in the family refrigerator from which his sister, Isabelle, 14, obtained a lunch shortly before her death yesterday.

William MacKay [top] and Isabelle MacKay.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex MacKay, said Isabelle had come home for lunch before noon yesterday from a department store, where she was employed.

"She had a bacon and tomato sandwich and then went to the refrigerator and poured a glass of water from a bottle we keep there," Mrs. MacKay told police. "She drank a mouthful and then said 'that water tastes terrible.' Then she fell."

Rushed to Hospital.

The girl, who would have been a 10th grade student this fall, died a few minutes after being rushed to Receiving hospital.

Detective Lt. Lester Chorpening of the police homicide squad said young MacKay, known in his neighborhood as "The Scientist" because he seldom left home at night and "had dates" only when urged, had confessed after eight hours of questioning that he had poured three or four tablespoons of cyanide crystals into water, milk and applesauce in the refrigerator.

"I just put it in the things I thought my father would get first," Chorpening quoted from the statement. "I didn't want to poison the others."

Decides on Poison.

Chorpening quoted MacKay as saying his father, a building contractor, had "kept after me to get a job" but, because of poor eyesight and lack of skill, he had had difficulty in keeping jobs.

The detective said MacKay liked his mother and "felt my troubles would end" if his father were dead.

MacKay purchased a pound of the cyanide from a wholesale drug firm on Aug. 15, police said, telling the clerk he wanted it for chemical experiments.

Thursday night after returning from a movie, MacKay told police, he poured the cyanide into the water, milk and applesauce. The poison was not discovered until the sister was stricken yesterday.

DROWNING BOY IN DEATH GRASP 2 HOURS SAVED

More than two hours' resuscitation efforts succeeded early yesterday in reviving William Schroeder, 18, of 8635 Lynndale av., River Grove, after he and two companions were rescued from Island lake, three miles west of Wauconda. The other boys, Ervin Schierhorn, 17, River rd. and Elm st., Franklin Park, and George Conrad, 17, of 2701 Eldon lane, Franklin Park, were revived quickly. Dr. J. A. Ross, mayor of Wauconda, who directed the treatment, said Schroeder had suffered a heart attack. He was pronounced out of danger yesterday.

FREE FOR ALL WINS $60,750 FUTURITY; ICANGETIT 2D

ERRARD THIRD IN WASHINGTON PARK FIXTURE

Owner Marsch Picks Up $47,850.

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN.

John Marsch's Free for All, unbeaten son of Questionnaire-Panay and one of the two leading candidates for the 2 year old championship of 1944, scored his fifth consecutive victory in the sixth running of the $60,750 Washington Park Futurity at Washington Park yesterday.

Free for All, ridden by Otto Grohs, displayed his vaunted stretch running ability to beat Henry Tikulski's Icangetit by a length and a quarter after his running mate, Errard, had set the pace all the way around in the six furlong sprint and tossed away second money just a few strides from the finish.

Sir Bim Runs Fourth.

Fourth in the field of five starters was Don Ameche's Sir Bim, which followed the pace set by Buddy Haas on Errard until the going got too fast. Fighting Don, Miss Gertrude Donovan's import from Long Island and second choice in the betting, got off poorly and was last all the way.

To the winner went first money of $47,850 and to Owner Marsch also goes the honor of having won nine futurities in the last three years, an accomplishment far and away the best in the record books.

Odds Are Very Short.

The Marsch entry went to the post at odds of 1 to 3 and returned $2.60 to win and $2.20 to place. Icangetit, which closed at 7 to 1, paid $2.60 to place. There was no show pool, but $151,630 was wagered on the race.

In the scramble for position immediately after the break, Sir Bim, with Al Bodiou up, took a momentary lead, but Haas quickly sent Errard to the front while Free for All settled into third place. Fighting Don was fourth for a couple of seconds on the run down the back stretch, but Icangetit passed him and as they went into the turn Errard was out in front by two lengths with Sir Bim second.

Errard Hugs the Rail.

As the field straightened out in the stretch, Errard held the rail, two lengths in front of Sir Bim while on the outside came Free for All, two lengths back. Here Grohs gave Free for All his head and he passed Sir Bim before reaching midstretch, but Errard still was out there, two lengths to the good and striding easily.

Free for All came on under a drive in the last furlong to take the lead and, when Haas saw that his stablemate had victory assured, he eased up. In fact he let go so completely in the closing strides Icangetit, finishing with a burst of speed, took second from him by a head.

Free for All's time was 1:13 1/5 on a racing strip tabled "good."

E. J. Healy's Rattle-de-Bang, ridden by Sylvester Haynes, and Mrs. M. P. Lyons' Liason, with Billy Nichols up, accounted for the first and second races and a $89.60 daily double. Rattle-de-Bang paid $8.40 for $2 and Liason returned $11.60.

Marsch Horses to Go East.

Yesterday's mutuel handle went over the million dollar mark for the 14th time in 66 days of racing at the Homewood track this season. The wagering totaled $1,216,136 for the eight race card. The attendance was estimated at 21,000.

Free For All and Errard are to be shipped to New York next week to fill engagements in the Cowdin stakes and the historic Belmont Futurity to be run on Sept. 30. In the Belmont, Free For All will race it out with Walter M. Jefford's unbeaten Pavot, the only obstacle in his path to the juvenile championship. Pavot yesterday won his seventh in a row without defeat as he took the Hopeful stakes at Belmont by eight lengths.

ICANGETIT COULDN'T, BUT FREE FOR ALL TAKES FIFTH STRAIGHT

Free for All, with Jockey Otto Grohs in the saddle, finishing a length and a quarter in front of Icangetit in the sixth running of the $25,000 added Washington Futurity at Washington Park yesterday. Spreadeagled behind Free for All, which incidentally turned in his fifth straight triumph for the John Marsch stables, and Icangetit, are Errard, Sir Bim, and Fighting Don. The net value to the winner was $47,850.

Following a familiar path to the winner's circle, John Marsch, whose horses have won nine Futurities in the last three years, and whose Free for All won its fifth straight yesterday, accepted the winner's cup as a matter of routine. Assembled following the presentation are (left to right) Benjamin F. Lindheimer, executive director of Washington Park; Jockey Otto Grohs; Mrs. Grohs; Mr. Marsch, and Burley Parke, trainer of the Marsch stables. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

TIGERS DEFEAT BROWNS, 6 TO 3; TIE WITH YANKEES FOR 2D PLACE

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 2 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns dropped their third straight game to the Detroit Tigers tonight, 6 to 3, leaving them with a one game lead over the Tigers and the Yankees who are tied for second. After the Browns took the lead in the seventh, the Tigers came back with two runs in both the eighth and ninth innings.

Rufe Gentry, the Tigers' starting pitcher, was knocked out in the Browns' seventh inning. He was followed by Roy Henshaw who in turn left in favor of John Gorsica. Frank Overmire took over in the ninth. Gorsica was the winning pitcher and Denny Galehouse, who started but failed to finish, was the loser.

QUARTER BACKS STAR IN DRILLS AT MINNESOTA

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 2 [Special].—It took Minnesota's Gophers, in their best condition because of recent summer drills, exactly one hour until they swung into scrimmage the opening day as they opened fall practice yesterday. And the Gophers, four teams of them, were right back at scrimmage today with the field of candidates swelled to 70.

The most pleasing feature for the second straight day was the quarter back blocking, the finest that Minnesota has had for some time. The combination of Merlin Kispert from Kenyon, Minn., and Walt Edwards of Minneapolis, recalls the Glenn Seidel-Babe Le Voir duo of the 1934-'35 championship years.

Only one practice was held again today. Next week there will be a morning practice for civilians, freshmen, and other newcomers. The afternoon practice will be the only one at which the full squad, including navy men, can attend.

ICANGETIT, outrun early and brought to the extreme outside in the stretch, swerved slightly when approaching the last eighth, but came stoutly when straight, yet appeared lucky to finish second. ERRARD took command under hustling tactics, crossed to the inside before reaching the turn where he was taken in hand, failed to withstand Free For All while under punishment and taken in hand after losing command might have been second had he been ridden out.

Indians Beat White Sox, 5 to 2, on Rocco's 12th Inning Homer

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Mickey Rocco's two home runs—one with one on off Johnny Humphries, which tied the score in the eighth inning, and the other off Gordon Maltzberger, with two on in the Racine Belles, 2 to 1, in 10 infive of the runs by which the Cleveland Indians beat the White Sox, 5 to 2, last night in Comiskey park. It was the second 12 inning game between the two also ran clubs on successive nights.

It was no consolation to the Sox that they should have won in the ninth, when they loaded the bases on Joe Heving with none out, then were stopped by grandpappy Joe, even as he stopped them last Sunday when they had the tying run on third with one out in the eighth.

First One Spoiled Shutout.

Humphries had a 2 to 0, four hit shutout going into the eighth when Rocco stroked one in the right field stand with Paul O'Dea, who had batted for Jim Bagby and walked, on base.

Humphries didn't come out for the ninth and Maltzberger made his first appearance since he strained an arm ligament on Aug. 2. Maltzberger had little trouble in his first comeback inning and started the aforesaid base loading episode by leading off the home ninth with a single.

In the Cleveland 12th Maltzberger threw out Buddy Rosar, but Russ Peters, who had entered the game in the eighth, singled to left. Heving grounded one off Webb's glove near second and then Rocco did his homer encore act, scoring behind Peters and Heving. Hoag and Seerey were retired.

The Sox board of strategy apparently surrendered on the basis of tactics employed in the home 12th. Cass Michaels, sometimes called the highest spirited player on the Sox [he drove in the Sox's second run with a triple in the seventh], opened the 12th with a double and went to

PARKER REACHES NATIONAL TENNIS TOURNEY FINALS

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 2 (AP).—Sgt. Frankie Parker, ranked in the first 10 of American tennis every year since 1933 and considered a championship threat most of those seasons, made his big bid for the title he never has captured when he whipped Lt. Don McNeill of the navy, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2, in the semi-finals today of the national tennis tournament.

McNeill, 1940 champion and seeded second this year, was considered the only serious rival to Ecuador's Francisco Segura in the men's singles division but he was clearly outplayed by Parker. The army air force sergeant, stationed at Muroc field, Cal., will face the winner of tomorrow's clash between Segura and William Talbert of Indianapolis, in the title match Monday.

Talbert Beats Falkenburg.

Talbert entered the semi-final bracket today with a decisive 6-4, 6-4, 6-3 decision over Aviation Cadet Bob Falkenburg of Merced field, Cal., the national junior champion.

Parker's upset triumph overshadowed the women's semi-finals in which defending Champion Pauline Betz of Los Angeles turned in her most decisive victory over her long standing rival, Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Cal., and Margaret Osborne of San Francisco rallied to defeat Dorothy Bundy of Santa Monica.

Miss Betz Wins Easily.

Miss Brough, who extended Miss Betz to three sets in the 1942 and

NATION-WIDE PRO LEAGUE TO OPEN IN 1945

John Keeshin Heads Chicago Group.

Name Shaw Coach

L. T. [BUCK] SHAW, winner of two Sugar Bowl games for the University of Santa Clara, will coach the San Francisco team in the new All-America Football conference, Owner A. J. Morabito announced last night as he boarded a coast bound streamliner.

Shaw was an All-American tackle at Notre Dame in 1921. He coached at North Carolina State and Nevada before going to Santa Clara with Clipper Smith in 1929. When Smith transferred to Villanova in 1936, Shaw was named head coach at Santa Clara, where he led the Broncos to unprecedented triumphs in Pacific coast competition. He resigned from Santa Clara a few months ago after the university lost its army program.

BY ARCH WARD.

This is an announcement of the organization of the All-America Football conference, a new major professional league which will begin operation in 1945. It will include clubs in eight or possibly ten of the key cities of the United States.

Seven franchises already have been granted. Applications for three other memberships in the conference will be voted upon at the next meeting of the newly formed organization.

These are the cities and owners of the seven clubs:

Baltimore—Comdr. Gene Tunney, U. S. N. R.

Buffalo—James Breuil, president of the Frontier Oil company; Sam Cordovano, president of the Globe Construction company, and Will Bennett, treasurer of the Frontier Oil company.

Cleveland—Arthur McBride, taxicab magnate.

San Francisco—Anthony J. Morabito and Allan E. Sorrell, co-owners of the Lumber Terminal company; Ernest J. Turre, general manager of the Del E. Webb Construction company of Phoenix, Ariz.

Prominent business men in Detroit, Philadelphia and Boston are seeking franchises for those cities.

Complete Plans in Chicago.

Organization of the All-America conference was begun several months ago and was completed yesterday at a meeting of club owners in Chicago. Several of the most widely known sportsmen in the land are under consideration for the presidency.

Two resolutions were adopted at the Chicago meeting which are certain to help shape the success of the conference. They are:

1. No club will be allowed to employ a coach or player who is under contract to any team in the National Football league.

2. No player will be admitted into the organization who has college football eligibility remaining.

All clubs are financed by men of millionaire incomes who are prepared to engage in a battle of dollars with the National Football league, if necessary. The restriction on talent raids was adopted to avoid such conflict.

Protect College Teams.

The second resolution was passed to protect college football. Many undergraduate players have had their education interrupted by the war. Some might not return to complete their studies, if they were offered opportunity to make quick money in football. It was the collective judgment of the owners of clubs in the All-America conference that these men should return to their alma maters and finish their scholastic work and gridiron eligibility.

Four of the seven cities which have been awarded franchises—San Francisco, Los Angeles, Baltimore, and Buffalo—will have no competition from the National Football league as it is now constituted. Effort will be made to avoid conflicts in dates and playing sites where a town will be represented by teams in both organizations.

KEESHIN THINKS BISONS IS GOOD NAME FOR TEAM

Promises Chicago Pros Will Be Strong.

Mrs. Gehrig Happy

MRS. LOU GEHRIG, who will be a partner of Ray Ryan, Evansville, Ind., oil man, in the operation of the New York club in the All-America Football conference, returned to New York last night after attending the meeting of club owners in Chicago.

"I am happy to be associated with a sports venture in New York," the widow of the famous Yankee first baseman told reporters. "Mr. Ryan and I have one ambition in this enterprise—to win a championship for New York every season. Our immediate task is to find a coach who can set about attaining that objective."

John L. Keeshin, owner of the Chicago club in the newly organized All-America football conference, said last night he had not decided on a name for his team but he was considering calling it the Bisons.

Pressed for a reason why he would choose the name Bisons, Keeshin said that in reading early American history he learned that bisons always were able to whip Bears.

"We will put a team on the field that will keep the gridiron spotlight on Chicago," the motor transport magnate predicted. "We are going after the best available coach. He will be a man who has established himself in the front ranks of collegiate football. We hope to engage a coach who also can serve as general manager. I know nothing about the operation of a football club and it will be my job to employ a man who does. I'll supply the money and it will be up to him to develop a team that will be a credit to Chicago.

"We are not going to raid the roster of the Chicago Bears, Chicago Cardinals, or any other team in the National Football league. The unanimous agreement of club owners definitely prohibits such tactics," Keeshin added.

SHOSTROM WINS PUBLIC PARKS TENNIS CROWN

Charles Shostrom of Hamilton park successfully defended his Public Parks tennis championship yesterday by defeating Gene Vash of Garfield park, 8-6, 6-4, in the tournament finals on the Waveland courts in Lincoln park. Shostrom also gained the finals of the men's doubles division when he and Henry Schofield beat Gene Buckowicke and Chuck Ross of McKinley park, 6-3, 8-6. Their opponents in the finals will be John Spoor and Harrie Hall, Indian Boundary park, who yesterday beat Mel Timmons and Frank Buchler, Ogden park, 2-6, 6-4, 9-7.

Violet Kastl of Garfield park won the woman's singles crown by beating Marian Hart, East End park, 6-3, 7-5 in the finals. Harry Laser of Garfield park; Doris Henderson, Tuley park; John Potel, Kelvyn park, and Vivian Greenberg, Eugene Field park, won the championships in the other divisions.

Brewers Purchase Hurler from Williamsport Club

Williamsport, Pa., Sept. 2 (AP).—The Williamsport Grays today announced the sale of Pitcher Lou Grasmik to Milwaukee of the American association. Grasmik, who won 11 and lost six games for the Grays, left for Milwaukee today.

STATEMENT BY LAYDEN

"I have had no contact, direct or otherwise, with the new All-America Football conference," Elmer Layden, commissioner of the National Football league, said last night, "but anything which fosters coöperation for the good of the game is all right with me."

FIVE VETERANS ON HAND AS N. U. STARTS DRILLS

50 Wildcats Report for Football Squad.

A number of players who will be counted on this fall were not present yesterday because of week-end leaves granted the navy V-12 unit. Nearly 50 more players are expected to put in an appearance this week. The late comers will include four more letter men from the 1943 team.

Tackles Head Newcomers.

Veterans on hand yesterday included Bob Funderburg, full back of Belvidere, Ill.; Frank Clawson, quarter back of Sheldon, Ill.; Jack Harker of La Salle, Ill., Hank Altepeter of St. Louis, half backs, and John Kroeger, tackle, of Eldridge, Ia. All are enrolled in the navy R. O. T. C. unit and were sophomores last year.

Prominent among the newcomers was a trio of husky tackles who are expected to make strong bids for regular jobs this fall. There were Earl Crum, 230 pounder from Rawlins, Wyo., who saw service with the Seebees before being transferred to the V-12 unit; Vernon Lightfoot of Coffeyville, Kas., former Missouri player now enrolled in the medical school, and Oral Congdon, 220 pound freshman civilian from Kenosha.

Two on Hand from St. George.

The freshman ranks also include two members of St. George High school's Chicago prep champions of last year. They are Jim O'Malley, center, and Ken Wiltgen, end. Among the other freshmen are Jim Yungwirth, half back, and John Meulendyke, full back, of Fond du Lac, Wis., Bud Pettit, end, and Jack Doyle of Shorewood High school, Milwaukee, and Steve Bennett, tackle of Green Bay, Wis.

NEWS FROM ARMY AND NAVY POSTS

BY FRANK MASTRO.

Iowa Pre-Flight.

IOWA Pre-Flight school's football team, several shades below its par of the past two years in the way of collegiate personnel, will receive one of its major contributions Wednesday when Cadet Alex Kapter, the Waukegan guard who captained Northwestern a year ago, arrives with the incoming battalion. . . . He will be even more welcome to Lt. Comdr. Jack Meagher, coach of the Seahawks, because of the acute shortage of guards on the present roster. . . . # WPB Says Hunters May Buy Shells—It Doesn't Say Where

BY BOB BECKER.

Last fall nationally known leaders in conservation lauded the recreational value of hunting and the dividend that the sport paid in millions of pounds of game meat which was added to the nation's larder in these days of rationing.

This fall finds our stocks of wild deer, pheasants, ducks, and other species of wild game, [which can legally be harvested only by hunters] even larger than in 1943. Already reports are reaching this department of crop damage from ducks in some of the states. There will be more of these reports as the season progresses and the largest duck population that this country has heard about in recent years starts flying southward.

Hunters Lack Shells.

As far as hunters [with ammunition] are concerned, the game picture is nothing less than beautiful, what with the duck crop 10 per cent larger than last year with 125,000,000 to 150,000,000 birds due to migrate; pheasants so plentiful in the northwest that they are a nuisance; deer population way up.

Only one thing mars the outlook—the lack of shotgun shells. It's no secret that fish and wildlife officials asked authorities for sufficient ammunition so that hunters could take a reasonable percentage of the game crop which has been increasing in most states. Such a procedure is sound management of our wildlife resources.

But here is the open season on doves and squirrels in Illinois and other seasons in northern states only a couple of weeks away and an adequate supply of ammunition is not in the dealers' hands, altho the WPB says it's quite allright to walk right in and buy some shotgun shells. The WPB says the hunter's quota is four boxes of shotgun shells. The harassed sporting goods dealers say, "Try and get 'em," for they have no shells.

Permits Mean Nothing.

Here is the gloomy prediction by a larger Chicago wholesaler who is close to the ammunition situation. "If there are so many shells ready for dealers to sell, why does an ammunition company still owe me a large quantity on one of my orders? Then, too, the army recently asked for 177 million shotgun shells, which probably must be made before the hunter gets any. I predict that there will be much the same shortage and scramble for shotgun shells this fall as there was in 1943. A permit from the WPB to buy shells doesn't put 'em on a dealer's shelves."

This wholesaler believes that only 20 or 22 per cent of the normal year's production of shotgun shells will be on the market this year. [This scared us so much that we went right out and bought another pound of black powder for our muzzle loader and started to hunt up another 100 percussion caps for the old musket!]

All They Need Is Shells.

If ammunition in sufficient quantity could be made available soon, at least 250 million or more pounds of wild game meat might be utilized in place of rationed meats. The pheasant populations in the northwest are the highest in many a year. A take of 3½ to 4 million pheasants in both North and South Dakota seems possible without endangering the future supply of birds. North Dakota alone reports 9 million birds in the fields.

Hutson Coaxed Back by Packers for Tenth Year

For the third straight season, the Green Bay Packers of the National professional football league have coaxed Don Hutson, pass-catching end, out of announced retirement.

Hutson's decision to return for his 10th pro season was disclosed yesterday when Coach Curly Lambeau requested Commissioner Elmer Layden to reinstate Don on the Packers' active list.

Hutson, contracted as an assistant Packer coach after winning all-league honors at end seven out of nine seasons, has been under doctor's care for treatment of an eye infection the last five weeks. He will begin working out next week, if physicians permit.

The former Alabama star first announced his retirement three years ago, but yielded to pleas of his teammates to return for one more season.

PROS WON'T PUSH CARD - STEELER ELEVEN AROUND

BY EDWARD PRELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Waukesha, Wis., Sept. 2 [Special].—You have only to glance at the large individuals congregated here under the twin banners of the Chicago Cardinals and the Pittsburgh Steelers to become convinced they are not going to be pushed around this fall on National Football league gridirons.

They have five tackles and hope to pick up a sixth and none weighs under 225 pounds. Their four guards range from 210 to 235, four ends average more than 200 pounds, as do the four centers.

Size Should Help.

Size, of course, doesn't make a football team, but it should go a long way in this war year. This Cardinal-Steeler line may prove to be the league's best before the campaign is over, but the back field is a different story. It's definitely doubtful, with not too classy on the surface, and further handicapped by 1944 adoption of the tricky T-formation man in motion offense popularized by their cross-town rivals, the Bears.

The combination has 27 players in camp and hopes to pick up two more when training operations are shifted to Pittsburgh next week. The Card-Pitts will move from their Carroll college base tomorrow for Pittsburgh, remaining there until next Friday, when they leave for Philadelphia to play the Eagles Sept. 12 in a charity game.

Walter Kiesling of the Steelers, and Phil Handler of the Cardinals, co-coaches, are worried over their back field and particularly quarter back, which is the key position in the T attack. Walter Masters, who was 33 years old last year as a member of the Bears, now admits of 37 years and he will be the combine's quarter back.

Has a Varied Career.

"No one believed me last year when I said I was 33," the former Penn star laughed, "so I might as well tell the truth."

Masters, a sharp baldish fellow, ended his football days at Penn in 1930 and then followed an amazing sports career. He pitched for the Washington Senators in 1931. The next year he played Canadian football for the Ottawa club in the inter-provincial league, but was barred as a player in 1932 when it was learned he had been a professional in baseball. So Walter then coached the team for two seasons.

In 1935 he coached at St. Patrick college in Ottawa and the following year was president, secretary, manager, pitcher, and outfielder of the Ottawa club in the Canadian-American baseball league. He was with the Philadelphia Eagles in 1936. In 1937 he played with the Wilmington [Del.] Clippers, then coached the same unit in 1938-'39-'40 and doubled as a player.

Wager Looks Good.

He tried a comeback with the Bears last season and was traded, along with Clint Wager, for Al Babartsky of the Cardinals. Wager, 6 foot 5½ inch end, is here with the Cards and the coaches figure he may be in for a big year. Wager is the young man who cracked his skull last year with his knee while punting.

Also working out at quarter back are Coley McDonald, with Pittsburgh several seasons ago, and John P. McCarthy, a prematurely gray youngster from St. Francis college.

Twelve of the 1943 Cardinals are in camp and the Steelers have six holdovers for a fine representation in veterans. The oldest gent is Conway Baker, the Shreveport city jailer, a 230 pound guard who is ready for his 10th season with the Cards. Other Card guards from '43 are Lou Marotti, 220; Gordon Wilson, 235, and Marshall Foch Robnett, former Texas Aggie player, has been shifted to center where he is battling the Steelers' Al Wukits for the job. John Perko, 210, is the Steelers' lone guard.

Boast Veteran Tackels.

Chester Bulger, 235; Clarence Booth, 230, and Gilford [Cactus Face] Duggan, 225, are three returning Cardinal tackles, blending with Ted Doyle, 230; Elmer Merkovsky, 230, and Eberle Schultz, 230. Schultze, who played at Nebraska, is expected to join the team in Pittsburgh along with two rookies, Bob Norman of Evanston, and George L. Smith, a Pittcurgh high school lad.

Cardinal ends are Wager, 220, and Freeman Rexer, 210, best of the wingmen, at least in pass catching, appears to be Pittsburgh's Tony C. Bova, 190; Walter Kichefsky, 212, former Steeler, gives the combine a fourth experienced end.

Shift Grigas to Full Back.

John Grigas of the Cards has been shifted to full back in the T-formation setup. Walter Rankin, another guard, is in the same department, as is David Ghaul, a plump New Jerseyite who appears to be the best punter in camp.

Johnny Butler, the Steelers' veteran from Tennessee, will be at left half aided by George Magulick, 150 pound speedster from St. Francis college. Robert Thurbon is expected to join up at Pittsburgh and qualify at right half, with help from Bernard Semes of Duquesne and Tony Aiello of Youngstown, both newcomers. As now distributed, there are 18 linemen and 11 backs and the squad is only two over the league limit.

ADDRESS A B 54, TRIBUNE

The Home Front

BY WILLIAM BAYLISS.

NO follower of the ponies could study his form charts much more closely than Chicagoland industrial golf enthusiasts are checking up on team and individual records of Industrial Amateur Golf association members. The reason? They're trying to figure out possible winners in the second I. A. G. A. tournament, scheduled for the Elmgate Golf club next Sunday.

Forty-eight foursomes will compete for an array of team and individual trophies, the entrants being the pick of the field of industrial golfers which has been playing in preliminary tournaments in north, south and west zones this summer. The chief award is the Claud S. Gordon trophy, donated last year by the league organizer and president, whose name it bears. This goes to the industry whose foursome turns in the low gross score. It now is held by the American Steel and Wire team of Waukegan, as a result of a victory in last year's first meet.

Waukegan Team to Make Bid for Second Straight Golf Title.

The defending champions are planning on putting up a spirited fight to keep the trophy, but are expecting some hot competition and are not likely to be disappointed. In support of that statement, I. A. G. A. officials are ready to quote you some pertinent comparative scores. For example, they'll tell you that the Abbott Laboratories team, another north zone representatives, has the low average score for the season, 307, with American Steel and Wire one stroke back at 308 and American Can company a third dangerous contender at 314.

The battle for the low net trophy, provided by the Chicago Sports association, will be just as close as the competition among the possibly more expert, but no more enthusiastic mashie wielders referred to above. After deducting handicaps, the low net average in the preliminary meets is held by Bell & Gossett, 288. The American Steel and Wire No. 1 team, already mentioned as the defending champion and a good bet in the gross division, also boasts a 292 figure in the handicap rankings, the same as is held by Cyclone Fence.

Galvin Plant's Bowling Leagues Start Activities This Week.

Getting into the individual competition, the task of picking a winner becomes more and more difficult and most of the 48 teams expects to have a candidate for this honor. Eddie Slobe of Johnson Motors had the low individual score in the 1943 meet and may be a repeater. Other consistently low scorers include Nello Campagni of Abbott; Frank Ogrin of American Steel and Wire; Jim Helminger, another Abbott star, and a host of others.

Two bowling leagues, one made up of 24 men's teams and the other of 12 women's quintets from among employes of the Galvin Manufacturing corporation, 4545 W. Augusta blvd., will open their fall and winter schedule this week. The Galvin teams, whose members spend their working hours turning out Motorola radio equipment for military and naval use, will do their bowling at the Pioneer arcade, the women rolling Tuesday nights and the men taking over in two shifts on Fridays. Ruth Busse and Joseph Bonk are the presidents of the two leagues.

The J. P. Seeburg Social and Athletic association, which has charge of recreational activities of employes of the Seeburg plant at 1510 Dayton st., will have a homecoming for workers and their friends Tuesday, Sept. 12 in Rock-Ola stadium, 4200 N. Central av. There will be three softball games, two of them to settle the championships of the men's and women's plant leagues. The other will be an extra special contest between Earl Shipley's Clowns and a team made up of managers of the various plant teams. J. L. Seeburg, vice president of the company, will present awards to the champion teams, Norman J. Lind, president of the employes' association, is in charge of the event.

Officials of the Industrial Amateur Golf association and the Chicago Sports association, with four trophies donated by the latter group for Chicagoland industrial golfers. Left to right are George R. Kane, I. A. G. A. secretary; Thomas J. Bowler, C. S. A. treasurer; Claud S. Gordon, I. A. G. A. president; Harry Berz, C. S. A. secretary, and Dan O'Brien, chairman I. A. G. A. ways and means committee. The large trophy will go to the foursome turning in the low net score in the finals next Sunday, while the smaller ones are for low net teams from the three zones in which preliminary competition was held.

Art Gerken, a former Northwestern university athlete, has been getting some well deserved bouquets out at the Illinois Tool Works as a result of his recent action in postponing an intraplant league softball game between his Shakeproofs and the Hob team. Harry Kuhr, Hob manager, told Art he'd like to postpone the game because three of his regulars would be on their vacations on the scheduled date. Gerken immediately approved the postponement, tho he knew he was giving away an almost certain victory.

The Illinois Tool golfers will hold their first plant tournament Saturday at the Sportsmen's course on the Dundee road in Northbrook Saturday. If earlier tournaments are any criterion, around 100 I. T. W. workers will take part. . . . The Montgomery Ward Schwinn Warehouse baseball team defeated the Onsrud Machine Co. nine, 7 to 1, in a twilight game at Mozart Park Thursday to win the championship playoff of the Mozart Park Industrial league.

Match Softball Team Loses Tourney Opener

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 2.—The 37 year old Paul Derringer nominated himself as a no hit candidate against his onetime Red mates today, but eventually ran out of the cunning that had kept the enemy bats in an impotent state thru six innings. The Rhinelanders opened on him suddenly with two out in the seventh with five successive blows and then tapered off with an eighth inning assault on Japhat [Red] Lynn to send Charley Grimm's Cubs spinning under the weight of a 6 to 1 trimming.

The Cubs conducted their attack against Clyde Shoun, the lefty who once was one of them, but wasn't the kind of an attack that could be termed boisterous. It consisted of seven hits, one short of what the Reds did, but the hits of the Chicagoans were too widely scattered to accomplish much registering at the plate. The lone exception was the sixth inning when the Cubs scored the run that precipitated the deluge against Derringer.

Double Play Delays Reds.

Derringer, until the crash came, operated with such finesse that only one Red escaped retirement in six innings and that was merely an oversight by Roy Hughes who booted a grounder off Steve Mesner's bat at the start of the third. The next survivor was Eric Tipton who profited by an error on the part of Don Johnson at the opening of the seventh. This was quickly fixed up by Johnson launching a double play on Gerald Walker's tap, whereupon Derringer, as well as the Reds, discovered he had run out of ammunition.

The first blow against the possible no-hit performance was a homer arched over the left field wall by Frank McCormick, his 16th of the year. Ray Mueller singled and promptly put on a brazen piece of work that proved important. He stole second while Derringer was holding the ball and conferring with Hughes. Woody Williams scratched a hit to Len Merullo and Mesner singled to left, Mueller scoring. Then Eddie Miller singled to send W. Williams over the plate.

Novikoff Bats for Derringer.

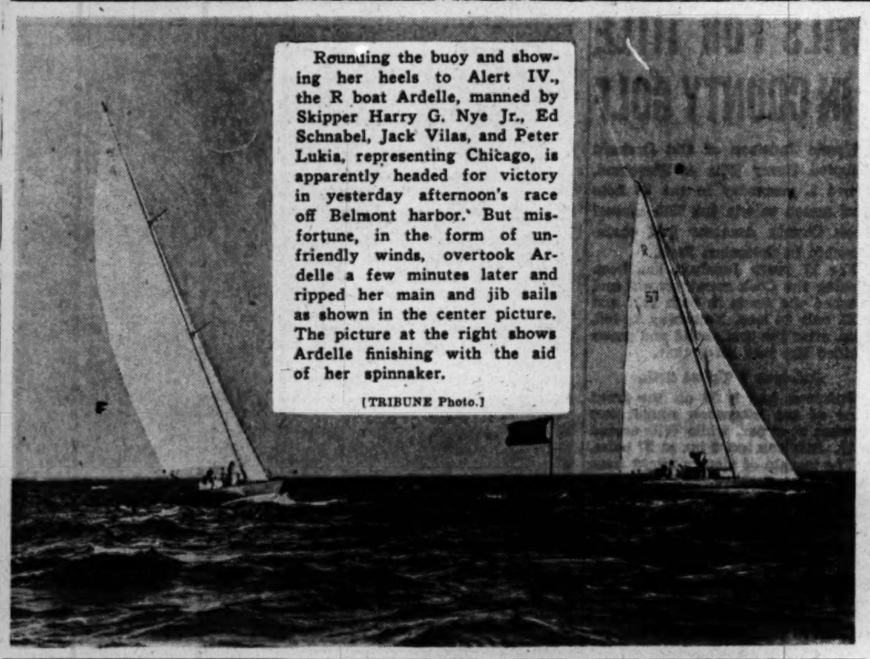
Derringer was removed from the show to let Lou Novikoff bat for him in the eighth, and the jolly Russian singled, which gave Stan Hack a chance to ground into a double play. The alteration brought forth Lynn in the Reds' eighth, and the first thing he did was to slip a pass to Jo Jo White, who sprinted to third on a single by Eric Tipton. Walker fanned and McCormick flied out, White scoring, but trouble broke out again when Mueller and W. Williams singled, each blow driving in a run. Mack Stewart rushed to Lynn's relief to get the inning over without additional distress for Boss Grimm.

The Cubs' high spot in the ninth inning meeting was reached in the sixth when D. Williams opened with a single to center. He went to third on a single by Derringer and scored on Hack's fly. Then Hughes flied out and Cavarretta singled, but Bill Nicholson could produce only a gentle roller to McCormick.

Joe Stephenson, the catcher purchased from the Giants, reported to the Cubs today and along with him came Paul Gillespie, formerly Cub backstop who has been dicharged after almost two years in the Coast Guard. He was discharged from service because of recurrence of an old knee injury.

R BOAT COMING IN ON A SPINNAKER AND NO LUCK TO SPARE



Rounding the buoy and showing her heels to Alert IV., the R boat Ardelle, manned by Skipper Harry G. Nye Jr., Ed Schnabel, Jack Vilas, and Peter Lukia, representing Chicago, is apparently headed for victory in yesterday afternoon's race off Belmont harbor. But misfortune, in the form of unfriendly winds, overtook Ardelle a few minutes later and ripped her main and jib sails as shown in the center picture. The picture at the right shows Ardelle finishing with the aid of her spinnaker.

Ketch, Sloop Set Mark in St. Joe Race

St. Joseph, Mich., Sept. 2 [Special].—A 35 foot ketch and a 37½ foot sloop were major winners today in the fastest race in Lake Michigan yachting history from Chicago to St. Joseph, Mich. The 60 statute mile run, which started from Chicago Harbor Friday night, was the first leg of the annual tristate race, and was sponsored by The Columbus Yacht club.

Chinook, the ketch, was last of the D Class [smallest craft in the cruising division] to start, but finished first in the class, which had nine entries. The 35 foot yacht, flying the Jackson Park Yacht club burgee, won the George H. Spies Memorial trophy for the best corrected time in the cruising division. It was sailed by John McInnis, its owner, with Frank Reed, Carl Kleihege, Harry Burke, and Clark Kessler.

Averages 9 M. P. H.

Skipper McInnis reported sailing with the fresh south-southwest wind at an average speed of 9 miles per hour, and when Chinook rode down one of the big rolling seas up to 11 m. p. h. was recorded on the speedometer. Besides working canvas of 800 square feet, the yacht carried a balloon jib and a mizzen staysail with another 800 square feet.

Safara, 37½ foot R class sloop of the Chicago Yacht club, won the Universal time prize, the Fred D. Porter Memorial trophy. The yacht was sailed by Russell McGee, its co-owner, Dr. E. A. Reinholtzen, relief helmsman; Barney Upton, and Aubrey Piggott. A small parachute spinnaker was carried all the way, despite the fact that the crew expected it to be blown to ribbons several times when the wind rose to an estimated 30 miles per hour.

Lively Lady Places 2d.

Lively Lady, 72 foot schooner of the Kenosha Yacht club, owned by William Dickey, was first of the entire fleet to finish here, but placed second in its class and ninth for the Universal time prize. The yacht's actual time for the 60 miles was 5½ hours, or an average of better than 10 miles per hour. This is a slightly faster average speed than the 100 foot schooner Amorita made in the all-time record for the Chicago-Mackinac race in 1911. Amorita sailed the 331 miles in 31 hours and 14 minutes.

Second Leg Today.

The second leg of the race, sponsored by the Chicago Yacht club, will be sailed tomorrow between St. Joseph and Michigan City, Ind. The distance is 34½ statute miles. Starting time for the different classes is from 10 to 10:30 a. m. Summaries follow:

PIN STARS READY TO OPEN CLASSIC LEAGUE ACTION

Start Play Wednesday on Pla-Mor Lanes.

An appropriate opening for the Chicago bowling season takes place on Wednesday evening at 9 oclock when the Classic league officially opens its 36 week schedule at Pla-Mor Lanes, 1935 E. 79th st. The league will operate as a traveling circuit, appearing in a different establishment each Wednesday and bowling the required three games under the usual tough conditions, across alleys.

Enlarged to a 10 team circuit, the opening starts the 12th season for what many authorities claim is the most powerful aggregation of bowling stars in the country. Interspersed thruout the team rosters are names that have occupied the headlines for many years for bowling feats.

Bring Back Former Stars.

Increasing to a 10 team brings back quite a few former Classic leaguers, including such favorites as Swede Ad Carlson, Jack Bishop, Les Fuller, Joe Gratz, Jack Scott, Mickey Milkau, George Theel, and others equally as prominent.

Among the outstanding achievements credited to the various teams and individuals from last season's bowling war show the defending champion Meister Braus in possession of the City and Victory tournament titles together with Paul Krumske's runnerup position to Ned Day in the All-Star; and Joe Sinke's 209 average as leader of the Windy City individuals. The National Doubles title is in possession of Bill Flesch and Buddy Bomar of Monarch Beers.

Harry Ledene Jr., also of Monarch, shot in a 300 game in the Windy City tourney. Thompson's Restaurant's captured the North End Traveling league championship with Kelley Half and Half doing the same in the Greater Chicago Traveling. The latter also had the highest team and single game scores with 3356 and 1248 which also were the second highest in the nation.

Accomplished Many Feats.

Paul Marian of the Keeley's also had a perfect game and Rudy Boedecker, captain of Chapin and Gore, had the honor of shooting the second highest total in the nation with his 805 series. Swede Carlson, who will do his bowling for Congress Arcade, carried off the individual honors in the Randolph league with a 209 plus average.

Holdovers from last year include the champion Meister Braus, who go to the post with the same line up; Monarch Beers with the same group. Thompson's Restaurants with a single change; and Washington Shirts with a new line-up The new teams list Chapin and Gore, Keeley Half and Half, Sunkist Pies, Prima Beer, Du Bouchett and Congress Arcade.

The team rosters:

BREEZING ALONG

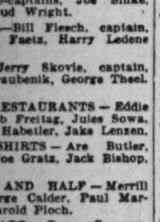
JOCKEY CONN McCREARY and the Calumet farm have come to the parting of the ways. . . . The Warren Wright establishment, which had a one year contract with an option for renewal, has returned the contract to the rider. . . . While no one with authority has made any comment on the cancellation of the contract, it is said, McCreary has been critized for some of his rides in big stake races. . . . His ride on Pensive in the American Derby last week, for example, was "not so hot," they say. . . . Warren Wright, owner of the famous stable, will ship his thorobreds to New York next week without a contract rider. . . . McCreary will do first string work for the horses owned by Jules Fink in New York. . . . Pukka Gin, the 3 year old colt owned by Col. C. V. Whitney, is back in training. . . . The 1944 winter book favorite for the Kentucky Derby worked a half mile in 52 seconds the other day.



Warren Wright.

Matt Winn Makes Application for Meeting at Churchill Downs.

Bon Jour, which won the $50,000 Trenton handicap last week, was claimed for $1,600 at Detroit two years ago. . . . Matt Winn, president of Churchill Downs, Inc., has filed application with the Kentucky state racing commission for a 19 day meeting starting Oct. 21. . . . The application includes six days for war relief. . . . John Marsch, owner of Occupation, the 4 year old star, has turned down an offer of $100,000 for the colt. . . . Washington Park's sprint sensation, Three Dots, fractured a sesamoid bone when a 2 year old. . . . Don Ameche's Sir Bim will leave for New York next week

THEY'LL START FIRING WEDNESDAY

THE LOCKER ROOM

SHOT-OF-THE-WEEK

THE Locker Room today regretfully closes its doors for the 1944 season, fifth of its career. . . . These last five years have witnessed a transformation in golf which has established Chicago as the capital of war time golf and which augurs for a boom in the game rivaling that following World War I. . . . When other golf associations thruout the country dropped out of the competitive picture after Pearl Harbor the Chicago District, the Women's Western and Chicago Women's District, and the Illinois section of the P. G. A. went to work as they never had before. . . . Their diligence and foresight have been rewarded by the success of the Hale America, the Chicago Victory Nationals, the Women's Western Opens and Amateurs, and the Illinois P. G. A. section's rehabilitation program. . . . The putting clocks [with a bow to the Midwest Greenkeepers' association] which have been installed at Hines and Downey, with others to follow at Vaughan General hospital, and the Dime-a-Round fund for the Chicago service men's centers are concrete testimonials of Chicago golf's contributions to the war. . . . The Locker Room today gives eagles to Larry Rutherford of the C. D. G. A., Mrs. Charles Dennehy of the W. W. G. A., Mrs. G. M. Mellor of the C. W. D. G. A., Alex Cunningham of the Illinois P. G. A. and their associates. . . . Keep it up in 1945, folks. . . . The Locker Room will open again on next May 27. . . . It feels that it succeeded in its only campaign of the year—to assemble all golf officials in an autumnal meeting, with a view to avoiding date conflicts. . . . President Rutherford shortly will call such a meeting. . . . Next season, the L. R. hopes to interest more club presidents in contributing news items to this weekly forum.

West District League to Hold Final Meeting Thursday.

Altho many clubs will wind up their formal competitive programs this week-end, the season is far from finished. . . . On Thursday the West District league will hold its final meeting at Glen Oak. . . . The occasion will be the 10th anniversary of the league and a tribute to Fred Lietzow, father of interclub play in this district. . . . Friday will witness the seasonal windup and election of officers of the C. W. D. G. A. at Park Ridge. . . . Next Sunday and Monday will bring one of the season's outstanding local tourneys—the 22d annual Illinois P. G. A. battle at Glen Flora, site of the 1943 meet. . . . Congratulations to Jim Crowley and the Glen Flora members who have worked long and hard to make the event a success. . . . And whatever happened to the plaque the P. G. A. presented last year?

The Inquiring Golfer

THE QUESTION.

What was your best round this year? [Asked at the Illinois Senior golf tournament at Exmoor Friday.]

THE ANSWERS.

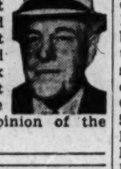
W. R. English, Exmoor—I wish you had asked this question several years ago. I am now 83 years old and I didn't take up the game until I was 63. I have shot an 88 in my time but the best I can report for this years was a 98 which was good enough to win the class D prize at Exmoor several weeks ago.

Henry Green, Urbana—My best round was an 84 at Flossmoor when I was playing a match with an old golfing partner, G. G. Dowdall, retired chief surgeon of the Illinois Central railroad. We have been playing together for 25 years and I can always do my best when we hook up in a match.

E. A. Eulass, Calumet—I have been sidelined this summer with an arm ailment, but I would say that my best round of recent years was a 78 scored in a team match at Ravisio. On that round I had the pure luck of having 11 one putt greens and therefore have a very high opinion of the Ravisio greens.



DIVOTS from the Locker Room of 1944: Medinah organized a series of 16-man leagues for weekly competition. . . . Jim Lowder organized a drive among Tam O'Shanter members to collect game sets for service men. . . . Park Ridge, led by Charley Morgan, John Walters, and Ray Bowen, continued to make the annual Champion of Champions' event a real success. . . . The tourney had been doomed to failure until these men took over. . . . Midlothian made the first large single contribution to the Dime-A-Round fund—a donation of $180. . . . W. H. Durkin, 72 years old, only player to make an ace at Westgate Valley in 1943, came within inches of another on his first 1944 round. . . . Dr. Robert E. Graf, Skokie optometrist, sank a 4 wood second for a deuce at Old Orchard's 398 yard first. . . . Two rounds generally overlooked in the Victory National tournaments at Edgewater in June were the 71 by Jock Hutchison and a 73 by Bill Lane. . . . The 10-leading-scorers system of the C. D. G. A. was never more successful than during the Victory Nationals. . . . Gerald Dearie, Edgewater greenkeeper, turned in one of the best conditioning jobs of the year for the big show. . . . Putt of the year: Jug McSpaden's 40 footer on 72d green to tie Lt. Ben Hogan in Victory Open tourney. . . . Olympia Fields members who teamed to save the big plant for golf held a victory celebration on July 9. . . . Andy Humphries of Butterfield sent a brassie within an inch of the cup at that club's 16th. . . . The Illinois state amateur tournament drew 100 entries, against 60 for 1943, and the C. D. G. A. Junior Open leaped from 53 to 89. . . . Jack Coyle Jr. established himself as one of the longest hitting youngsters in the game by his work in winning the Junior title.

Chicago Park District Leads in Dime-a-Round Contributions.

Tom McMahon of Skokie, past C. D. G. A. president, shot a 75 at Oak Park, playing the first 12 holes even with none other than Corp. Chick Harbert. . . . Dorothy Germain won her second straight W. W. G. A. amateur at Onwentsia. . . . Byron Nelson, Betty Hicks, and Ed Furgol were the winners of the nine day All-American show at Tam O'Shanter. . . . President George S. May announced he will raise the cash value of the Open to $40,100 next year, with approximately $12,500 going to the winner. . . . Latest official count on the 1944 Dime-a-Round drive follows: Chicago park district, $5,116.94; Park Ridge, $969.60; Oak Park, $856; Beverly, $694; Westgate Valley, $615; North Shore, $607.20; Westmoreland, $575; Glen Oak, $371.50; Idlewild, $350; Ridgemoor, $250, and Bryn Mawr, $250. . . . The total collection for the service men's centers is $12,655.04. . . . One of the latest checks to be received is that for $179.59, sent by Mrs. Arthur Weston, treasurer of Winnetka's Skokie Playfield.

Hymie Judelson of Old Orchard defeated Harry Wils of Waveland, 2 and 1, yesterday in the 36 hole final match to win the 28th annual Cook County Amateur golf championship in Columbus Park.

For 17 years Judelson has been seeking the Cook county crown and reached the finals in both 1927 and 1928, only to lose. Yesterday he led, 3 up, after the first round and never yielded the lead after that.

Judelson 2 Up at 27th.

Judelson had a 35 on the front nine of the afternoon round, two strokes over par, while Wils scored a 34. Judelson led, 2 up, at 27 holes.

The margin of victory might have been more decisive, but Wils was saved by his putting ability. He sank a 20 footer on the 21st hole, a 10 footer on the 25th, and on the 29th a 15 footer rimmed the cup and dropped in. With a lead of 2 up at the 32d green, Judelson managed to keep Wils on even terms for the next three holes, and the match was concluded on the 35th green.

Play Exhibition Today.

On the morning 18, Judelson carded a 35—38—73, seven strokes over par, while Wils posted a 39—36—75. Judelson was 4 up at the conclusion of the first nine, having trouble only on the third hole when he carded a five after his second shot landed in a trap.

Hank Foley, director of the tournament has scheduled an exhibition match for 2 o'clock this afternoon. He will pair with Lou Esposito, Midwest Amateur champion, against Judelson and Wils.

Pavot Takes Hopeful for 7th Straight

• New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Pavot, the fast stepping son of Case Ace from Walter Jefford's barns, again proved that he is the best of the eastern 2 year olds today when he whipped eight other juveniles in the 40th Hopeful stakes for his seventh straight victory.

Under the handling of Georgie Woolf, the unbeaten colt ran the six and one-half furlongs at Belmont Park in 1:18.4 as he picked up $51,850 and increased his earnings to $125,225. His backers in the crowd of 35,984 received only $2.60, $2.40, and $2.30 for each $2 invested across the board.

Wins by One-Half Length.

While keeping his perfect record intact, the Jeffords' runner was given the hardest test since he made his first start late in June. At the finish line only a half length separated him from William Ziegler Jr.'s Esteem, who came from last place to grab runner-up honors from Great Power of Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade stable.

For the first five-sixteenths of a mile, Pavot, War Jeep, and Plebiscite raced almost side by side. Coming out of the back stretch, however, Woolf sent the favorite to the front and by the time he had straightened out for home, two lengths separated him from the strong running Great Power.

Esteem, Great Power Threaten.

Just when it looked as if Pavot would pull away still more, Esteem and Great Power went after the Jefford thorobred. Woolf, however, did a great job of hand riding in the final sixteenth to take the decision.

Lt. Townsend B. Martin's Bolingbroke won the mile and three-quarters Saratoga cup race by a half length for his second triumph in the rich stake. Winner of the race in 1942, the seven year old son of Equipoise took the lead in the stretch and beat off the challenge of Ziegler's Bounding Home.

Texas Sandman Captures $5,000 Narragansett Race

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 2 (AP).—Taking the lead at the head of the stretch after running back of the early leaders, the Donna Ray stable's Texas Sandman today won the $5,000 added King Philip handicap at Narragansett Park. The 3 year old colt scored by two and a half lengths over the even money favorite, Mrs. Tilyou Christopher's Bel Reigh.

MULTI-BILLION DEBT HIDDEN IN FEDERAL MAZE

No Regular Reports Made by Agencies.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2.—The United States has two public debts. One of them is out in the open and known to the taxpayers. It amounts to more than 211 billion dollars, most of which has been piled up since the advent of the Roosevelt administration.

The other is estimated at 22½ billion dollars, but is kept "hidden." This debt has been created by the New Deal thru a tangle of government corporations such as Commodity Credit and Reconstruction Finance.

The 22½ billion dollars represents the liabilities of these federal corporations. This obligation is pyramided on the known national debt, but this fact is not apparent because of the complexities of the corporations' organization and operations, and because in most instances, regular financial reports are not made public.

Operate on Own Proceeds.

Examination of New Deal corporations shows that many are operating on the proceeds of their own obligations, guaranteed by the United States.

These lending and spending agencies derive their operating capital from their borrowings and funds obtained on their own notes, bonds, and debentures, altho the Constitution direct that all laws for raising revenue shall originate in the house of representatives; that congress shall have the power to raise revenue, pay debts and provide for the defense and general welfare of the United States; that congress shall have the power to borrow money on the nation's credit; that no money shall be drawn from the treasury except in consequence of appropriations made by law; and that a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public moneys shall be published from time to time.

The corporations seldom place their funds in the national treasury, it is disclosed. There is no "regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures" as required by the Constitution. Many government corporations are chartered under state laws, but others wrote their own charters and never made them public.

His Views in 1932.

On Oct. 25, 1932, when Roosevelt was seeking election to his first term, he assailed evasiveness in government financial reporting, and urged that the treasury "substitute efficiency for inefficiency, and candor for deception." The following March, in a message to congress, he warned that governments have been "wrecked on rocks of loose fiscal policy."

Rep. Miller [R., Mo.] charged on the floor of the house a few months ago that thru their unconstitional financing methods, New Deal corporations have pledged the credit of the United States for billions of dollars. He estimated that the corporations have been given power by the administration to issue as much as 50 billion dollars of evidences of indebtedness, all guaranteed by the United States government.

Rep. Miller said that the Roosevelt administration's system of raising and spending public money not only nullifies the Constitution, but threatens serious consequences to the American form of government. He accused the New Deal of carefully planning this system in order to instrument its radical theories of government and economics.

Midwest's Oil Pinch Laid to Lower Output

The decline of crude oil production in Illinois and Indiana is a major reason for the shortage of petroleum products in the 7th federal reserve district states of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, and Wisconsin, the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago said yesterday.

"One of the most adverse changes affecting the midwest petroleum industry has been the striking decline in crude oil production since 1940," the bank reported. "Illinois, which before the war ranked fourth among oil producing states with an output of 147 million barrels a year, has declined to sixth place with current production at an annual rate of only 80 million barrels.

Indiana Production Falls.

"Crude output in Michigan has remained roughly at 20 million barrels a year during the war, but Indiana, which produced 7 million barrels in 1941, has fallen off to slightly more than 5 million barrels a year. No crude oil is produced commercially in Iowa or Wisconsin.

"Opinions differ as to the cause of the decline in Illinois crude output. Many operators and observers believe that for the present at least prospects are not good for new large discoveries sufficient to regain former record levels. The output of many wells continues to drop and the number of dry holes drilled in oil areas is increasing. Exploratory drilling or 'wildcatting' nevertheless continues."

275 DRILLING PERMITS.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 2 (AP).—The Illinois division of oil and gas conservation issued 275 drilling permits in August. Included were 187 pool well and 31 wildcat permits.

NO PRICE CEILING FOR LAKES FISH PLANNED BY OPA

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 (AP).—The OPA said today it was not planning to establish ceiling prices for Great Lakes fish at this time.

The agency explained fishermen's prices for nearly all species have declined below last year, and said it was "hopeful" the downward trend "will shortly" result in retail prices that will reflect the 1942 level. OPA is not permitted to reduce fresh fish prices below the 1942 level.

It said it was prepared to take "immediate and appropriate" action if prices should rise substantially above that level for any appreciable time.

LARGE CHICAGO CANDY COMPANY IS ACQUIRED BY UNIVERSAL MATCH

The Universal Match corporation has acquired the controling interest in the Schutter Candy company, Chicago, A. H. Rosenberg, president of Universal, announced yesterday. Cost of the acquisition was estimated in excess of 2 million dollars.

Manufacture of five cent candy bars will continue at the Schutter factory at Cicero av. and Augusta blvd., and there will be no replacement of Schutter's top executives, Rosenberg said.

Purchase of control in Schutter's is in line with Universal's policy of expansion and diversification, Rosenberg said. Schutter company is the fourth organization to be brought into Universal in the last five years. In 1939 Universal acquired all of the outstanding stock of the Candy Brothers Manufacturing company, a 50 year old cough drop business, and in 1940 added the West Virginia Match company and the Federal Match corporation.

Universal's war products include magnesium powder and signal flares for aircraft.

Holds Plastic Complements Metals in Use

Plastics now and in the future must be used mainly to complement and not to compete with metals, altho there are three fields in which their uses overlap, an article in the current issue of Metals and Alloys magazines said. Plastics must add to metals the characteristics metals lack, it was added.

For example, in automobile hardware, die cast zinc alloy cores for door handles are covered with thermoplastic colors, warm to the touch and everlasting, the strength and rigidity of the metal counteracting the tendency of the plastic to droop in heat or under too much pressure.

Special advantages of plastics include adaptability to built-in color, surface permanence, low specific gravities, resistance to corrosion, effectiveness as electrical insulators, transparency where needed, and protection against ordinary heat. Chief good qualities of metals are high tensile strengths, electrical conductivity, malleability and facilities for larger mass production.

Plastics are not being produced in large quantities as practically all metals are. Even magnesium is being produced at about double the entire output of plastics. As a result, if automobile makers suddenly decided to swing into production of plastic cars, it would put the chemical industry into an impossible situation, the article said.

Overlapping uses of the two types of material are in the competition of molded plastics with die cast, sand cast or machined metals; laminated plastics with metals in sheets, formed or machined, and resin coatings with metals used as plating media.

SOFT COAL INDUSTRY FADING POSSIBILITY OF CRIPPLING STRIKE

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 2 (AP).—The possibility of a crippling strike faced the bituminous coal industry tonight with 16 miles idle, walkouts threatened at 14 others, and strike polls by supervisory employes on schedule for next week at 47 pits in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Kentucky. Only government control of the mining properties appeared likely to head off further work stoppages.

The supervisors—firemen, fire bosses, weigh bosses, and others—seek recognition of their newly-organized union, the United Clerical, Technical and Supervisory Union of the Mining Industry, district 50, United Mine Workers.

Altho only a few supervisory employes are involved, their refusal to work has closed 16 Pennsylvania mines because, without safety inspections for which they are responsible, production miners do not enter the pits.

The strike ballots are under the supervision of the national labor relations board in accordance with the war labor disputes act.

Field 'U.S. Aid Bid' to Bring Inquiry Move

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2.—Rep. Miller [R., Mo.], a member of the special house committee investigating federal radio activities, announced today he would seek an inquiry into what he termed an apparent invitation to the government by Marshall Field to participate in his radio and publishing activities.

Rep. Miller.

Incorporation papers filed at Dover, Del., yesterday for Field Enterprises, Inc., included an "unprecedented" provision, Miller said. The new corporation will assume the operation of Field's Chicago publication, which has incurred heavy operating losses while conducted as a personal venture by him.

Contract or Otherwise.

The clause referred to by Miller provides that the corporation "may, by contract or otherwise, permit such participation in the administration of its affairs by the government of the United States as the board of directors shall deem advisable."

"This development," said Miller, "lends weight to the fears of members of this committee, who have been investigating the federal communications commission, that the New Deal is planning control of the radio and the press. As a lawyer, I have drafted and read many incorporation papers, but I never heard of such a provision before.

"I understand a spokesman for the corporation explained that the clause was inserted because of uncertainty what future arrangements with the government in radio and television business may involve. The matter seems a proper one for our committee to investigate."

Licenses at High Prices.

The disclosure regarding the new Field corporation recalled recent developments involving the sale for 8 million dollars in cash of the Blue network, one of the nation's major broadcasting chains, by Edward J. Noble, former undersecretary of commerce to Harry Hopkins, and an intimate friend of David K. Niles, one of the White House palace guard.

Miller also mentioned the recent action of the FCC in approving the transfers of radio station licenses at high prices, including one to Marshall Field, one to Eugene Meyer, publisher of the Washington Post, and one to the New York Times.

Radio station WINX of Washington, D. C., was transferred to the Washington Post for $500,000, altho it had an apparent value of only $58,000, Miller remarked. Station WJJD of Chicago was transferred to Field for $696,000. WQXR of New York City was transferred to the New York Times for $987,500, nearly four and one-half times its net worth, it was said.

Traffic in Radio Frequencies.

"There is an indicated traffic in radio frequencies in these transactions," Miller asserted, "altho the communications act clearly and unequivocally ordains that a licensee of a radio station acquires no rights in its assigned frequency.

"At a recent appearance before our committee, Chairman Fly admitted that the commission for three years had investigated and considered whether it had the power to proscribe and prevent the ownership of radio stations by newspapers. He said the study was dismissed without action because of the grave legal and policy questions involved.

"It appears strange that the commission should send a request to congress for advice on this matter after the transfers referred to had been approved. Commissioner [Clifford L.] Durr, in a dissenting opinion to the transfers, declared they were approved without a hearing."

Electric Utility Operating Revenues 3 Pct. Higher

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 (AP).—Electric operating revenues of the larger privately owned electric utilities in July were $252,901,000, a 3 per cent increase over July, 1943, preliminary figures reported yesterday by the federal power commission indicated. Revenue deductions, including operating expenses, depreciation, and taxes [but not including income deductions such as interest and premium expense] were $197,234,000, a 4 per cent increase over July, 1943.

WARNS SUGAR NEEDS REQUIRE HIGHER OUTPUT

Rationing Into 1946 Held Alternative.

Predicts Sugar Cut

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 (AP). —The department of agriculture predicted today that supplies of sugar will be smaller next year. The report held out little hope for elimination of rationing until the war with Japan has been won. It said supplies will be lower because of prospects for a smaller crop in Cuba, reduced stocks in both producing and consuming areas, and the necessity of diverting raw sugar into alcohol for synthetic rubber.

Sugar rationing will continue into 1946 unless steps are taken to increase sugar production, Lamborn & Co., sugar broker, predicted yesterday in its statistical bulletin. Below normal production in most areas has been aggravated by lack of an intelligent, coördinated government control program, it was charged.

Under government control since the war began, sugar has been the subject of many plans created by the numerous government agencies having a finger in the sugar pie, and each has tended to reflect the limited viewpoint and responsibility of the department creating it, said the bulletin.

Sugar Prices Unchanged.

The price of sugar has been virtually unchanged during 1942, 1943, and 1944, altho in that period the index of food costs has risen from 123.2 to 135.7. Altho a low sugar price is desirable, if it is held at the present level, sugar production will remain below needs, it was maintained.

"Sugar as a necessary agricultural crop should be put on an equal footing with others in that category, the bulletin said. "Sugar producing areas should receive equitable treatment in matters of labor, fertilizer, machinery, and price. Increased and much needed sugar production can be stimulated only by making the production of sugar as attractive as other commodities."

The government must prepare to end the rationing of sugar as soon as possible after the end of the war, the bulletin contended; otherwise, an incongruous situation will result in which rationing will continue long after the European war is ended at a time when water-holding alibis will be impossible to find.

Beet Sugar Output Falls.

Analyzing the various sources of sugar, Lamborn & Co. said that while the price of beet sugar has been held down, production has decreased. In 1942 United States beet sugar production was 1,613,000 short tons; in 1943, 933,000 tons, and for 1944 the estimate is 1,050,000 tons. Processing costs have risen sharply and as much as 667 per cent in the case of labor.

The cost of production and delivery of Puerto Rican sugar on sample farms rose from $4.26 a ton in the 1941-'42 season to $7.89 in 1943-'44, it was said. Hawaiian production costs have risen 30 per cent. The cost of planting cane in Cuba in the last five years has risen 180 per cent, and other costs accordingly.

Current acreage devoted to sugar cane in Louisiana is 9.5 per cent less than in 1943, the bulletin said, and the number of growers has decreased 30 per cent in three years because many have turned to more lucrative crops. Labor in Louisiana has been drained from the sugar industry to other agricultural and industrial fields where higher wages are paid.

EXTEND DRIVE TO CUT USE OF WRAPPING PAPER

A drive for pledges to conserve paper bags and to ask customers to carry packages unwrapped has been extended to 55,000 drug stores and more than 10,000 variety and general merchandise stores, the paper conservation division of the periodical publishers' national committee announced yesterday. This brings to 240,000 the number of retail stores thruout the country in the campaign.

Altho not so pressed by the shortage of bags and wrapping paper as food stores, the drug stores offer an immediate opportunity for paper conservation in the large number of packaged articles they carry, said the committee. It estimated that by eliminating extra wrapping 50,000 rolls of paper can be saved monthly.

Plan for Private Operation of Federally Owned Plants

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 (AP).—Seeking to avert large scale unemployment when federally owned war plants are released from munitions production, the government today directed four of its agencies to prepare plans for peace time operation of the facilities by private industry.

Outlining instructions for a war plants utilization committee, War Mobilization Director Byrnes said the post-war unemployment problem may center in these plants, valued at more than 15 billion dollars and which now employ several million workers. He said the private operators of many of them already have plans for their use in civilian production and that some hold options to buy them after the war.

"Encourage Peace Time Use."

These operators should be interviewed now "and encouraged to use the plants in peace time operation," Byrnes said in a letter to chiefs of the war production board, Defense Plant corporation, surplus property administration, and war man power commission. These agencies were directed by Byrnes to name representatives to comprise the new utilization committee.

Byrnes' letter did not touch on whether the government means to continue indefinitely as the owner of some of the plants while they are operated privately. Also not mentioned was the possibility that competitive privately owned companies may object to the government in industry as a landlord.

Urges Federal Commission.

Byrnes said that because the government was the owner of the plants it should assume responsibility for converting as many as possible to civilian production under private operations. He directed the armed services to supply promptly to WMC a list of the war plants to be retained after the war as "part of our defense machinery."

Packinghouse Labor Faces Big Time Loss

More Beef for Army

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 (AP). —Reporting that the army and navy have been unable to obtain sufficient supplies, the war food administration today ordered slaughterers operating under federal inspection to set aside 60 per cent instead of the present 50 per cent of army style beef for the government. The order also increases from 25 to 35 per cent the Kosher slaughter set aside for government use. Civilian supplies of the better grades of beef will be proportionately reduced.

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

Packing house employes' loss of man hours of work in the next 10 months as a result of the food planners' program of pork scarcity to save corn will run to many millions, observers at the Chicago stock yards said yesterday. Because of the complexity of operations, it is impossible to arrive at a dependable estimate of the actual hours labor will lose, it was said.

Killing and cutting floors, where workers already are feeling the pinch, expect a decline of more than 5 million man hours from the same months of 1943-'44.

Hogs Bid to Ceilings.

Packers and labor both have been affected by the record breaking shrinkage of volume in the last few weeks. In an attempt to obtain sufficient stock to keep crews working the guaranteed week of 32 hours packers have bid up all classes of live hogs to the OPA ceilings. They assert live hog ceilings have been established at levels not warranted by the price limits they can charge for pork. Losses are due in part to the fact inferior grades are permitted to sell as high, and sometimes higher, than best grades, they said.

Several small Chicago plants estimated that their losses on hogs last week ranged from $5,000 to $25,000. A representative of a national packing company said his company's pork operations for August were more than 1 million dollars in the "red."

Some Overhead Fixed.

"We have some overhead expense which is not flexible," the owner of one small company explained. "It costs us a certain amount to open the doors for business each morning. This cost is there whether we kill 1,000 hogs, daily, our capacity, or 500 daily, as we do now. Our men now work 25 hours weekly and get paid for 32, which they are guaranteed. That is more unfavorable to us than if we paid overtime and operated at capacity."

Hog receipts in Chicago last week dropped to 64,100 head.

4-WHEEL DRIVE REPORTS LARGER SALES, PROFITS

Sales and profits of the Four Wheel Drive Auto company rose in the fiscal year ended June 30, Walter A. Olen, president, told stockholders yesterday in his annual report. Backlog of orders on June 30 approximated 30 million dollars, he said.

Sales of $39,192,849, compared with $23,428,601 in the preceding fiscal year, were made largely to the military services and consisted of four wheel drive military trucks of various sizes. Net income was $828,246, equal to $4.46 a share, against $612,897, or $3.30 a share.

DECIDE BOARD WILL OVERSEE SURPLUS SALES

Four Men to Outline Policies.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 (AP).—One legislative log jam over legislation to cushion the nation's economic structure against the impact of a sudden German surrender broke today when senate and house conferees compromised their biggest difference over a bill to govern disposal of 100 million dollars worth of the war's leftover goods.

Sen. Thomas.

They wrote into the bill a provision setting up a four-member policy making board, but authorizing presidential appointment of a surplus property administrator with authority over actual sales.

The agreement reconciled differences between senate-approved legislation setting up an eight-member board with authority to appoint its own director and to supervise disposal, and house insistence upon one man conrtol.

Conferees Optimistic.

While many other points of conflict remain to be settled, both Sen. Thomas [D., Utah], speaking for the senate group, and Chairman Manasco [D., Ala.], of the house conferees, meeting for the fourth day, expressed optimism over prospects for ironing them out next week.

Meanwhile, a separate group of conferees got together for the first time on the even more controversial reconversion and demobilization bill.

While they did not even touch the explosive post-war unemployment compensation issue at the two hour session, Chairman George [D., Ga.] of the senate group later talked hopefully of an agreement by next Wednesday.

Wants U. S. Employes Covered.

George is leading a fight to restore a house rejected provision extending coverage to 3,500,000 federal employes under state rates with the government paying the cost, which he estimated at 400 million dollars. The house also rejected a senate provision permitting government payments up to $200 to transfer stranded war workers back to their homes or new job locations.

Under the property disposal compromise, the four member board would determine policy and make quarterly reports to congress.

The congressional review would be supplemented by giving the director of war mobilization and reconversion authority to override either the board or the administrator if their acts interfered with either the war or reconversion program.

The office of mobilization and reconversion is set up in the reconversion bill before the second conference committee.

MARKET HOLIDAY.

Principal security and commodity markets and banks will be closed tomorrow for the Labor day holiday. The New York Stock and Curb exchanges and the Chicago Stock exchange were closed yesterday, the last of three Saturday recesses voted because of help shortages.

More Selling Drives Grain Prices Lower

General liquidation induced by favorable war news and the approaching two day holiday forced most active deliveries of grains to new seasonal low prices yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. September oats broke more than 2 cents a bushel and sold at one time at 62⅝ cents, off 9⅝ cents from last week's high and 19⅝ cents under the ceiling price. May barley at 99¼ cents was 24⅜ cents under the ceiling. Short covering lifted prices slightly from the lows.

Feed grains, which have been weak recently, led the decline. Despite heavy short covering, oats closed near the bottom with losses of ⅝ to 1¼ cents. July oats, representing grain to be harvested next year, sold at 56⅞ cents, the lowest price for any delivery of that grain since February, 1943. Barley futures were off ⅛ to 2⅛ cents.

Rye at 12 Months' Low.

Rye finished at losses of ¾ to 1⅝ cents, selling at the lowest price in about a year. Wheat received support as the result of continued buying of spring wheat in Minneapolis by the Commodity Credit corporation, but closed ⅛ to 1⅜ cents lower.

Brokers who frequently act for large cash interests were heavy sellers of oats futures, presumably for northwestern interests. A further reduction of 1 cent a bushel in the Canadian export duty was an added factor in inducing longs to liquidate holdings. Reports from the east said Canadian grain was offered there well below the cost of domestic grain.

Much New Corn Offered.

Country grain dealers offered large quantities of new corn for October to September shipment, but demand was slow. Reports from Illinois and Iowa said farmers were there offering only small quantities of new grain.

The break in grain prices last week was the largest in many months. Wheat lost ⅞ to 4 cents, oats 4⅜ to 6¼, rye 2¼ to 4⅛, and barley 5⅛ to 8 cents.

OPA May Boost Ceilings on Used Chevrolet Cars

Washington, D. C., Sept. 2 (AP).—An indication that ceiling prices on used Chevrolets will be raised soon by OPA was received today from Administrator Bowles by Sen. Hill [D., Ala.]. Members of a Chevrolet dealers emergency committee, who have been conferring with OPA officials, have "expressed satisfaction" with OPA proposals to adjust ceilings "more nearly to reflect the market price of Chevrolet cars," Bowles said.

MARKETS IN 1918 RALLIED AFTER 'FALSE' PEACE

Confusion, Uncertainty Marked Nov. 12 Trade.

Altho Chicago markets reacted sharply on a premature peace report on Nov. 7, 1918, they remained comparatively firm to higher after the armistice actually ended hostilities that historic Monday morning of Nov. 11.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Wednesday, Nov. 13, reporting market activities of Nov. 12, said that altho trading was light and market operators were confused and uncertain, corn on the Chicago Board of Trade closed with a gain of ⅝ cents a bushel and oats were up ½ cent. Barley was steady to higher and rye was mostly unchanged.

No Trading Nov. 11.

Nov. 12 was the first trading day after the armistice, because employes and officials took the day off to participate in peace celebrations. Among these was a one hour band concert on the floor of the Chicago Stock exchange.

Hog prices on Nov. 12 were steady to 10 cents a hundred pounds higher and cattle were steady to 25 cents higher. On Nov. 13 THE TRIBUNE reported active corn futures gained 1¼ to 1⅝ cents, oats ¾ to 1 cent, barley 1 to 3 cents, and rye was unchanged. Hogs and cattle were slightly higher. On the stock exchange prices were irregular with the packing house issues most active.

On Thursday Nov. 14 corn and oats were off ⅞ cents to 2 cents, but barley was 2 to 3 cents higher and rye was unchanged. On the live stock market packers bought heavily from the large supply of 58,000 hogs, often paying as high as $18. Steers and butchers were strong to 25 cents higher. Packing house stocks on the stock exchange advanced. Swift & Co. and Swift International gaining 2¼ points and Cudahy 1½.

Brown Makes Prediction.

The strong showing of these stocks and the steady position of the live stock market appeared to support the prediction made by Everett C. Brown, president of the Chicago Live Stock exchange, on Armistice day. He said:

"It is my opinion that the farmer who feeds any or all classes of live stock the next two years will make more money than any other branch of business because of the enormous demand that is bound to come out of Europe."

On the false peace report corn futures dropped 6 cents but recovered most of the loss. Oats were reported equally as erratic. Hogs also broke, but regained the losses. On the stock exchange the so-called "peace stocks" gained substantially. Stewart-Warner climbed 8½ points and held all except 1½ points. Union Carbide gained 5 points and Sears, Roebuck 6. Packing house shares were irregular.

Concerned over Results.

Then as now, business leaders expressed concern about abrupt cancelation of war contracts, surplus sales at sacrifice prices, and unemployment. In that respect George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National bank, said on his return from a visit in Washington:

"There is a general feeling that wherever possible industry will be allowed to slow down, and reductions in the cost of living and wages will be so gradual that the economic disturbance will be minimized as much as possible."

DIVIDENDS IN STOCK.

Dividends payable in stock, announced recently by several companies, have attracted attention to certain advantages which corporations and individual stockholders sometimes obtain from this form of distribution of earnings as compared with cash payments.

Common dividends payable in common stock have been declared by Durez Plastics and Chemicals, Stokely Brothers & Co., Eversharp, and Plymouth Oil, following similar distributions reported by other companies earlier in the year.

To save cash for plant construction, Celanese corporation this year has declared dividends at quarterly intervals, of one common share for each 70 common shares held. An outstanding example of a company maintaining annual dividends in stock over a period of years, plus cash payments, is the record of International Business Machines.

Benefits to the stockholders and the corporation of stock distributions in lieu of, or in addition to, cash have become more pronounced under war time conditions. Many corporations wish to conserve cash for reconversion to peace time business. Increased surtax rates have made the tax exemption of dividends in stock of greater importance to individual stockholders, especially if their income puts them in the higher tax brackets. Such dividends are free of tax if they are of the same class of stock as that on which they are paid.

If, however, the stockholder converts his dividends into cash by selling the stock, he is taxable on the profit, if any, as a capital gain. The average cost of the entire holding is determined by dividing the original investment by the increased number of shares. For many taxpayers, the capital gains tax is less burdensome than the levy on other income.

Dividends in stock differ from mere split-ups in that the former generally represent capitalization of earnings or surplus. But in either case, altho the common stockholder gets more stock certificates, his proportionate interest remains as before. One objection sometimes urged against dividends in stock is that unless the company's profit is increasing their effect is to dilute earning power per share.

PREDICTS PEACE TO BRING LOWER SPENDING BY U. S.

Urbana, Ill., Sept. 2 [Special].—The chief economic effect of victory in Europe will be a sharp contraction in government spending, now at a rate of close to 100 billion dollars a year, Laurence J. Norton, professor of agricultural economics at the University of Illinois, said today.

"This tremendous spending has caused a national income for 1944 of about 150 billion dollars and has increased the value of farm products marketed to about 20 billion dollars, each about two and a half times the pre-war figure," he said. "Both national and farm income will most likely be lower in 1945 than in 1944. Prices of those farm products, of which marketings will be high, such as cattle, will be reduced most sharply."

The public has large savings as a result of high war time incomes and consumer goods shortages, Norton said. If these are used in a buying spree, higher prices may result, but the public, remembering the 1930's, may be conservative. Such spending is likely to be offset by the deflationary effect of curtailed government spending as well as by rapid increases in consumer goods production, he added. Continuation of price ceilings and rationing would tend to hold prices down. As a result Norton considered a repetition of the post-war inflation of 1919-'20 unlikely.

POST-WAR HOME BOOM PREDICTED IN CHICAGO AREA

BY AL CHASE.

[Real Estate Editor].

Home building will be one of the livest post-war activities in the Chicago metropolitan area, builders, realtors, architects, and city planners said yesterday. All agreed that, following the trend established several years ago, more residences will be built in the suburbs than in Chicago. Construction will be better, and despite a rising cost of labor and materials, it is generally expected that the home owner will get more for his money than he did before the war.

George F. Nixon.

Despite the flood of published articles about "miracle homes," "dream cottages," and other gadget equipped and fantastically designed houses, which have made many a prospective home builder decide to wait for these developments, the post-war home will be along traditional lines, builders said. Many refinements in building already are available, of course, and more will come into the field, but the new homes will closely resemble those of pre-war days, they said.

Better Homes for Less Money.

"Better homes for less money are being built today than 15 years ago," said George F. Nixon, builder, realtor, and former president of both the Chicago Metropolitan Home Builders association and the Chicago Real Estate board. "There's going to be a vast after the war market in homes costing from $6,000 to $10,000, but it's going to be a case of greater backlog and demand than builders can produce. The extent of the post-war home building market will depend on the labor market and the reconversion of war plants to building materials."

Nixon predicted that a large share of the home building will be in the suburbs. Robert Kingery, general manager of the Chicago Regional Planning association, pointed out that in at least 30 suburbs there are large vacant areas where all utilities—gas, water, sewers, electricity, and paving—already are in and homes can be built as soon as war restrictions are removed.

To Build Near War Plants.

H. Evert Kincaid, executive director of the Chicago plan commission, said he expected large home building operations to go ahead in the neighborhood of the big war plants, most of which have large vacant tracts near-by.

"Chicago has 18 square miles of land suitable for residential growth," he said. "Six square miles have never been subdivided and 12 have been platted but have no utilities and are vacant. But unless Chicago amends its subdivision code and lifts restrictions the trend of home building toward the suburbs will continue at a faster rate."

Post-war home building in Chicago's blighted areas and in the older sections will take place only when it can be done on a large scale, Kincaid said.

Home Inquiries Made.

Joseph B. Ford, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, and head of Joseph B. Ford & Co., realtors and builders, said that for the first time in several years he is getting inquiries about home building.

"Five families called me today," he said, "asking what it would cost to build them homes similar to some I built just before restrictions limited construction to war homes. None of them was figuring on any fantastic changes—they wanted just about the same kind of home as in pre-war days. I told them there might be increases of from 8 to 10 per cent in costs.

Heating, Lighting Improved.

"All have lots, two bought last year, and the others prior to 1942, and are getting plans so they won't have to wait when restrictions are lifted."

John Cummings Lindop, president of Chicago Metropolitan Home Builders association, said post-war homes were going to continue in the traditional design, with possible refinements. The most important improvements will be in heating and lighting. Recent national surveys show that more than a third will be in the $3,500 to $5,000 class, he said.

Former Gov. John Stelle, who spent the last six months in Washington as chairman of the American Legion committee on the G. I. Bill of Rights, will tell realtors about that recently enacted legislation at the first fall meeting of the Chicago Real Estate board on Wednesday evening at the board rooms, 105 W. Madison st. The G. I. bill was planned to enable returning soldiers and sailors to finance entry into business or home building and buying, or to obtain educational advantages. Joseph B. Ford, president, will preside.

Evanston Building

Office building of Washington National Insurance company, to be built after the war at a cost of more than 1 million dollars, at 1618-28 Chicago av., Evanston, from plans by Graham, Anderson, Probst & White. It will be the suburb's largest office building and its largest structure with the exception of the technological institute of Northwestern university.

Bond Prizes Offered for Home Designs

Six thousand dollars in war bonds are being offered members of the National Association of Home Builders by the Chicago Metropolitan Home Builders association, a unit of the national body, as prizes for the best designs for six homes stressing occupations of the residents, it was announced yesterday.

The contest is to be a pre-convention feature of the national association's annual meeting and building materials exhibit at the Hotel Sherman next January, said George F. Nixon of Chicago, chairman of the national convention-exhibit committee. Large models of the six prize winning designs, and drawings of 12 more receiving honorable mention will be displayed at the exhibit, he said.

Open to Architects.

One thousand dollars in war bonds will be awarded for the best design in each of these classifications: The industrial worker's home, the farmer's home, the city home, the suburban home, the summer resort home, and the war veteran's home or "the home for two." These will be considered without regard to regional architectural style.

Altho the contest is open primarily to members of the national association, any architect in the country may enter thru the name of a builder member, it was said.

"The contest will close at midnight Oct. 20," said Charles Huggett, executive secretary of Chicago Metropolitan Home Builders association. "Contestants must report to the national design contest committee, care of Chicago Metropolitan Home Builders association, 228 N. La Salle st., Chicago, that they intend submitting a design or designs, so that a number may be assigned their work. This must be done on or before Sept. 20.

Four Judges to Decide.

Judges include Raymond J. Ashton, Salt Lake City, president of American Institute of Architects; former Gov. John A. Stelle, McLeansboro, Ill., chairman of American Legion G. I. Bill of Rights committee; Abner H. Ferguson, Washington, D. C., federal housing authority commissioner, and John Cummings Lindop, president, Chicago Metropolitan Home Builders association.

The committee on the exhibit of home building materials and techniques includes George F. Nixon, chairman; Charles E. Joern, Joseph Merrion, Arthur E. Fossier, and Irvin Biletz. Miss Elisabeth Shoemaker is manager.

REALTY FIRM REPORTS LARGE RISE IN SALES

Gross value of real estate sold this year by Baird & Warner, Inc., has topped 10 million dollars, compared with $4,990,000 in the corresponding period last year, Stewart B. Matthews, vice president, said yesterday. The number of sales increased 38 per cent, he said. Interest is being shown in vacant property and many purchases are being made as sites for new homes to be built after the war, he added.

Sales of suburban property have increased 50 per cent over 1943, Matthews said, and added that demand for north shore homes as well as for homes in all other suburban areas has been excellent.

"There still continues to be a brisk demand for all types of property," he said. "However, a shortage has developed in three and four story walkup apartment buildings in Chicago and in medium priced homes at $7,500 to $15,000.

RADIO COMPANY BUYS SITE FOR POST-WAR PLANT

The Hallicrafters company, maker of radio equipment, yesterday purchased as a site for a post-war plant the southwest corner of 5th and Kostner avs., containing 170,512 square feet. The land was bought from the Defense Plant corporation for an undisclosed price thru Arthur Hellyer of Ward Farnsworth & Co. J. Frendiess, controler, said no plans had been drawn for the plant.

BUYS FACTORY BUILDING.

The three and one story factory building at 1238-40 S. Ashland av. was sold by Wertz & Thiele to Apex Parlor Furniture company for $40,000 thru Alfred L. Miltenberg & Co.

Brokers' Notes

Thomas F. Seay of Seay & Thomas announces removal of the firm's offices from 30 N. La Salle st., where a real estate and mortgage business was conducted for 10 years, to larger quarters in the Conway building, 111 W. Washington st.

Daniel Walker company has opened new offices at 1005 W. 79th st.

C. A. Anderson, associated with Percy Wilson Mortgage and Finance corporation since 1936, has been appointed manager of the FHA loan department of the corporation.

CRIMINAL COURT CONVICTION RATE OFF DURING YEAR

BY GEORGE WRIGHT.

The Criminal courts during the court year of 1943-'44, which ended yesterday, sent 741 defendants to prison, 486 to the penitentiary, and one to the electric chair. This was disclosed in the annual report issued by Thomas J. Bowler, clerk of the Criminal court, as he prepared for the opening of the new court year Tuesday, with the inauguration of Judge Harold G. Ward as chief justice.

The report disclosed the Criminal courts did not have a successful year in the prosecution of criminals. The docket has been allowed to rise a little over normal, the conviction rate has been considerably lowered, and the death penalty practically nullified.

Lone Death Sentence.

The only conviction carrying the death sentence during the entire year, altho many sensational murders and gang killings occurred, was that of Alvin Krause, alleged killer of two persons in currency exchange robberies. This sentence has not been carried out because the case is on appeal to the Supreme court.

The year ended with 247 indictments pending, to be carried into the new court year, compared with 28, an all-time record set last year when Judge

HINSDALE

POSSESSION OCT. 1ST

We were greatly surprised when one of HINSDALE'S ESTABLISHED FAMILIES invited us to call and to inspect their home. We delighted with this fine modern home.

The cheery living room with a large picture window has space, your each 3 bedrooms; and the beauty of these bathrooms is intriguing. We'd like your comment.

Wood trim in white with pastel shades, the built in bay and windows to bring the outside in—with a garden view to give ecstatic pleasure—such is the dining room.

And could we say of the kitchen and the basement room, of the porch and the unsurpassed outdoors, with gorgeous lawn and shade beneath.

The price is low enough to attract many who have heretofore been unable to find a good home, neither too large, nor too high in price.

Contact us for detailed information and appointment to inspect.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Mrs. Dewey

By MARCIA WINN

IF YOU are a writer and are asked to make a character study of a woman you have never seen before, you usually are hesitant. How can you be sure your appraisal, at best a summary thing, will be fair? That the picture you give will be true?

There are four portraits of Frances Hutt Dewey in the mind of this writer. One is here on this page, a picture which one of her aunts in Fort Worth, Tex., unearthed after her husband, Thomas E. Dewey, received the Republican nomination for the Presidency. You can study it for yourself. It was taken when she was 16—a tranquil open, sweet countenance.

The next is the way she looked the night of June 29, 1944, when she came into the Chicago Stadium beside her husband. She is 25 years older. Her brown hair is bobbed and graying. But the eyes are as calm as in the girl of 16; the large, mobile mouth as expressive, the candor and sweetness still there. Governor Dewey pressed a hand against her shoulder as he left her side to make the acceptance speech he already had rehearsed to her, and her immobility as he spoke was remarkable. Her face flushed and glowed as she listened, her lips parted in a half smile, but she never twitched a muscle.

Mrs. Dewey at age 18.

The third picture is of her first press conference on a national scale, held the following day high above Michigan avenue in the Tower ballroom of the Stevens hotel. This time the wolves were there, men and women of the press, ready to dissect her every word, alert to her every gesture and her most remote wrinkle, prepared to question her on every facet of her life and thinking and to go out 20 minutes later to write dogmatic verdicts on what sort of a person the candidate's wife may be.

This time you caught a hodgepodge of impressions—the fine bone structure of her face; the strong, facile hands of the pianist; the quick, ready expressions of a quick mind; the friendliness which tried but did not always succeed in breaking thru what is either shyness or reserve; the low, musical voice; the awareness of responsibility both at home and on the national scene.

Finally there was a trip to Albany to see her in her present home, the executive mansion of the commonwealth of New York.

By American standards Albany is an old, old city. Its streets, sheer declivities winding down to the Hudson, are narrow, one-way, paved with cobblestones. Its architecture is a wry mixture of Westminster abbey, 16th century Dutch, and hobgoblin French, much of it from the era when all was tipped with copper—copper now so corroded that domes and spires of soft apple green impinge into the blue of the sky. And blocks and blocks away from the extraordinary pile of carved stone that is the state capitol you find the executive mansion.

No matter how kindly a person may be, no one approaching that mansion for the first time can be struck with anything but horror. It is 1877 Victorian, a great, ungainly lump of brown perched on a knoll. Carefully planted shrubbery does nothing to veil its sudden ugliness. It seems as tight and ugly as Victorian souls are alleged, probably falsely, to have been.

Whitehead, the mansion butler, comes to the door, a dignified figure in white linen, and leads the way into the central hall. You are appalled. The walls are deep red, and as glossy as tho they had been coated with shellac. The ceiling is a soiled gold with a gold fresco beneath it. Heavy portieres of dark blue velvet wall off every room.

Then he starts up the central staircase. It, as the large reception hall, is carpeted in red. Here, too, the red extends up the walls to the gold fresco of the gold ceiling, and at the first landing the state seal of New York, executed in stained glass, leaps out from a bay window. It is all as depressing as the national debt.

Then suddenly you are in another world—a world of apple green walls, white woodwork and ceiling, bright water colors, and fresh flowers foaming out from corners and tables. You are in the world made by Mrs. Dewey in the last year and a half.

It might be wise to say that quite a few other first ladies of New York have occupied that mansion since 1877. In recent years it has been lived in by Mrs. Alfred Emanuel Smith, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Mrs. Herbert Lehman.

Mrs. Smith imported French furniture for one bedroom and converted the state parlor downstairs, at tremendous cost, into a room which, altho true and beautiful Georgian, had little place in that Victorian house. Mrs. Roosevelt installed an elevator and converted one greenhouse into a swimming pool for her husband. Mrs. Lehman, afflicted with a passion for the color known as mauve, pitched mauve draperies and mauve taffeta bedspreads into the bedroom, installed a $10,000 retiring room for lady guests that is alive with mauve marble and full-length mirrors but contains a striking lack of conveniences, and so redecorated the beautiful Georgian parlor that it lost all charm.

No one made the mansion livable. That has been the achievement of Mrs. Thomas E. Dewey. She went to work with desperation, imagination, and a limited budget. She is only half-way thru.

"We've lived in a mess most of the time," Mrs. Dewey apologized as she led the way into her upstairs sitting room, "but it's been worth it. It might worry other women, but I have a very coöperative husband. He likes a pleasant, attractive home, too."

When the Deweys moved in the mansion had two peculiarities — there was not a single lamp in the place, nor was there a picture except an old engraving of President McKinley that hung over the bed in the room he occupied the night before he was assassinated. The lights were either of the beaded chandelier school or were plain, hard bulbs dangling from the ceiling. Nor was there any white paint anywhere except in the bathrooms.

With the aid of a treasure trove of discarded and uncrated furniture she found in the attic, and odds and ends of fabrics left over from the state capitol, Mrs. Dewey went to work. She first tackled the governor's large office on the first floor. Then she jumped back to the second floor to make of it a bright, gay place where she, her husband, and their two small sons, Tom Jr., 11, and John Martin, 8, could live.

Most of her remedies were basically simple, altho wonder-working. The room they now use as a sitting room formerly was a bedroom, altho no one knows why, for it had no bath, altho it had three doors leading into one closet. Mrs. Dewey took out a door or two, removed the Victorian picture molding, painted the woodwork white, replaced the dull green wallpaper with a fresh green and white print, cleaned and rehung the dark green brocaded damask draperies that stretched from floor to ceiling so that the room became filled with sunshine, and attacked the furniture.

From the attic she unearthed the never used, never uncrated modern furniture from the model house at the New York world's fair. Out of this she sifted a mirror, which she hung over the quaint brown fireplace, and two cream colored occasional chairs. The mirror reflects an oil painting of Governor Dewey, a picture full of warm rust tones. She built the room around this, picking up its rust in slip covers striped with green, rust, brown, and white. The addition of many lamps, a desk, and two of the Deweys' own possessions, a Steinway spinet with a Solovox electrical organ attachment, and a radio equipped for television, made the room cheerful and homelike.

The upstairs hall originally was a duplicate of that on the first floor, a mass of red and tarnished gold. Its furniture, basically quite beautiful French Empire, was upholstered in the old Pullman variety of red plush. A hideous black wardrobe and a black pier glass stood at one side, an immense black library table in the exact center, hiding an enchanting French Empire fireplace of black and gold.

Having transformed the walls to pale green and the ceiling to white, Mrs. Dewey made a clean sweep. She removed the beaded drop lights from the chandelier, painted the outside white, the inside aluminum, and rehung it upside down. She found a large mahogany loving cup in the attic, painted it white, and converted it into a lamp base. She re-covered the sofa with red and white satin stripes; found an old screen downstairs, covered it and two chairs with flowered chintz, and put the screen in one corner; painted odd tables white and placed vases of flowers or lamps on them, and tore down all the blue velvet portieres.

To go thru that second floor room by room would require more space than the paper shortage permits, but it might be noted that she built a beaverboard hall within a hall to connect the bedrooms of her sons with that of herself and Governor Dewey, at the same time providing for necessary cupboard space; borrowed paintings from the Albany Institute of History and Art to brighten and fill wall space, and changed what once was a dark, dreary governor's study into a charming family room.

The attic helped with the latter. In it, still crated, she found the original state seal of New York, never used. This she hung over the white tile fireplace. Two bronze vases, ornamented with bas-relief, became lamp bases. The large and stunning white maple modern desk from the world's fair house became the governor's desk. The use of imitation grass paper to cover the dark red walls, the substitution of white marquisette glass curtains and full draw curtains of chocolate and white figured homespun for the dark tas-

REDHEADS MAKE THEIR MARK!

Greer Garson "has vivid, gorgeous coloring when you see her in person."

(Copyright: 1944: The Chicago Tribune.)

Hollywood.

REDHEADED gals know what they want and almost always get it. They've been at the go-getting game a long time, even if we only go back to Cleopatra's time for the first redheaded fame grabber. Many authorities believe, however, that Eve, the mother of us all, had more than a mere Titian tint to her tresses.

Altho the ratio of redheads to the total of the female population is only 5 per cent, it's remarkable that so many of them have made their mark—and I'm not still on the subject of Cleopatra. On second thought, it's not remarkable, for redheads are usually ambitious, headstrong, and sometimes just a streak ornery. I'd say they are pretty nearly always clever and have talent.

At the Hollywood Canteen one night I introduced Goldwyn's 35 beauties. When I brought on the redhead the roof nearly came off. And when I said, "It must be true what they say about redheads—that they have more S. A. than blondes!" my redhead blushed so her face matched her hair.

Right here I'd like to say that being redheaded is as much a question of temperament as anything else. Some gals are born with flaming locks. Others feel redheaded, and, having been cheated by Mom Nature, dash off to the beauty parlor to have their color job rectified. You see, a "natural" redhead never gives up.

There is an entire gamut of shades that comes under the classification of red when referring to hair. It ranges from strawberry blonde to a dark henna, passing thru many intermediate gradations. But whatever color it is, if it's red, watch the lady who sports it.

In the movies, as in other fields, many a redheaded gal has made good. Virginia Van Upp, one of the only two women producers in Hollywood, is a redhead. She was associate producer to Irving Cummings on "The Impatient Years," with Jean Arthur and Lee Bowman. Right now she is on her own, producing the drama starring Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer, and Charles Coburn for Columbia. If you have any remaining doubt about her ability, just remember she also wrote "Cover Girl"—a hit picture, too.

At Columbia is Rita Hayworth, whose personality matches her hair. Dancing with her in "Tonight and Every Night" is still another bricktop, Marc Platt, from the stage in "Oklahoma." But this is a story about redheaded girls, and Marc is a he-man if I ever saw one.

Evelyn Keyes, who used to be blonde, has fiery hair now. She recently completed the lead in "Stalk the Hunter."

Redheaded Elinor Glyn, who wrote that scorcher of another century, "Three Weeks," tagged Clara Bow, another tawnytop, the "It Girl." Clara's fans won't forget the girl who was also known as the "Brooklyn Bonfire" before she retired to raise a family for Rex Bell on a western ranch.

Greer Garson looks sedate as Mrs. Miniver and Madame Curie, but she has vivid, gorgeous coloring when you see her in person. If they could really get her flame-colored hair and emerald eyes on the screen (even technicolor doesn't do her justice) she'd be a sensation as one of those slinky sirens she begs to play. I think she'd do well as Iris March in "The Green Hat."

Mary Astor also has Titian hair, and a temperament to match. Her screen parts have never given her the chance to smash thru with the type of emotional performance of which she is capable. Barbara Stanwyck and Lucille Ball are other redheaded gals who carved places for themselves despite obstacles.

Jeanette MacDonald, altho her career has been limited to singing ingenues, showed her red hair by the way she fought her way to stardom from the chorus. That takes grit, and Jeanette's got it.

Marlene Dietrich has red-gold hair. She was a whirlwind at the box office when Joe von Sternberg directed her in "The Blue Angel." Those songs she sang were almost too hot to handle, but after she came here somebody gave her bad advice and she became an unapproachable lady. A few pictures, and she slipped in public favor. Few thought she could come back. But Marlene gritted her teeth, dropped that chichi, took on Jimmy Stewart, and became a hussy in a western, "Destry Rides Again." She dropped all that phony glamor and put up a fight with Una Merkel in a barroom brawl that none of us will forget. The fans took Marlene back to their hearts, and she's stayed there.

Ginger Rogers made her hit as a redhead. Since then her hair has changed as frequently as our California weather. It's difficult to know whether Ginger today will resemble her name or be a blonde or a brunette. A lot of us wish she'd make up her mind. Susan Hayward knows what she wants, like a true redhead. She fought for what she believed was right with her Paramount bosses, and when she didn't like a role Susan walked out, got a job with "The Hairy Ape," and is now in demand.

Ann Sheridan, Nancy Coleman, Maureen O'Hara, and Torch Singer Dinah Shore are all carrot-tops. They've done okay. So has Billie Burke, who was famous before she married Flo Ziegfeld and entered films as an ingenue 'way back in the good old silent days. Incidentally, Billie introduced pajamas for women around the time of World War I. In those days a girl's pajamas were called "Billie Burkes"—just as life jackets are called "Mae Wests."

Two famous screen stars were natural redheads but wore blonde wigs before the camera. Pearl White, the serial queen, was one. Alice Terry, who appeared opposite Rudy Valentino in "The Four Horsemen," was the other.

Colette, who wrote the startling novel, "Cheri," had flame-colored locks. So did Ouida, who penned some pretty torrid stuff herself and is best known as the author of "Under Two Flags," if you can recall that far back.

Sarah Bernhardt, one of the greatest actresses the world has ever known, had vivid hair, talent, and a life to match. Mrs. Pat Campbell, the sardonic wit who got the better of George Bernard Shaw, was a great beauty in an earlier day and is another member of the famous tribe. G. B. Shaw wrote "Pygmalion" for Campbell before he learned she could successfully parry his own diabolical conversational darts. I could do a whole book on her cracks about Hollywood belles.

Elsie Ferguson had a disposition to match her locks. Some years ago, when she failed to find an enthusiastic audience at the opening of "Fata Morgana" at a Hollywood theater, she upbraided the spectators from the stage, reviled the author, cast, and production. Well, I don't have to tell you what that did to her.

Modjeska (the noted Polish actress), Rejane, Lotta Crabtree, and Ellen Terry were redheads, all great actresses. So was Mrs. Leslie Carter famed for her flaming hair. Carrie Carter was one of David Belasco's greatest stage attractions, and the legend of their battles backstage are legion. One of the stories I like to tell—no matter how they fought and no matter where she was, each morning on her breakfast tray was a fresh rose and a crisp $1 bill from the man who wore his collar backside front.

Eva Tanguay, the "I Don't Care Girl," who never stood still a minute, was a redhead, altho she changed her hair to blonde late in life. Irene Franklin was a carrot-top, won her greatest fame singing "Redhead," and then years later bleached her hair blonde, but she continued singing the song that ends with "Why wasn't I born a blonde?"

Many enchantresses of history were redheads. Some of 'em were no better than they should have been, and they turned men, nations, and empires upside down. In addition to Cleopatra, don't forget Queen Elizabeth, Messalina, Emma Hamilton, Helen of Troy, and last, but certainly not least, Magda Lupescu, were famous for their fiery crowning glory.

Boys, beware of redheaded gals. Some of 'em are good, some bad, but all of 'em pack a punch like the kick of a mule when they're mad, or playful as a kitten when happy. But take my advice, never stroke their hair the wrong way or they might forget which role they're playing at the moment and just turn natural.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: I've just seen Risë Stevens in "Going My Way," and I think she is charming. Perhaps she isn't as glamorous as some of the younger beauties, but she has warmth and poise that I admire. If you have room in your column for her picture won't you please print it? I'd love it for my album! Thank you—and good luck to you!

EVELYN MALBY.

Risë Stevens

Dear Evelyn: It's a pleasure to be able to grant your request. I hope you like this picture. You're welcome—and thank YOU!

Dear Miss Tinée: When do you suppose producers will stop capitalizing on a certain Dec. 7 for punch in pictures? Gosh, how these movie makers do the same thing over and over again! Like a bunch of sheep they are. Don't tell me you don't get tired going to the same (or practically the same) movie nine times out of ten! When this war's over we boys who come back are going to be just full of suggestions about a lot of things. Will anybody listen? Good luck, Mae!

JUST A G. I. JOE.

Dear Neighbor: Listen? I'm listening now. Send on some of those suggestions, soldier, and we'll air 'em in the column. Thanks—and good luck to you!

Dear Miss Tinée: Would you please tell me the name of the man who took the part of the German flyer in "Sahara" and his address, please? JOHN RONEY JR.

Dear Mae: Who plays Gary Cooper's leading woman in "Casanova Brown"? I say Anita Louise and my girl friend says Teresa Wright. Please settle our argument. There's a lunch at stake. Thank you. BESS J.

Dear Bess: Better make that lunch Dutch treat. Both Anita and Teresa are in the movie.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am writing in answer to Denis Vaughn's letter that you printed in your column July 16. I agree with him that "Follow the Boys" was a little far fetched, but only in some respects—and that the picture was released so that the public can begin to know the meaning of U. S. O. Camp Shows, Inc. I recently returned from the South Pacific, where I had worked in a camp show. We worked hard, but we figured we were doing our share in the war effort. What picture isn't a bit exaggerated? If every picture was true to life people would stop going to movies. Sincerely thanking you,

DORIS JEANNE ABEL.

Dear Miss Abel: I'm sorry there isn't room for your whole letter, which I read with great interest. Thank you for writing.

Mrs. Dewey—Portrait of a Lady

seled draperies at the long windows, the placing of a pale green air globe on top of open book shelves to reflect the pale green of the rug, did the rest.

Downstairs she has barely begun. So far she has tackled only the governor's office; the breakfast room, now pale yellow and full of green vines; and the Georgian parlor. The latter originally was all ivory, but Mrs. Lehman made it a dissolute green. Mrs. Dewey hopes to restore its original color, then gradually bring her apple green of upstairs down to the lower floor, darkening it as she goes and removing all velvet portieres. Her first job in the parlor was the furniture. It was all embossed red plush with the stuffing falling out. She slip-covered most of it, reupholstered two chairs in gold, had a gold coffee table made, brought in many lamps and pictures, and hung a lovely Chinese embroidery (also borrowed from the Albany art institute) over the mantel.

"I was always busy, ever since I moved in," she said of the house, "and I still am. It takes a lot of fast living in a house to find out how to make it comfortable. I've spent hours juggling furniture and trying to match fabrics, but I think the mansion has charm. It is very livable, too. I love it."

Governor's upstairs study in the executive mansion in Albany, a Victorian atrocity which Mrs. Dewey transformed into a livable home. (Additional pictures of the executive mansion appear on page six of this section.)

Mrs. Dewey is 41 now. She was born Frances Eileen Hutt on Feb. 7, 1903, in Sherman, Tex. Her father, Orla Thomas Hutt, went from Ottumwa, Ia., to Sherman as a boy. Her mother, Lee Davis Hutt, was descended from the Jefferson Davis family of Mississippi. Both families stem from the early 1600s in Virginia. That being so, Mrs. Dewey thinks it amusing that one of her ancestors, Sir William Lovelace, the brother of Richard, the poet, was colonial governor of New York.

As a child, she says, music, school, and church were her life. Her first public appearance was at the age of 3, when she sang at a Methodist church social. She can't remember when she started to play the piano, her mother also having been an accomplished pianist, but before she was 12 she was practice teacher for her own teacher, and at the age of 15 she was teaching her own class. At the same time she was playing the organ and directing the choir in the Methodist church in Sapulpa, Okla., where her parents moved when she was 11.

During her last two years in high school she took up the study of voice, her voice being mezzo-soprano, and when she was graduated in 1920 received a medal for singing which carried with it a scholarship to the University of Oklahoma. Instead she decided to go to New York with her voice teacher, Bess McLennan Hughes, and study with Mrs. Hughes' teacher, Percy Rector Stephens.

"I was always interested in music first and singing afterward, having started with the piano end of things," Mrs. Dewey now recalls. "But I happened to have a voice, and when you have, you go along with it. Mrs. Hughes and I lived together and worked together that first winter in New York, and my whole life became devoted to phases of music—history, harmony, languages, everything that a student should know."

She earned her tuition by serving as secretary to Stephens and, frequently, as studio accompanist. To eke out her funds, for her family had no money and had drained its resources to give her a slender stake on which to start out in New York, she also became regular soloist in the Methodist church in Plainfield, N. J.

During the three years she studied with Stephens she accompanied him each summer to Chicago, where he conducted a summer course for teachers at the Chicago Musical college. Here, during her second summer, that of 1923, she met young Tom Dewey, a recent graduate of the University of Michigan and winner of a musical scholarship. He was spending the summer months as a clerk in the law offices of his mother's cousin, Leonard C. Reid.

"But (back in New York) I decided I needed to make some more money and also get some experience," Mrs. Dewey recalled. "I decided it was time I got before audiences. I knew much from the student side, but little from the practical side."

So she got a job with the road company of George White's Scandals as understudy to the principal soloist. It was the kind of experience she needed, and on her return to New York she signed a contract for a 20 week circuit with Paramount Publix corporation to sing in Paramount theaters over the country. She sang Chopin and Beethoven arrangements and made a little side money coaching several singers in the company. At the end of the tour she signed up for a second 20 week circuit.

She had gone to New York the winter just before she was 19, studied for three years, went on tour, came back to New York and did a little concert work, and then went home to Sapulpa for a long visit. When she returned to New York in 1928 it was to marry Tom Dewey, then a practicing lawyer. After a honeymoon in Havana they moved into a two and a half room walkup apartment on East 83d street in New York.

She now has been married 16 years. For 13 of those years her husband has been in public life. "Are you used to it?" she was once asked. "As used to it as I'll ever get," she replied with a brief sigh.

Mrs. Dewey shares the feeling of many artists that if you are interested in one field of art you are interested in all. Thus, she says, she has written her share of verse and done her share of daubing paint on canvas. In music her preference, if she must be pinned down to one, is for Bach. It is probably safe to say that she is singular among America's candidates for first lady, past and present, in that she thinks sight-reading Bach the most wonderful escape in the world.

Her oldest son, Tommy, the image of his father except that he lacks the mustache, has inherited her taste for Bach, a taste that is pronounced even at the age of 11.

Mrs. Dewey with her husband and sons at the Dewey farmstead near Pawling, N. Y. The boy at the left is Tom Jr., age 11; the one on the right, John Martin, age 8. (Acme photo.)

Both he and John, a round-faced little boy who resembles both parents, are quite musical, she thinks, but in other respects are "just two normal boys, a little on the lazy side." Their principal summer work is tending the war garden at the Dewey farmstead, a 150 year old colonial house located on 486 acres of land in the old Revolutionary war territory near Pawling, 200 miles from here and 23 miles from President Roosevelt's estate at Hyde Park. Here, altho Governor Dewey pretends to be no more than a gentleman farmer and has his acres worked by a professional farmer, the two boys tend the garden and sell their mother their crop at OPA prices.

Mrs. Dewey is an omnivorous reader and one of catholic tastes. She now serves as a handy reader's digest for her husband, for she reads all the papers every day, the New York papers thoroly, reads the periodicals and pamphlets on special subjects, condenses the mass, and turns it over to her husband.

"I report on it as best I can," she says. "Reading is one of the things I can do that saves a lot of time for him."

In reading she has no preferences, adding quickly: "I really haven't. I just love to read anything." However, she now finds herself reading more for information than to be amused. When ill, she reads mysteries, which she terms her one luxury.

In public Mrs. Dewey is gracious, warm, friendly, and endowed with such charm that a gentleman, a Democrat, sighed as he left her. "It's good she isn't running for office," he said admiringly. "I'd be forced to vote for her." She is said to have an exceptional memory for names and faces, but denies this. She says she remembers persons very well only if they turn up in circumstances similar to those under which she first met them. "If a face turns up in a wrong spot," she confessed, "I find it very discombobulating.

"But," she added, "I like people, and I think that helps people. By and large I think people have been very sweet and considerate of us because we've managed to have our own family existence all the time."

Those close to the Deweys say their family existence is ideal, that the Deweys are a devoted couple, with the two boys trailing them around like plump, worshipful chickens. It may safely be said that Governor Dewey's nomination for the Presidency has not gone to his wife's head. The story is told of the day she was sitting on the porch of their Pawling home with a Dewey worshiper who was hailing him as a superman.

At this point Dewey came around the house. Racing behind him was Canute, their Great Dane. Somehow Canute and Dewey became entangled, and Dewey fell head over heels. Mrs. Dewey laughed gayly. "There," she said, "is your superman."

SPAGHETTI SAUCE

A gourmet flavor is given to this spaghetti sauce by the addition of red wine in cooking.

By MARY MEADE

PLEASE send me a recipe for a good spaghetti sauce.

That's one of the most frequent requests made to a foods editor. Over a period of years one collects many a good spaghetti sauce recipe. This recipe adds the gourmet touch of red wine. Otherwise it pretty nearly follows the pattern of other good Italian spaghetti sauces.

SPAGHETTI SAUCE WITH WINE
(Enough for six servings)

¼ cup olive oil or salad oil
2 onions, minced
1 clove garlic
1 pound hamburger
2 cups canned tomatoes or
4 fresh tomatoes cut in pieces
1 can tomato paste
Salt, pepper
2 cups red wine
1 small can mushrooms

Saute onion and garlic in oil until lightly browned. Remove garlic. Add hamburger and cook, stirring frequently, until well browned. Add tomatoes and tomato paste, salt and pepper to season. Add ¼ cup red wine. Chianti, cabernet, claret, burgundy, or any other red table wine may be used. Allow mixture to simmer in covered skillet until quite thick. Add second ¼ cup of wine and continue cooking and adding wine as sauce thickens. Simmer at least one hour. Add mushrooms about 10 minutes before the end of the cooking period.

Cook an 8 ounce package of spaghetti until tender in boiling salted water. Drain and serve with the spaghetti sauce. Pass grated parmesan or other hard cheese as an accompaniment.

A tossed salad usually accompanies spaghetti. A jellied one often is a pleasant change. Jellied carrot and watercress salad is pretty to look at and refreshing in flavor.

JELLIED CARROT SALAD WITH WATERCRESS
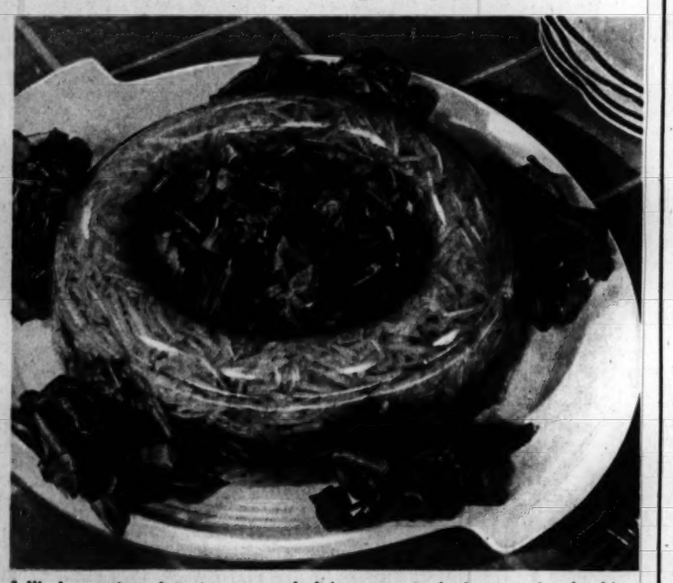
(Serves six)

1 package orange flavored gelatin
1½ cups boiling water.
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1½ teaspoons salt
1 cup finely shredded carrots
1 bunch watercress

Dissolve gelatin in hot water and add lemon juice and salt. Cool until mixture begins to congeal. Add carrots and watercress stems cut in ⅛ inch lengths, plus half of the watercress leaves, coarsely chopped. Turn into a quart ring mold which has been lightly rubbed with salad oil and chill until firm. Turn out on serving plate and fill center with short-cut watercress sprays. Serve with French dressing or mayonnaise.



Jellied carrot and watercress salad is pretty to look at and refreshing to eat.

Smiles Smooth Out Little Irritations

There's charm in a smile like this smile of Sheila Ryan's.

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY
(Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

GRACIOUSNESS, kindness, and smiles all are war time necessities, and together they add up to charm. With the strain of war causing overtaxed nerves and tenseness, these characteristics are badly needed.

For instance, if that young lady who stepped on your toes in the overcrowded bus this morning had only said, "I'm sorry," or if that big man who jostled you as he left the train had only hesitated one moment to smile and say, "Excuse me," how much better you would have felt about each incident! It's the quick, sharp brush-off from the offenders, their general attitude that seems to state rather emphatically, "It's all your fault, anyway," that causes anguish and irritation.

But how did you react? Did you growl at the young lady and glare at the man? Or did you stop for a moment to ponder over the fact that they, too, probably had taken their share of punishment for the day from other war-frenzied, irritable people?

True, we all have our share of troubles, anxieties, and worries today, but that is no excuse for lack of graciousness and charm. What benefit is derived from being snappish, surly, and out of sorts? Much more can be gained by smiling pleasantly, apologizing for your awkwardness, and being gracious when you are in error. There is something so warm and refreshing in a pleasant smile and a sincere apology that instantly you forget the hurt.

The general trend toward rudeness today often is summed up as thoughtlessness, which we believe to be nine-tenths of the cause. However, it is well to remember that one never tucks away in one's tender memory the party who is associated with an unpleasant incident. Rather it's the man or woman who was so gracious, pleasant, and charming that you prefer to recall; the gentleman who tried not to bowl over the other passengers as he left the train, the young lady who excused herself so courteously as she stepped on your toes.

Of course, if you are to expect this type of graciousness from others you'll have to start practicing it yourself. It has been said and proved that a smile begets a smile, an apology begets an apology, and so on down the line.

So let's begin a new era in charm at once. Don your armor of graciousness and courtesy, and carry a smile as your banner!

Robert Young

● Robert Young, for a number of years a popular star of the films, cannot remember back to the time when he did not want to become an actor. Born on Washington's Birthday 37 years ago, he began acting in school plays while still a boy. When he got a little older he studied dramatics. In the end, as every one knows, he achieved his life's ambition. He was born in Chicago, the son of a building contractor, but attended high school in Seattle and later in Los Angeles. As a member of the Pasadena (Cal.) Community playhouse he appeared in more than 40 plays. His regular jobs at this time ranged from drug clerk to newspaper reporter. While appearing with the Pasadena Players he was discovered by a film scout, shortly afterward making his debut in the movies in "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," featuring Helen Hayes. Since that time he has been seen in a long list of pictures, including "Strange Interlude," "Hell Divers," "Carolina," "Red Salute," and others. In his most recent play, "Secrets in the Dark," he is cast opposite Susan Peters. Bob is a six-footer, weighs 175 pounds, and likes to read biographies when he isn't playing golf.

Wild pigs range the hills of Guam, the main island of the Marianas group, recently reconquered by American forces. When United States marines there eased up on their grim task of sharpshooting Japs some of them turned their attention to the pigs with the idea of sampling fresh pork. Here they are bringing in a pig for the mess cook.

"Ben says I'm like a new woman on wash-days ever since I started usin' Super Suds. My, so much more suds!"

Mrs. Benjamin Dolen says: "No more extra rubbin' for me, thank you . . . now I'm usin' this grand new soap. EXTRA SUDS and LONGER-LASTIN' SUDS make dirt come scootin' out!"

"The milk-bottle suds test showed me how to get EXTRA SUDS!" Shake up a teaspoon of your old wash-day soap and a glass of water in a milk-bottle. Do the same with Super Suds in another milk-bottle. Even cool or hard water will do. See if you don't get MORE SUDS.

DON'T WASTE SOAP! Vital materials needed to win the war are used in making soap
1. Don't just pour soap in from the box. Measure it out in a cup so that you don't use too much.
2. Don't wash a few clothes at a time, using soap for each batch. Save and wash everything at once.

ROMANTIC FIGURES of AMERICAN HISTORY

The dramatic illustration above, by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Varnak, is another of the series appearing currently in this section with biographical sketches. Watch for this feature every Sunday.

ALTHO WARRIORS and statesmen naturally stand out in a nation's history and are therefore predominant in this series, the man of letters cannot be ignored. The poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, for example, brought his country greater world fame in the 19th century than whole companies of less peaceful figures.

Longfellow was the Alexander Woollcott, Eddie Guest, and William Lyon Phelps of his time, incorporating the better qualities of each. He made poetry pay in an age when poets were supposed to languish in garrets. He was an educator, a world traveler, an unexcelled story teller, a social figure, and a man of affairs. His reputation abroad was such that 10,000 copies of "The Courtship of Miles Standish" were sold in London the first day after publication. Toward the end of his life American public schools were celebrating his birthday.

Born in Portland, Me., Feb. 27, 1807, he wrote for newspapers and magazines even as a boy. (He later repudiated a doggerel poem about Mr. Finney and some turnips.) After graduation from Bowdoin in 1825 he studied abroad and returned in 1829 as professor of modern languages and librarian at a $1,000 annual salary. This enabled him to marry in 1831 Mary Potter, a former schoolmate.

The poet's first great tragedy came when his wife died in childbirth in 1835. Eight years later he married Frances Appleton, who was the heroine of his novel "Hyperion." Soon there was a family of two sons and three daughters—"grave Alice, and laughing Allegra, and Edith with golden hair."

By this time Longfellow held a professor's chair at Harvard, and his work was commanding wide attention at home and abroad. "Evangeline" appeared in 1847. In 1854, finding teaching to be a burden, he resigned from Harvard to devote his entire time to poetry. "Tales of a Wayside Inn" and "Hiawatha" soon appeared. Then Longfellow experienced the second great tragic episode of his life.

On July 9, 1861, his wife was sealing up packages of her daughters' curls and was using matches to melt the wax. Her flimsy dress caught fire and she was fatally burned. Her husband was also badly burned trying to extinguish the flames.

Longfellow buried himself in work to wipe out the memory of his loss. Meanwhile his fame mushroomed. His home became a gathering place for the great men of the time. In 1868-'69 he and his children made a triumphal tour of Europe, visiting Queen Victoria, Gladstone, Tennyson, Liszt, and other celebrated figures. In 1874 he was paid $3,000 for a single poem, "The Hanging of the Crane." (In 1840, when he was less well known, "The Village Blacksmith" had brought him only $15.)

The poet lived to the age of 75. He died on March 24, 1882. At his funeral the falling Emerson quavered: "This gentleman was a sweet, beautiful soul, but I have entirely forgotten his name." The nation, however, has remembered him well.

"The Mask of Dimitrios"

2 In Smyrna Leyden discovers the body of Cosmo Dimitrios (Zachary Scott) in bed and killed a money lender. He heard Abdul (Monte Blue) brag he'd Dimitrios escape.

3 Leyden's conversation one night by the waterfront. Mr. Peters (Sydney Greenstreet), who dogs his path across Europe, lets Leyden believe Peters believes he is mistaken identity.

4 In Soho Mercédès (Faye Emerson) is waiting for Leyden to learn they've become owners of an estate. Tembel (Peter Cushing) arrives and tells them that Dimitrios escaped. Leyden has been Dimitrios' keeper for records and tells of their happy existence.

5 Hungry and unkempt, the fugitive stumbles into Leyden's room demanding food, money and shelter.

6 Happily in love with the scandal-ridden beauty, he has become wealthy by the time they return to Kingsport. She orders him to leave, but he coolly admits he has murdered her as well.

7 Dimitrios graduates from petty crimes to power politics by cutting in on racketeers he promotes. Leyden provides an alibi. He tells all he knows about Dimitrios' history.

8 At his hotel Peters waits for Leyden to demand or quote a price for his information. Leyden accuses Peters of being Dimitrios' contact. Admitting it, Peters sends the author to Greece to interview Grodek who describes himself as an employee of the late

10 Double-crossing his principals, Dimitrios is found by Leyden's gun. Dimitrios is dead before he can fire.

11 Gloating over the second time with Peters, tells Leyden in Turkey that Dimitrios himself is alive—that the corpse was only another murder victim that the arch criminal now pays Leyden to follow.

12 Dimitrios emerges from behind shots Peters, who (although only wounded) outwits him to save Leyden and Bulic Dimitrios just before police arrive. The little author admits that this time he got real life drama when all he wanted was a story plot. (THE END)

GERMAN TANK HIT!

The terrific explosive effect of the projectile fired from America's famous rocket launcher, the bazooka, can be judged from this picture, which was taken somewhere on the battle front in Normandy, France. According to the original caption accompanying the photograph, the two man bazooka crew was firing at the wrecked building in the background in an effort to rout Nazi sharpshooters. The German tank in front of the building partly cut off the line of fire, so the men turned their weapon upon it. The camera recorded the picture at the exact moment that the projectile hit—the tank is shown in a cloud of smoke and flame. The bazooka is not only effective against the heaviest armor of tanks, but is used with success against buildings, pillboxes, and the like.

Bonin and Sulphur Islands—Key Bases for Bombing Japan

BY WILLIAM H. HOBBS
(Professor Emeritus, Geology Department, University of Michigan.)

SINCE the conquest of the Marianas Islands arc, now about completed, the advance of our forces is changing from the westerly to a northerly direction—toward the Japanese homeland.

Conveniently located along this track as stepping stones to conquest lie two island groups—the Sulphur, Iwo, or Volcano, and the Bonin, or Ogasawara. The strategic importance of these islands is thus very great, tho all of them are small and not too well adapted to serve as military bases. They will be most valuable not for an all-out attack upon Japan but for a softening up by raids of medium and heavy bombers.

But not alone for this. With the least possible delay we must establish a base on the China coast and supply in quantity the mechanized equipment which is so sorely needed by our Chinese allies. Directly west from the Sulphur Islands a distance of only 700 miles is the Loo-Choo (Ryukyu) Island arc of small islands, and only 500 miles beyond them is the China coast between Shanghai and Foochow.

Even before the softening up of Japan begins in real earnest from the Sulphur group we may be expected to capture the Loo-Choo Islands with their fortress of Amami, and so carry aid to China.

What, then, for the purpose of our strategy is the military value of the Bonin-Sulphur island groups? Nothwithstanding the fact that British and American naval commanders explored and colonized the Bonins in advance of the Japanese themselves, and that all the islands today bear English as well as Japanese names, they are less known to us than is any other Pacific island group.

Until recently the Sulphur group of three small islands appears to have been uninhabited and without any communication with the outside world. It was a great hurricane or typhoon which gave me in the fall of 1921 the rare opportunity to circumnavigate and sketch each of the three Sulphur islands.

Aboard the Matsuyama Maru en route to Truk and Ponape on one of its rare cruises to those islands, we were caught by a typhoon and driven far off our course. Five days in the teeth of the tempest without a sun observation, Captain Aoki had lost all knowledge of his position. Then in the middle of the night the sky cleared and the moon came out to show us drifting on the rocks of the Bonin Islands, which were in plain view ahead.

Arrived in the main harbor of Chichijima with its cable station, we learned that the storm had taken a heavy toll of Japanese ships, including a liner with loss of all on board. Orders were waiting for the captain to search the dangerous waters about the Sulphur Islands for trace of another vessel which had not reported. Each of the three islands was circumnavigated at close range before the missing vessel was discovered safely anchored at Iwojima, the middle island, to which our bombers are now devoting some attention.

In a military sense the Bonin and Sulphur Islands, which are less than 100 miles apart, supplement each other. Both groups are of volcanic origin, tho of quite different types. The Bonins are exceedingly rugged and rise from the sea on steep-cliffed slopes without beaches. Off the shores are literally hundreds of steep toothlike rocky islets ("stacks" or "skerries"). The shores are indented by many small harbors, but only one is of military importance. This is Port Lloyd (Futami Minato) on Peel or Chichijima Island, largest of the central or Beechey island group. This harbor is not, as has been stated, in the crater of a volcano. Its shores are much like those of the coast outside. It is a much better harbor than the one we are now occupying as an advance naval base on the Saipan west coast. It is a mile and a half long and about a mile in width. It has a sand and coral bottom and depths of 20 to 25 fathoms.

The entrance to Port Lloyd, when not blocked by mines, should not be difficult. The Matsuyama Maru, 3,000 tons, made the entrance at night without beacon of any kind. From the bridge Captain Aoki pointed out to me the entrance, marked by two gigantic rock pillars—the northern one, Eboshi Iwa, said to be 260 feet high. Said the captain: "The entrance is between the two big rocks. I am going in." A little later we came to anchor off the sleeping town on the northern shore, where no light of any kind was visible.

On the ridge east of the harbor is the fort and the wireless, and here the next day I was arrested by an artillery sergeant. Due to the rugged topography of the Bonin Islands, there are no natural air fields. In part this is compensated for by the middle Sulphur island, Iwojima, tho harbors are entirely lacking in that group. There are, however, unprotected anchorages offshore along the north-south line connecting the islands of the group.

Of the three islands of the Iwo or Sulphur group, those to the north and south are "steep-to"—they rise on near-vertical rock cliffs from the sea. When I circumnavigated them in 1921 they "had their hats on"—they were capped by clouds. They probably have no military value whatever except perhaps as lookout positions in fair weather.

The middle island, Sulphur or Iwo Island, is of quite a different character from the other two, which are as alike as two peas. Tho, like them, built up of volcanic materials, Iwo is of bedded ash and presents a flattish surface, tho with a crater volcano at the west end, and this was still smoking when I saw it. The eastern end of the island is a coastal staircase, coral capped and 379 feet high. Between these extremities is a stretch of perhaps a mile suitable for an air strip, but of only moderate width.

With easterly winds, which prevail from July thru September, medium and heavy bombers as well as fighters could probably make use of this field. From October thru December, when winds are more northerly, it would be much less available.

When I visited the Sulphur Islands they appeared to have no inhabitants, but now they are probably garrisoned. The Bonins, by contrast with the Sulphur group, are farmed, for to supply her teeming population Japan must make use of every tillable acre.

To Americans the early history of the Bonins is not without interest. In 1827 Captain Beechey of H. M. S. Blossom landed on Chichijima, named it Peel Island, and took possession in the name of the crown. Three years later the British consul general at Honolulu brought colonists, consisting mainly of Hawaiian Kanakas, but with two Englishmen, two Americans, a Dane, and a Portuguese. A settlement was made on the island at Port Lloyd. In 1853 our Commodore Perry, on his way to Japan, purchased from Nathaniel Savory, one of the American settlers, a 1,000 foot strip of shore land for a coaling station.

In 1861 all British and American claims were relinquished to Japan. A heritage of the early occupation remains in the English names of the islands and in the mixed racial characteristics of the population near Port Lloyd.

Youth on the Campus

By ELEANOR NANGLE

THE VISITOR who approaches the National Music camp at Interlochen, Mich., usually expects to find a collection of unhealthy young long-hairs making the countryside resound. What he finds instead are groups of normal, healthy boys and girls who are "different" only in their belief that music is more fun than anything else. • • •

The annual summer camp, now world famous, grew from an experimental laboratory known in 1928 as the National High School Orchestra camp. Only 115 students attended the first year. By the end of the second year this "impractical" idea had run up a $67,000 deficit. But it managed to weather the depression and get out of the financial woods. Enrollment reached 650 in 1943. As of 1944 Interlochen-trained musicians are to be found in almost every symphony orchestra in the nation.

Facilities of the camp include a $30,000 music library, 500 acres of woodland, with 150 buildings, bathing beaches, recreational facilities, 100 pianos, and 150 band and orchestra instruments.

Students who excel at Interlochen come to the attention of leading universities and music schools. Many of them win scholarships and fellowships that enable them to complete their professional training. Besides music, there is work in the drama, radio, art, and dancing.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS By BOB BECKER

The bond that exists between a boy and his devoted dog is typified in this picture of the collie Hi-Boy of Hortsville and his young master, David Platt. (Photo by Mrs. Sherwood K. Platt.)

THE AVERAGE family that gets a dog usually follows the routine of deciding on the breed and then shopping around to find a puppy of that breed. Once the pup is picked, he is brought home, and in many cases out goes the call for help on two subjects—how to raise and train the new pet, and suggestions for a suitable name. Not one week goes by that we do not receive many requests for assistance on these two problems. The dog owner usually wants a list of five or six names which are "different" and also appropriate to the breed he or she owns.

We've always felt that a family which gives some time and study to the question of a suitable name for a new dog is on the right track toward careful dog ownership. In the first place, a dog must have a name, and he must learn his name as soon as he is old enough to absorb any kind of training.

Furthermore, too many good dogs are getting some pretty awful names when they deserve better ones. The trouble is that in many cases an owner considers the name for his dog unimportant. Actually it is just the opposite, because a good dog certainly deserves not only a good name but one that is appropriate to its breed. Another point to be remembered in naming a dog is to choose one that the pet hears easily.

All of us who own dogs ought to give names to our pets that are short and easy of enunciation. The dog doesn't understand words as made up of certain letters. But he does understand words as combinations of sounds. For example, when we say "Simon" to our Sealyham he does not visualize in his mind the letters that are in the word. What the dog hears is that predominant "s" and "i" in his name, so he responds to the word Simon.

It's all right to register a pure-bred dog with a name that's a foot long, but his house or common name should be not more than two syllables and have one or two vowels in it that fairly snap in the dog's ears when he hears them. They are the signals he hears easily. For example, we once had a springer named Jack. Speak that name in a commanding tone of voice and notice how it snaps. There is no trouble getting the attention of a dog named Jack. He hears his name easily.

We once owned a Labrador registered as Mick of Barrington. His common name was Mike, which also is short and snappy.

It is always a good idea to pick names for dogs that reflect their origin. For example, the Pekingese comes from China. It's much more suitable to name a Peke Manchu, Lu Chow, or Tu Ching than Sport or Perky.

On the other hand, a wire-haired fox terrier which may be registered as King of Thorncrest Ridge may well be called Zipper in the home, because the wire has lots of zip and energy and is always on the go. As a rule the registered name and the common or kennel name of a dog are different, altho that is not always the case. We bought a clumber spaniel from England which was registered as Carnforth Tobias. (All dogs from that kennel had the prefix Carnforth.) The kennel owner shortened Tobias to Toby and the dog was taught to respond to that name. Here was a case of using the registered name (with a slight abbreviation) for the dog's common name. Toby is a good name, because it has a long "o" in it.

In addressing the dog for praise, to call his attention, or to give him a reward or a reprimand his name is extremely important. In giving a command we should call the dog's name first to get his attention and then tell him what is wanted. The procedure is: "Dawn—come here." Because the name is so important in our control of the dog, it's a good idea not to use his name unless the occasion demands it.

In our home we have experimented with two tones of voice in calling a dog's name. Our old Sealyham, Redlands Defiance, which always has been something of a clown and quite vocal, learned early the "command tone" when his name was called. Then we tried teaching him to give a throaty bark or response when hearing his name spoken in a sort of singsong tone of voice, like this: "SI-I-I—mon." If he is behind a door and hears this call he barks in response. There was no particular reason for teaching the dog this routine except to have fun with him. It's noticeable that when he is called to come, or go to his kennel, or come upstairs, he responds to his name but does not answer us. But when he hears his name spoken in a conversational tone of voice he has learned to answer the call by speaking.

ODDS AND ENDS FROM THE NOTEBOOK OF ONE WHO DELVES INTO THE AMERICAN SCENE

By DELOS AVERY

PRESIDENT JAMES A. GARFIELD was left-handed naturally, but he trained himself to be ambidextrous, and it is reported that he once astonished his friends by proving that he could simultaneously write Latin with one hand and Greek with the other.

J. A. Garfield

There is a story about the somewhat zigzag boundary line between Tennessee and Kentucky. The two sets of commissioners, it appears, were permitted to alter the line whenever they could reach an agreement, and the changes were made as a courtesy to certain influential land-owners who were fussy about which state they should belong to.

The famous Balleau Woods battle cry, "Do you want to live forever?" recalls an incident related by Richard J. Walsh about Custer's last fight: "Custer and his entire command were wiped out on the Little Big Horn. There were nearly three thousand in the avalanche that swept down on Custer with Crazy Horse (Indian chief) at their head, yelling, 'Come on Dakotas! There never was a better day to die!'"

WATCH TONGUE AND TABLE MANNERS

All Off-Color Stories Taboo

By MAUREEN DALY
(Author of "Seventeenth Summer" and "Smarter and Smoother.")

HERE'S something outside the usual boy-dates-girl department. It's something to sit back, mull over, and then decide for yourself. Most ever-lovin' mothers think their fellows and girls are slightly wonderful, so if one of them has a complaint to make it's worth listening to. The first letter gives out this way:

"I have two boys, an 18-year-old in the army and a 17-year-old who is a senior in high school. I'd like to say something about letter writing, and I don't mean letters to service men, but ordinary letters between fellows and girls.

"Letter writing often starts at about 14 or 15, when boys and girls are away on vacations and think it would be fun to write letters to friends at home. But do they ever think over what they are writing? My sons have let me read some of their mail, and I am amazed by the things I have read in only a few letters. Vulgar talk between boys on paper and swear words in a girl's letter are revolting. Can't something be done?"

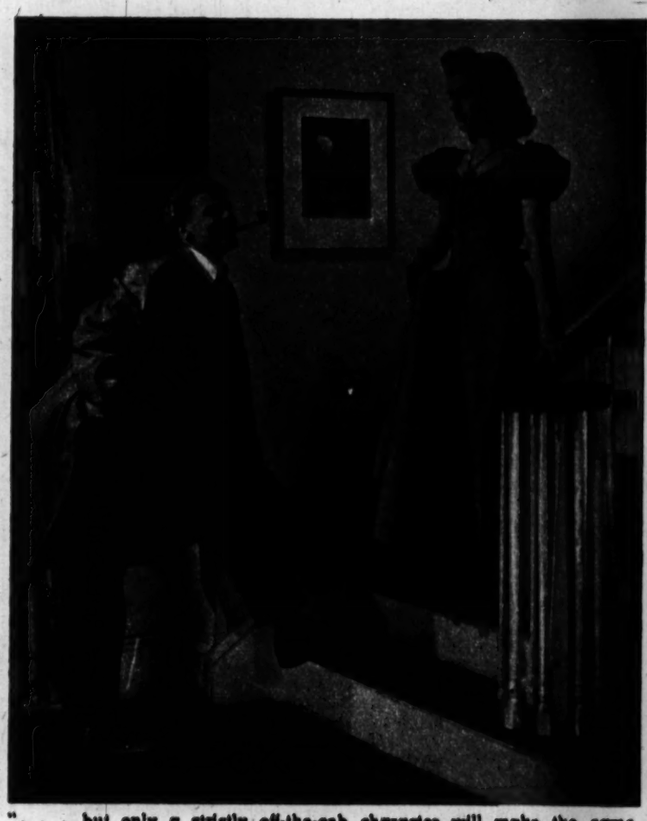
And the second letter tells the same sad story in a slightly different pitch:

"I wish some one would explain to me the current fashion of telling suggestive stories. My daughter goes to a girls' school, and she tells me that these stories are passed around among the girls till they are worn out; girls from fine families bandy these jokes about to show that they've 'been around.'

"I know it is smart to appear sophisticated, but when being sophisticated demands having a fund of immoral stories on tap I think a counter-propaganda should be started. Friends who have children in high school tell me that they are told with utmost nonchalance in mixed groups of high school fellows and girls. If some one could only make them realize how much they cheapen themselves mentally and morally by telling or listening to such stories and how they lower themselves in the regard of others!"



". . . but only a strictly off-the-cob character will make the same mistake twice!" (Tribune Studio photo.)

Occasionally a smooth fellow or girl might make the mistake of repeating an off-color story to a friend or among friends, but only a strictly off-the-cob character will make that same mistake twice! A gal might think this kind of hot chatter gives the impression she's been around; it does. It gives the impression that she's been around the wrong places.

And any stupid cupid who tries to be a boy about town by telling his current honey chile a joke with a shady punch line will soon realize he's used the wrong approach. Any girl on the beam appreciates an immoral story as much as she'd appreciate a hole in the head. To tell a gal an off-color joke is one way to give her your opinion of her in a very small nutshell.

And to look at both sides, any girl who has to resort to spiced jokes to keep her date amused is strictly an unwholesome character. And it would take a regular vixen with fixin's to be coarse enough to put her vulgarity down in a letter! An occasional slip of the lip might be excused, but that kind of talk won't be overlooked when a gal takes time to put the words down in black and white. Keep it clean—you're too sharp to get off the ball that way.

Here's a letter that's hard to believe, because most guys and gals have known and observed the do's and don'ts of table etiquet ever since they were old enough to hop a high chair or stopped drinking orange juice off a spoon. But, just to let you know what happens when an occasional Jackson forgets his manners, it goes this way:

"When fellows and girls give so much thought to personal appearance, why don't they give some consideration, too, to table manners? I have in mind one handsome lad with a wonderful personality who is just going to waste for lack of personal education. Both his mother and dad are employed and their only meal together is Sunday dinner. His mother says she cannot nag him on their one special day.

"There are many others like him who disregard such things as resting an elbow on the table and eating quietly; who do not know the correct way to hold a fork, to help a lady be seated, or to stand up at the table when a lady leaves or returns. It is these small courtesies that make a boy a gentleman. I wonder why so many overlook such important habits."

That's enough said. Give yourself the once over lightly and make your own corrections. It's all part of being a smooth Joe, and you know your own mistakes. It's easier to correct yourself than to wait till some one else notices your lack of etiquet and gives out with "Tuck up your bib, bub; your manners are slipping." As usual, a word to the guys is sufficient.

BLAME YOURSELF IF TEETH 'GO' AT THE GUMLINE

8 IN 10 MAY RUN THIS RISK!

Only Teel, of all leading dentifrices, avoids this trouble!

Why let ugly cavities rob you of your attractive smile—cavities you can easily avoid!

TEEL—the new liquid dentifrice—protects teeth because it cleans without scouring abrasives. Cleans gently—pleasantly.

The new TEEL way gets teeth looking their brightest. Leaves breath sweetened—mouth delightfully refreshed.

Just brush daily with TEEL. And one extra minute a week brush with TEEL and plain baking soda. Get TEEL at any drug, department, or 5 and 10¢ store—follow directions on package. There's beauty in every drop!

BEFORE THIS HAPPENS TO YOU—before gums recede—switch to TEEL. 8 in 10 adults unknowingly may need this protection—urgently—right now!

8 in 10 YOU May Risk Cavities Like These

See that cavity in the tooth above? It's NOT decay or erosion! That cavity was caused by daily scouring. Dental clinic studies have shown that over half of all adults examined had these cavities—and more than 8 in 10 risked getting them—cavities ground into the softer tooth structure exposed by receding gums.

BUT—extensive laboratory tests show this: TEETH CLEANED WITH TEEL ARE PROTECTED FROM SUCH CAVITIES . . . BECAUSE TEEL CONTAINS NO SCOURING ABRASIVES. MOREOVER, TEEL IS THE ONLY LEADING DENTIFRICE THAT GIVES YOU THIS PROTECTION.

NEW SAFE TEEL WAY TAKES ONLY One Extra Minute a Week!

HERE'S ALL YOU DO

1. Brush your teeth every day—thoroughly with TEEL. A few drops on dry or moistened brush. Feel it clean!
2. Once a week brush teeth with plain baking soda on brush moistened with TEEL. Brush at least an extra minute.

THIS CLEANS AND BRIGHTENS TEETH—SAFELY

"Guess My Age!"

New Kind of Face Powder Makes Her Look Years Younger!

Once this lovely girl looked quite a bit older. For she was the innocent victim of an unflattering face powder! It was an unkind powder—treacherous and sly. It showed up every tiny line in her face—accented every little skin fault—even seemed to exaggerate the size of her pores.

But look at her now! Can you guess her age? Would you say she is 20-30-35?

At last she has found a face powder that really flatters her skin—makes it look younger and more enchanting!

Why Lady Esther Face Powder Is So Flattering

Lady Esther Face Powder isn't just mixed, just sifted, in the usual way. It's blown by Twin Hurricanes—blended with the speed and power of hurricanes!

And because of this patented, exclusive method of hurricane blending, the texture of Lady Esther Face Powder is much smoother and finer than ordinary powder. The first touch of your puff spreads a delicate film of beauty on your skin, hiding little lines, little blemishes.

But the most exciting difference is in the shades. Lady Esther shades have a subtle new quality—because the color is blown in by hurricanes. Many women say that the Lady Esther shades are so fresh and alive that ordinary powder shades seem dull and drab by comparison.

Living Proof—In Your Own Mirror!

Try Lady Esther Face Powder! Get the smallest size box, if you like—but try it! When you see how much smoother and younger it makes your skin look—it's time enough to get the largest and most economical size. But to prove this is the most flattering powder you have ever used, get the small-size box today!

"Young man—you have it!" said the Wizard of Menlo Park

IT IS A warm August evening in 1896. Around a banquet table on Long Island sit Thomas A. Edison and the country's leading men of the electrical industry.

The talk swings to politics, to Bryan and McKinley and the Cuban situation—then back again to business. There is discussion about storage batteries to drive America's "horseless carriages". Someone points to young Henry Ford, Chief Engineer of the Detroit Edison Company, and says: "There's a man who has built a gas car!"

At once, Edison eagerly begins to ask questions—and to listen. "How do you explode the gas in the cylinder? Do you do it by contact or a spark?"

On the back of a menu, Henry Ford sketches his engine. Edison thumps the table so hard the glassware tinkles.

"Young man, that's the thing—you have it. Keep at it. Your car is self-contained—carries its own power plant—no fire, no boiler, no smoke, and no steam. Keep at it!"

Here was the challenge and encouragement Henry Ford needed most. It was something he never forgot. And through the years, keeping-at-it has remained a firm tradition of Ford Motor Company as it has created 30 million cars and trucks.

It is this keeping-at-it in research, in engineering and production, that has made the Ford name a synonym for smart, comfortable, economical transportation, priced to serve the needs of the greatest number.

In the peaceful days ahead, the new Ford, Mercury and Lincoln cars will reflect all the established Ford skills and inventiveness. Their advanced styling will match their famous quality leadership. They will benefit by the new knowledge of materials and techniques being achieved as Ford keeps at it, making the tools of victory.

Local Business Man Retires Because of Lost Hearing

Edward D. Wilk, well-known sales promotional executive, was compelled to retire from an active business career because of a progressive hearing loss, and remained in retirement for some time.

Today, Mr. Wilk finds himself again an active, energetic, driving executive as of former years. Because science has made it possible for him to successfully rehabilitate himself in society, he has decided to devote the rest of his lifetime to aiding others who may have lost, through defective hearing, their place in the social scheme of things.

Recently in a talk before a group of prominent Chicago business men, Mr. Wilk said in substance: "Through the miracle of modern science I have regained an amazing part of my life that I thought was utterly lost to me, lost to me for so long a time that I had actually forgotten how much it meant to me. You who are listening to me tonight cannot possibly imagine what a tremendous effect on one's whole well-being, on one's very personality, deafness or even a partial hearing loss can mean.

"When I realized fully that I was becoming progressively deaf, I tried everything in a frantic attempt to regain my hearing—all to no avail. People with normal hearing do not realize how easily they can offend the deafened . . . and often are unintentionally cruel, cutting short their conversation. It is then that the deafened individual usually gives up the effort to listen.

"In my case I had never been subject to the common ailment of the deafened—a feeling that they are being talked about and pointed out as eccentric individuals; nevertheless, I found myself making embarrassing or ridiculous comments because I misunderstood others, and felt that I was a kill-joy in a group. I had a tendency to back out smiling, nodding, and pretending.

"A blind person makes no pretense at seeing, yet the deaf are always pretending that they hear and usually grumble at people, saying that all people mumble. Poems and music have been written about the blind, but only 'funny' stories have been told about the deaf. I felt that I had no friend to unlock the door of escape from the soundproof cell of silence. In other words, my whole life was changing; I began to lose interest in business, friends, and even my own family.

"Then, just as I thought that everything was lost, through the help of a dear friend, science came to my assistance. My eyes widened in startled, joyful amazement, then filled with tears, for the first note of a new horizon of hearing burst on my consciousness and I realized with a sweep of emotional ecstasy that I could hear again, and was the Ed Wilk of old. With this realization came a decision to aid the many millions of those who, like myself, have been on the brink of despair, that they might rehabilitate themselves as I did and again be useful to society."

Mr. Wilk has not only regained his lost hearing but has edited a booklet which he calls HE WHO HATH EARS LET HIM HEAR. This booklet is dedicated to the hard-of-hearing and brings them inspiration and hope. It is free; it will be mailed in a plain wrapper to any one addressing E. D. Wilk, Suite 1602, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.

EDWARD D. WILK after short retirement again enters business field.

Whether in school—at work—or serving with the Armed Forces, there's no problem in selecting a good fountain pen when you follow these suggestions:

First, make sure the point is 14 kt. Gold . . . big and sturdy for long life—and hand-ground to match your writing.

Second, test the ink feed, for ability to start and stop writing instantly.

Third, try the filler—be sure it fills pen completely with one stroke of the lever—no additional pumping.

Clubs for boys and girls of working parents, organized and properly supervised in communities where clean, wholesome recreational facilities are scarce, can do much to help the youth of America become better citizens. Here are some of the ways boy and girl organizations can help in the war effort:

Collect waste paper, fats, tin cans, scrap metals.
Serve as special messengers for Red Cross, U.S.O., and other wartime organizations.
Collect War Bond pledges.
Collect books for the soldiers overseas.

TUT GETS INTO TROUBLE

THE Chinaman's pet watchbug Tut is a very good bug if you can overlook a few of his bad habits. He is a wonderful watchbug, for he keeps the ants away from around the teapot where the Chinaman lives, and no caterpillar can get within ten feet of the place. Tut is quite a help to the Chinaman, too, for he pulls a little wagon on which the Chinaman delivers his laundered clothes.

Tut is really a one man bug, for he is foolishly attached to the Chinaman and he will pay no attention to the rest of the Teenie Weenies. Sometimes he gets ugly and snaps his big pincers at the other Teenie Wenies.

One day several of the Teenie Weenies were working in the Teenie Weenie garden. The Sailor wanted to use the Teenie Weenie ax and he looked all around for it, but it had disappeared. Finally he saw Tut pulling at something on the other side of the garden and on investigating he found that Tut was dragging off the ax. He tried to take it away from the bug and that made Tut mad. He started after the Sailor, snapping his big pincers in a very alarming way. The Sailor started to run, but Tut took after him and, using his wings and only touching the ground occasionally with his feet, he soon gained on the fleeing Sailor. The Sailor decided to climb an aster plant near by and he scrambled up the long stem with remarkable speed, but Tut is a good climber, too, and he crawled right up after him.

The Chinaman saw what was happening and he ran up to the aster, shouting for Tut to come down. The bug was so angry at the Sailor he paid no attention to the Chinaman and that little chap had to climb up the plant and grab Tut by the leg before he could be stopped. The Chinaman made Tut climb down to the ground and then he gave the bug a good scolding.

"You velly bad buggie!" scolded the Chinaman.

Tut hated to be scolded by the Chinaman and he rolled over on his back and lay with his six feet sticking up in the air with a very much crestfallen expression.

"If that bug is going to attack folks he'll have to be hobbled," said the Turk. "He's dangerous."

"Allie same what hobble mean?" asked the Chinaman.

"It means his pincers will have to be tied shut so he can't bite," answered the Turk.

"Me no like to hobble Tut. He no can catch ants then," said the Chinaman, "but me keep Tut on leash."

For settin' a good table...

BREAD COMES First"

It takes more than plenty to eat to "set a good table" these days. It takes the right foods—foods that are nutritious as well as tempting.

Look at the panel at left—and you'll see that bread rates high on that score! Every loaf contains so much that's needed for good nutrition that plenty of good, baker's enriched, white bread belongs in every meal, every day!

Enriched bread supplies Vitamin $B_1$ and Vitamin $B_2$, or riboflavin, which has been called essential to normal growth and sound nutrition. Do you wonder that enriched bread is specifically mentioned in one of the "Basic Seven" food groups your government suggests you eat every day?

Bread's inexpensive — plentiful — useful in countless ways—and always available. See that it comes first on your marketing list.

WHAT'S NEW IN BREAD?
JUST LISTEN!

Made to standards approved by the U.S. Government, every loaf of baker's enriched, white bread contains useful amounts of all these important food-values:

VITAMIN $B_1$—helps maintain good appetite and steady nerves.
VITAMIN $B_2$ (riboflavin)—essential to sturdy growth and normal nutrition.
NIACIN—an important factor in the Vitamin B complex.
IRON—helps build good, rich blood.
PROTEIN—helps build tissue and promote growth.
CARBOHYDRATES—supply food-energy readily turned into useful work.

These standards have been assured for all baker's white bread through the joint efforts of the U.S. Government and the Baking Industry in the past two years.

POST-WAR LIFE THEME OF N. U. NIGHT COURSES

Veterans Will Swell Enrollment.

A number of courses designed to meet the needs of post-war living will be offered this semester by the evening division of Northwestern university on the downtown campus, 313 E. Chicago av. Dr. Rollin B. Posey, director of the university college, and Miss Neva Lesley, executive secretary of the school of commerce, estimate that enrollment will show an increase of about 10 per cent over last year's 5,500 and will include more than 200 veterans of the present war.

Altho all classes are geared to current needs some courses in history, political science, psychology, sociology, languages, and business are aimed especially at aiding adjustment to post-war problems. Standard courses in English, education, mathematics, business, and other subjects will be taught also.

Register Seven Days.

Registration for both divisions will be from Saturday thru Sept. 16, from 4:30 p. m. to 8 p. m. Monday thru Friday, and from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. on the two Saturdays. Classes will begin Sept. 20, and will meet from 6:20 p. m. to 8 p. m. and from 8:10 p. m. to 9:50 p. m.

Registration is open to graduates of accredited high schools, graduate students, special graduate students not working for degrees, and to adults not high school graduates, who wish to enter as special students. Persons withdrawing from school to enter military service will receive either a tuition refund or credit for their work.

The school of commerce will offer courses in post-war economic problems, hospital administration, production planning and control, and contract termination and negotiation, which deals partly with the return of war plants to peace time production. In the journalism school, on the downtown campus, classes in interpreting war news and contemporary affairs have been planned.

Will Teach Russian.

Because of the upsurge of science in Russia, Dr. Posey said, it has become imperative for scientists and students of chemistry and medicine to know Russian in order to read pamphlets and books written in that language. The university college is meeting this need by offering a course in technical Russian, open to all students but appealing especially to science majors.

For business, school, and government personnel and others who will be in close contact with returning veterans, an advanced class in psychological problems of rehabilitation will be taught. Government and politics of eastern Asia, Europe, and the United States are other classes which indicate a widening interest in world affairs.

Artist 'Frames Himself' Into a Job Supplying Art Work for Movie Sets

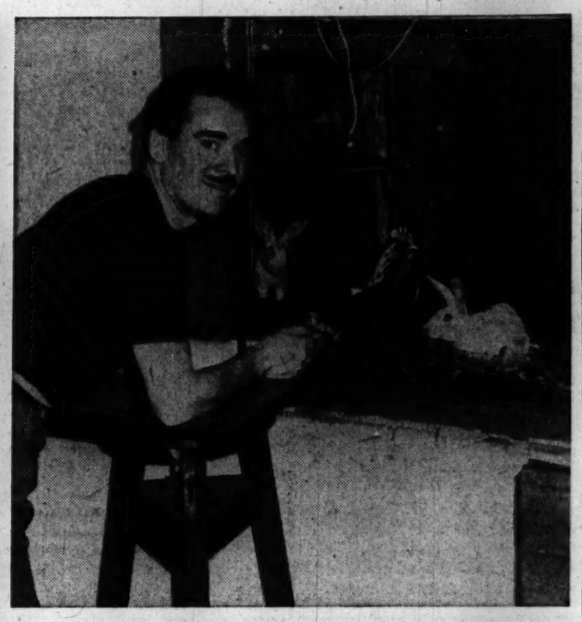
Picture frames hang from the rafters in the attic workroom of the Fager studio, 59 E. Wacker dr. The studio employs 19 artists and turns out original art objects. William Fager established his business in a south side kitchenette apartment nine years ago and it now occupies a three story building. He supplies original art pieces for Hollywood, Cal., studios.



Three white rabbits and the cock, Samson, occupy the first floor window sill in the rear of the studio. Bill Fager takes time out to feed the pets, which are housed in a window box. The rooster and rabbits, along with three dogs, two canaries, a parrot, two ring-necked doves are used by artists as models for figurines and still life pictures.

Mary Milosits sketches a picture from the original by Fager, which reposes against chair at the left. She will make 12 copies of this piece, and the Fager picture then will be filed away. Thru the open window can be seen part of Fager's living quarters in the front section of the studio building second floor.

In the studio storeroom are patterns of all work by the studio staff. These patterns cover the entire nine years of Fager production. The draft horses on the table are reminiscent of Fager's earlier life on the farm. He used to help with chores at his boyhood home on an Indiana farm, and knows a draft horse when he sees one—and can model it, too.

WAR VETERANS PLAN EVANSTON COUNCIL OF SIX

James G. Barber, commander of the Evanston post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, has announced that a new organization to help war veterans is being established in Evanston. A central war veterans' council will handle all problems instead of letting each of the six veteran organizations work out the problems for themselves.

Tho the by-laws of the new group have not been agreed upon, the main outline has met with approval of the six groups, Barber said. The council will consist of 18 members with three chosen from each of the six groups. These members will elect a chairman and vice chairman.

The council is planned because of the definite need for coördination among veterans' organizations.

CITY SCHOOLS OPEN TUESDAY FOR 450,000

Expect Drop in Prep Enrollment.

Next Tuesday more than 450,000 boys and girls will trek back to Chicago's public schools. School officials have estimated that there will be a drop of from 3,000 to 4,000 pupils in the high schools and junior colleges and an approximate increase of 1,000 in the elementary grades. About 100,000 will register in high schools. Last year total registration was about 470,000.

Altho war industries and the military services have drawn heavily from Chicago's staff of 12,000 teachers, school officials are not anticipating any serious shortages of regular instructors and substitutes.

Two Late Transfers.

Late transfers of instructors were approved last week by the school board. J. Chester Bilhorn, 3846 N. Kedvale av., former assistant principal at Schurz High school, will begin the school term this week as principal of the elementary school at 37th and Wells sts., and Mabel A. Williamson of Oak Park, French teacher at Roosevelt High school, will report as principal of Lawson Elementary school, 1256 S. Homan av., on Tuesday.

While the public schools are expecting a decrease in enrollment this fall, the Catholic schools of Chicago which will open Wednesday are expecting an increase of more than 2,000 pupils. A total enrollment of 195,000 has been estimated for the 8 colleges, 90 high schools, and 403 grade schools of the archdiocese.

School to Open Late.

One new elementary school, St. Gilbert's at Grays Lake, is nearing completion and is scheduled to be opened later this month. A three day institute for the 4,500 parochial grade school teachers was held last week at Providence High school, 115 S. Central Park av.

With war industries seeking still more workers, the high school placement counselors anticipate a heavy part time working program. Cooperating with the United States employment service and war man power commission, the schools have set up a program which will enable pupils to work part time. Placement counselors in each high school work with the pupils.

Large Percentage Work.

Last year more than 82 per cent of the boys and girls, 16 or more years old, in Chicago high schools worked part time or had heavy home responsibilities. Twenty-four per cent of the high school students under 16 also worked.

In the last few years Chicago schools have organized one of the most extensive club programs in the United States. Among the 917 clubs there is a pre-medicine group at Steinmetz, 3030 N. Mobile av., which meets for laboratory work on scientific experiments and has discussions on various phases of the medical field.

Many Have Camera Clubs.

The seniors at Lake View High school, 4015 N. Ashland av., have a forum at which they discuss everything from the art of conversation, war marriages, and dolls, to taste in dress and makeup.

Camera clubs have been organized at almost every school in the city and last year more than 20,000 model planes were built by the aviation clubs.

SAMSON OFFERS HELP IN ALARM CLOCK SHORTAGE

Rooster Just as Reliable and Twice as Loud.

BY GENEVIEVE FLAVIN.

Dawn sifts over the loop, the first faint rays of morning touch a Dalilike window box attached to the rear window of Fager studio, 59 E. Wacker dr. . . . and a cock crows. It is Samson, pet cock of William Fager, artist and creator of original art pieces.

Samson's crow might be tabbed the signature for each day's production at the studio. For he is the alarm clock by which William [Bill] Fager begins each day. Bill produces glamor pieces for Hollywood, Cal., studios. His figurines, lamps, water colors, frames, and wood carvings are used to dress up Hollywood stage sets.

Began in 1935.

Fager began his unique business nine years ago. His opportunity came when, as a student at the Art institute, he was offered the management of the art department of a large store. Among his duties was the creation of original water colors. Once they were completed he found it difficult to find proper frames.

"You might say I framed myself into this business, for I gave up my job with the store to produce something new in picture frames," Fager said. "I had a small kitchenet apartment on the south side then. There I started to work on plans for a wire frame. That's how all this came about."

Fager waved a hand at the display rooms of the studio, which today occupies a three story building on Wacker dr., as he continued:

"Things were mighty tough going in those days. I had no equipment. One of my friends had a spray gun, and he would spray the frames once they were completed. I marketed those frames to dealers. After five months of hard work and very little money I went home for Thanksgiving. When I returned—there on my doorstep was a letter. It contained my first Hollywood order."

Looked Like Million.

That order was for $1,000 worth of wire frames, and it looked like a million to Bill Fager.

Today the Hollywood contracts range into tens of thousands of dollars, and the business now uses a staff of 19 artists.

Each piece developed at the studio has been originated by Fager. He does the first water colors, which are then copied by a staff assigned to picture work. He models the figurines, and from his original patterns others are made. All work is by hand, and no more than 12 copies of each piece are released.

Escapes from Frames.

In recalling his progress from the Hyde Park apartment to his present quarters, Fager said: "After six months I had to have more room. By that time I had escaped from just frames to making glass and wire tables. Motion pictures used them, and they set a vogue. We were hard put to keep up enough production to meet the demand." The first move of Fager's studio took him into a coachhouse on N. Wabash av.

"I'm a country boy," Bill admitted with a faint smile touching the corners of his wide mouth. "And in the Wabash av. place I sure felt in character. Oats would sift down thru the ceiling; instead of hayseed in my hair—I had oats!"

Fager was born and reared on a farm near Muncie, Ind. He painted his first picture on a corn crib when he was 3 years old. "My first money from art work was earned when I did some calendars for the girl's club at high school. Made $48 on the deal."

Has Studio Menagerie.

Fager says his country background accounts for the menagerie at the studio. Samson's window box is shared by three milk white rabbits, and three dogs are housed in the basement. Two ring necked doves occupy the second floor working quarters with a parrot and two canaries.

"We started with just Zeppo, the dog; now we've got so many pets I think I'll have to take some of them out to my farm," Fager said. "O, yes, I just purchased a 184 acre farm near Monee—and I expect to work it myself."

Aside from being pets, the animals serve as models for figurines and have even found their way into some of the serious paintings done by their master.

CONDUCTOR HAS TIME ON HANDS, AND HE LIKES IT

"Workin' on the railroad just to pass the time away," a well known line from a well known song, doesn't hold true for Frank J. Mages, 3311 N. La Vergne av., a veteran of 50 years with the Chicago and North Western railroad. "I always wanted to be a railroad man," he said. "I've spent practically all my life at it and I'll continue as long as the Lord will let me."

Mages, a gray haired man of medium height, is a familiar figure to hundreds of north side commuters. For the last 12 years his regular run as conductor has been from Waukegan to the North Western station at Canal and Madison sts.

Tells His Schedule.

"I start from Winnetka at 7:49 a. m.," he said, with the exact attention to time that railroad men acquire, "and I'm here at the depot at 8:20. I leave again at 9:47 and arrive in Waukegan at 11:04." After the return ride he makes one more trip to Evanston and is thru work at 5:46 p. m.

After years of collecting and punching their tickets, Mages knows most of the regular passengers. "I can tell a stranger when he gets on the train," he said. This requires a long association with commuters, for as many as 600 passengers ride on one of his trains.

Started Work at 15.

Mages was born in Milwaukee, Wis., in 1876 and started to work at 15 as an agent for a news company on North Western trains, selling tobacco, candy, papers and magazines. Three years later he was hired by the railroad and in 1900 he became a conductor.

Mages is a member of the Order of Railroad Conductors and of the Catholic Order of Foresters. He used to play the violin and the piano, but claims neither as a hobby.

Made His Family His Hobby.

"My only hobby was being with my family when we were all together," he explained. His wife died in May and just one of his two living sons is in Chicago.

"I have no intention of retiring from the railroad for awhile," he said. "I could have retired when I was 65, but I'd rather work."

The week is celebrated by Chicago libraries with exhibitions of books and pamphlets on industrial and technical subjects.

Hild library has a collection of more than 5,000 such volumes, which were of great value at the beginning of the war production program in helping industries train recruits, said Ruth Utter, librarian in charge of the collection.

North side branch libraries with exhibits will be Lakeview, 644 Belmont av.; Rogers Park, 1733 Greenleaf av.; Hamlin park, 3035 N. Hoyne av.; Lincoln park, 744 Fullerton av.; Olivet institute, 1441 Cleveland av., and Sheridan, 4869 Broadway.

Exhibits Will Be Shown at Public Library.

Garden conscious residents of Glencoe will be going to the garden fair which is held from noon to 9 p. m. Saturday at the Glencoe public library.

The fair, started last year by the Glencoe Garden club, is being repeated this year because of the response of villagers and near-by residents last year. Entries were so numerous that the library volunteered the use of its grounds.

OFFER COURSES IN DESIGNING AT ART INSTITUTE

Big Post-War Field Lies Ahead, Says Dean.

Potential designers of furniture, automobiles, rugs, clothing, and textiles will enjoy new opportunities when the fall school term of the Art institute opens on Monday, Sept. 18, Herbert Ropp, dean, announced last week.

Classes in industrial design will be taught by successful designers and personnel from manufacturing industries. Ropp pointed out that designers with ideas will be in unusual demand during the anticipated post-war boom created by resumption of consumer goods production.

Learn About Materials.

Classes in painting, drawing, and sculpture will be offered again this year, but a class in industrial mathematics and industrial processes has been added to night school courses. This class may be attended by both day and night school students.

For the first time a class called the "vocabulary of materials" will be offered to first year students. This is designed to give students a working knowledge of the possibilities of materials such as metal, wood, leather, plastics, and chemical solids.

Study Psychology of Color.

With post-war planning in mind, a new three-dimensional design class has been added to the architectural sculpture department, and the ceramics department will offer construction and experimental work in tiles.

Carolyn Svriuga Howlett, 712 N. Rush st., head of the art education and junior departments, announced that the study of color will be a required subject for every student. Training will be given them in the psychological effect of color in creating a picture, an advertisment, a dress, or an interior.

RENT WILMETTE PUBLIC SCHOOL TO AVOID LOSS

The Hillcrest public school, located near the west limits of Wilmette, has been leased to a private school enterprise, the Wilmette board of education announced recently.

When the new Harper school in Wilmette was opened a few years ago the Hillcrest school was closed, and since that time it has been unused. Board officials said the lease was approved because the board deemed it advisable to secure tenancy rather than allow the building to deteriorate thru lack of use.

The Wilmette public school administration will have no connection with the new school.

EVANSTON CHILD WELFARE GROUP TO GIVE BENEFIT

An entertainment program which will include radio and stage stars will be sponsored by the Junior auxiliary of the Evanston Infant Welfare society on Friday, Sept. 22, in Cahn auditorium at Scott hall, Northwestern university. The program is to raise funds for the auxiliary's work in promoting child health.

A radio quiz show conductor will act as master of ceremonies and quizmaster, and will call upon members of the audience to answer questions. Members of the service league, the auxiliary's junior affiliate, will serve as ushers and assist during the program.

Miss Helen Chapman and Mrs. Louis Tilden are co-chairmen of the benefit. Serving with them on the advisory committee are Mrs. Joseph Corcoran, president of the auxiliary, and Mrs. Gordon Canning, vice president.

Other committee chairmen are Mrs. Eugene L. Voss, tickets; Mrs. J. J. Holloway, finance; Mrs. Howard Slater, talent; Mrs. George Fry, program composition, and Mrs. Robert Atkins II., co-chairman of advertising; Mrs. Carol W. Alton and Mrs. Julian R. Norris, patrons and patronesses; Mrs. Donald Wood Jr., ushers, and Mrs. Frank L. Stebbins and Mrs. Kenneth H. Morine, publicity.

GLENCOE PLANS NURSERY SCHOOL OPENING SEPT. 18

Enrollment in the Glencoe Nursery school at South school, sponsored by a group of mothers, will be opened the week of Sept. 11, with classes beginning Sept. 18.

Classes are open to 3 and 4 year olds. The program will consist of supervised play, health drills, and nursery school subjects.

Mrs. Marion De Largy will serve as director. Mrs. Robert Drake is in charge of enrollment.

FASHIONS, FOOD VICTORY SCENES ON PARIS RADIO

French Welcome Yanks Back to Capital.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

After four years of broadcasts by Goebbels' minions from Paris, the voices of Americans and Britishers were again heard last week on the short waves and in rebroadcasts over domestic networks from the French capital. Americans heard eyewitness and earwitness stories of scenes as Paris was liberated relayed by personalities familiar to them.

One of the broadcasts that made a special impact was a recording of the scene as Gen. Charles de Gaulle entered Notre Dame cathedral. A BBC commentator was busy giving a word picture when firing began. His recording was interrupted because some one broke off his electrical cable for a minute. But he got back on in time to describe De Gaulle's failure to take any heed of his peril and the capture of four suspects.

Paris Fashions Described.

At our firesides we heard dramatic accounts by American reporters of the wild scenes of jubilation [sometimes the sounds, too] and descriptions of current French fashions—"full and colorful skirts and deep V-necklines"—and reports of their first meals in Parisian restaurants.

It was all in striking contrast to the last fearful and some times tearful broadcasts from France in June, 1940. Mutual commentators were on the spot and reported the terrible scenes after the break-thru at Sedan. We still remember some of the last reports of Eric Sevareid and Helen Hiett from Paris. And we shall never forget Bill Shirer's on the scene report of Hitler in the World War I. armistice car in Compiegne forest laying down armistice terms for the beaten French.

Four Years Is Too Much!

After the fall of France the Nazis promptly took over French radio, and then followed four years of Goebbels' propaganda barrage on the air, much of it beamed to America in elegant French, some of it in our own language, and, of course, large doses in German. But in four years Americans never grew accustomed to hearing Parisian stations identified in the language of Berlin.

For radio listeners the end of the Nazis in the west was foreshadowed when they abandoned "We're Sailing Against England" and dropped back to the old national song, "The Watch on the Rhine," as a theme song for one of their programs.

American listeners now can look forward to the realization of a hope expressed by an American army colonel when he addressed a group of broadcasting executives.

"I hope," he said, "that the next time you hear me I will be saying: 'I am speaking to you now from an American tank as we enter bomb and shell shattered Berlin.'"

GERSHWIN MUSIC TO BE HEARD ON THEATER OF AIR

A program consisting entirely of George Gershwin's works will be presented by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra, chorus and soloists, under direction of Henry Weber, on the Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and Mutual from 8 to 9 o'clock Saturday night. Entitled "The Pioneer from Brooklyn," the program marks the return of the Theater of the Air to W-G-N's main audience studio following a series of nine special concerts at the Grant park band shell.

The Second Rhapsody will be played by Harry Sukman, pianist. Elizabeth Mulliner, soprano soloist, is to sing "The Man I Love" and "Embraceable You." Selections from "Porgy and Bess" also will be heard. Dramatic roles of the presentation are to be taken by a cast of talented radio actors and actresses. Jack LaFrande, writer and director of the series, will produce the show.

DISTINGUISHED GUEST HOUR IS ON AIR TODAY

The Distinguished Guest hour program will be resumed on W-G-N at 1:30 p. m. today. Anauta, the only Eskimo woman on the American lecture platform, is to be featured on today's broadcast. When she appeared on W-G-N last year, approximately 500 listeners requested copies of her talk.

Other speakers scheduled for the series this season include Sister Elizabeth Kenny, Jan Struther, Norman Thomas, Will Durant, and Ely Culbertson.

Judy Garland to Visit Bergen-McCarthy Show

When Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy, and Mortimer Snerd return to the air via WMAQ-NBC at 7 o'clock tonight, they will welcome Judy Garland and the singing King sisters as guests. An innovation will be the introduction of a new feminine dummy, Effie Klinker. Ray Noble's orchestra is to furnish music on this season's Edgar Bergen show.

YOUTH CLUBS SOLUTION TO GARY PROBLEM

20 Cut Delinquency 75 Per Cent.

When juvenile delinquency became an alarming problem in Gary, the city's youths took things in their own hands. The result, after a year's work, is the establishment of 20 clubs, operated entirely by the boys and girls, and a reduction in juvenile cases from more than 300 arrests a month to 75.

Young people who formerly roamed the streets are disbanding their gangs and boys and girls who formerly complained they had no place to go or anything to do are finding amusements thru the clubs and thru organized recreation programs which are being emphasized by the churches and civic organizations.

First Club Shows Profit.

When a committee, representing a cross section of the churches, steel mills, women's and men's clubs, housewives, and schools, took the juvenile problem to the young people themselves, Gary's youth replied:

"We have no place in Gary to go. Help us to choose our own spots and then let us operate them."

One of the first clubs, The Golden Nugget, was organized at the Y. M. C. A. small nook was partitioned off from the lobby and there, amidst red checkered covered tables and saddles hanging on the pine walls, boys and girls can dance and drink soda pop in the informal atmosphere of a western corral. In less than a year the spot has made a profit of more than $300.

Pastor Heads Committee.

The organized movement to combat delinquency was undertaken in July, 1943, when Mayor Joseph E. Finerty called a meeting of 100 representatives of welfare groups. They appointed a committee of 11.

Headed by the Rev. J. Kenneth Cutler, pastor of the 43d Avenue Presbyterian church, the committee spent several months organizing recreation programs in churches which had none, reorganizing social service groups to there would be no duplication of programs, and working with parent-teacher organizations and schools.

Veterans Boost Canteens.

Finally members called a meeting of a boy and girl from each class in the eight high schools, and the clubs were established. Now every school but one has a club and several canteens are being sponsored by American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars posts.

One of the largest "night spots" is the Wirt School Community club in Duneland village, a federal housing project. The parents furnished the equipment and the young people do all the work in running the club. The club is open every night. Sunday night is set aside for "parents and kids night."

In the last year the committee has sponsored a series of classes in community recreation leadership. The committee also went after taverns catering to minors. A 10 o'clock curfew, suggested by the boys and girls has been adopted for every one under 15.

Curfew Is Kept.

Basketball and football games are being started an hour earlier so younger boys and girls may attend the games and return home before the curfew. At 9:30 o'clock each night the movie houses flash on the screen a warning that boys and girls have only 30 minutes left to reach home.

A midnight curfew was enforced on the beaches this summer and Gary youths are starting a Big Brother and Sister movement to integrate new children into the community.

Members of the committee assisting the youths are the Rev. Mr. Cutler, Mrs. David Stanton, the Rev. Lawrence Grothouse, C. Y. O. director; Mrs. Morey Gross; Mrs. N. J. Radeff; Al McCall, Y. M. C. A. boy's secretary; Mark C. Roser, child welfare director in the public schools; Arthur R. Todd, the Rev. Claude J. Allen, Mrs. Maynard Gerdley, Peter Spann, and Joseph Siemion.

CHAPLAIN, JEW BUILD CATHOLIC SERVICE CHAPEL

Result—an Example of Tolerance.

A Protestant minister and a Jewish boy helped build a Catholic chapel for a Chicagoan who is a Catholic chaplain at an army camp. The Chicagoan, Capt. William J. Dorney, disribes the project as a "fine demonstration of tolerance that is common at Tyndall field."

Triggertown chapel is located about two miles from the main base of Tyndall field, army air forces flexible gunnary school, Panama City, Fla. It all started with Chaplain Taft A. Franklin, who is a Presbyterian minister assigned to the reception center at Triggertown. Previously his office was in the main chapel and he had noticed that frequently Catholic boys would slip into the chapel for a visit and a prayer. He wished the boys at Tarrytown could have this consolation.

Gives Half of Office for Chapel.

He approached Father Dorney, whose mother lives at 7146 Yates av., and said, "Father, I'll be glad to give up half my office if a little chapel could be fixed up where the Catholic boys could say a prayer."

"Swell!" Father Dorney replied. "Only I can't even drive a nail straight." Chaplain Franklin assured the Catholic priest that he was pretty good at carpentry.

Just about this time a young Jewish boy came to the chapel with a problem. As he waited in line, he took a pencil and started to sketch. When his turn came, Father Dorney noticed the sketch and asked him about it. The soldier told him his name was Leonard Dworkins; that he, too, was from Chicago, his folks living at 4306 W. 19th st. He had been an artist in civilian life, drawing under the name of Leon Gordon. He told the chaplain he was grateful for the help he had given him and would be glad to do something for him some day.

Goes Hunting for Artist.

When Chaplain Franklin suggested a mural for the little chapel, Father Dorney thought of the artist. He couldn't remember the name or even to what squadron the artist was assigned. The chaplain went down to Triggertown in hopes of bumping into him. Ten minutes after he had arrived, a lad stepped out of the sea of faces. "Remember me, Father, I was down to see you last week. I'm Leonard Dworkins."

Shortly after that meeting Leonard had the beautiful mural ready for unveiling. With a background of the Stars and Stripes, Christ stands with outstretched arms. On the right panel is the Blessed Virgin Mary in blue with a pilot kneeling before her, and on the other side is St. Barbara, the patroness of gunners, with a gunner on his knees asking her help.

Tech Institute to Give Free War Worker Courses

Of the 35 tuition free courses in radio and electrical engineering offered this fall by the Illinois Institute of Technology in its 12th evening war training program, four courses will be given on the institute's south side campus, 3300 Federal st.

Registration for 32 of the courses will be from 6:30 p. m. to 9 p. m. on week-days from Tuesday thru Friday, Sept. 15, on the south side campus. Registration for three classes in illumination engineering will be held Sept. 6, 8, and 11 at the Chicago Lighting institute, 72 W. Adams st.

Classes will begin Sept. 18 and continue for 15 weeks, meeting two or three nights each week. Courses taught on the south side campus are elements of electrical engineering, direct current; elements of electrical engineering, alternating current; alternating current machinery, and electric motors and controls in industry.

The basic requirement for admission is high school graduation or the equivalent in industrial experience, altho some advanced courses have additional requirements. The purpose of the free training is to increase efficiency of men and women already in war work and to train new workers.

Because the work is of a specialized nature, no college credit is given, altho all training is on college level. Certificates of graduation are awarded students completing the studies satisfactorily.

Barbara Stasiewicz, Petty Officer Mondrala Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. William Stasiewicz, 8345 Manistee av., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Barbara, to Petty Officer Harry A. Mondrala, 7822 Marquette av., who recently was graduated from an advanced optical school in New York City, where he is now stationed.

TRIBUNE V-MAIL PHOTOS TO GO TO DADS OVERSEAS

To Introduce Babies to Fighters.

Five south side men fighting overseas will see pictures of their babies for the first time in V-mail photos which will be sent them by the Metropolitan section of The Tribune. Pictures of the babies and their mothers soon will be on the way to battle areas around the world.

Staff Sgt. Oscar K. Ziegler, mechanic at a Super Fortress bomber base in China, will be introduced to his blue eyed, brown haired son Robert, born June 12. "Bobbie is the picture of his father but he has my dimples," Mrs. Frances Ziegler, 6540 Maryland av., the mother, said. Sgt. Ziegler entered the air forces in April, 1942, and has been overseas since last February. He was a mechanic before entering the air forces.

She's Daddy's Image.

Another baby that looks like her father is Judyth Anne, who has big brown eyes and dark hair and was born April 17. Corp. John J. Miller of the army medical corps was sent to England shortly before the baby was born. He has been in the army two years. Mrs. Leotta Miller, 7045 Woodlawn av., is the child's mother.

A blonde with blue eyes is Shirley Ann, 5 months old, daughter of Mrs. Virginia Pawelek, 8756 Marquette av., and J. Edward Pawelek, a private with the military police in England. He entered the army two years ago and has been overseas a year.

He's Headed for Gridiron.

Michael Beinor, 3 months old, has his career cut out for him since he is the son of a former all-American football star, J. E. Beinor, who has served seven months in the South Pacific as a first lieutenant with the marine corps. Michael and his mother live at 6317 Blackstone av. Lt. Beinor played football at Notre Dame university and with the Chicago Cardinals.

Corp. William Rosta, stationed with an army anti-aircraft unit in Dutch New Guinea, asks in every letter about his son, William Jr., and already is planning to take him on fishing trips, Mrs. Helen Rosta, the mother, said. The baby has dark brown hair and brown eyes. The Rostas live at 3607 Grand blvd., East Chicago, Ind.

Expect Drop in Prep Enrollment.

Tuesday morning more than 450,000 boys and girls will trek back to Chicago's public schools. School officials have estimated that there will be a drop of from 3,000 to 4,000 pupils in the high schools and junior high colleges and an approximate increase of 1,000 pupils in the elementary grades. Last year's total registration was about 470,000.

Altho war industries and the military services have drawn heavily from Chicago's staff of 12,000 teachers, school officials are not anticipating any serious shortages of regular instructors and substitutes.

Catholics Open Wednesday.

Late transfers were approved last week by the school board. J. Chester Bilhorn, 3846 N. Kedvale av., former assistant principal at Schurz High school, will begin the school term this week as principal of the elementary school at 37th and Wells sts.

While the public schools are expecting a decrease in school enrollment this fall, the Catholic schools, which will open Wednesday, are expecting an increase of more than 2,000 pupils. A total enrollment of 195,000 students has been estimated for the eight colleges, 90 high schools and 403 grade schools of the archdiocese.

Plan Two Additions.

On the south side addition of 101 new public school classrooms within the coming year has been approved. One new school will be available Sept. 15 when the building formerly occupied by the La Salle Extension university, 41st st. and Michigan av., will be converted to an elementary school, accommodating 1,500 pupils.

The school board also has let contracts totaling $316,452 for the construction of a 20 room addition to Phillips Elementary school, Pershing rd. and Prairie av. The addition will accommodate 800 more pupils. Construction will start immediately, John C. Christensen, school architect, said, and should be completed in six months.

Continue Work-Study Program.

With war industries seeking still more workers, the high school placement counselors anticipate a heavy part time working program. Cooperating with the United States employment service and war man power commission, the schools have set up a program which enables pupils to work part time. Placement counselors work with pupils, checking their school records, and recommending jobs to fit their capabilities and resources and which afford the least hindrance to their school work.

Last year more than 82 per cent of boys and girls, 16 or more years old, in Chicago high schools worked part time or had heavy home responsibilities. Twenty-four per cent of the high school pupils under 16 also held part time jobs.

917 Clubs Active.

During the last few years Chicago schools have organized one of the most extensive club programs in the United States. The 917 clubs which will resume work again next week are classified into four groups. There are those dealing with the curriculum such as the Spanish, mathematics, and science clubs; the extra curricular clubs organized for social purposes; the organizations participating in school government, and the service groups.

Last year during cleanup week, pupils at Morgan Park High school, 1744 Pryor av., organized the Available Jones club which has been operating all summer. The members mow lawns, trim hedges, and harvest war gardens.

Hyde Park High school, 6220 Stony Island av., has an organization which registers pupils to care for children when parents call, and at Fenger High school, 11220 Wallace st., the hospital volunteers soon will be serving trays at Roseland Community hospital, 11101 Perry av., every day from 4:30 to 6 p. m.

S. SIDE CHURCH BUILT AROUND PARTS OF MANY

Stones in Presbyterian Edifice Date to 1300 B.C.

Rev. Bowman.

Stones from churches of Egypt, Italy, England, and many other corners of the earth are imbedded in the structure of the First Presbyterian church of Chicago, 64th st. and Kimbark av.

The tree shaded edifice has a history dating back to Fort Dearborn where it was organized in the summer of 1833. It is the oldest Protestant church in Chicago, according to the Rev. Harold L. Bowman, pastor, antedating by a few weeks the incorporation of the city itself.

In one of the arches that leads to the garden a rough oak timber is imbedded in commemoration of the church's first home in the carpenter shop of the fort. Stones are there to represent subsequent sites.

Moved to 'Country.'

A year after its organization a frame church costing $600 was erected at the southwest corner of Clark and Lake sts. It was here that the first public school classes were held and court cases were heard.

Eight years later the congregation decided to move out to the country and a stone structure was erected at Wabash av. and Congress st. It was destroyed in the Chicago fire.

The church was then rebuilt at 21st st. and Indiana av. Eventually it moved to what was considered one of the most fashionable sections of the city—36th st. and Vincennes av. In 1875 enough trees were cleared away to make room for a building to house the congregation at 41st st. and Michigan av. It was known as "the little church in the woods."

Churches Merged in 1926.

A few daring pioneers had founded a church in Woodlawn park in 1885 and in 1926 the Woodlawn Park and First church merged, taking the name of the latter and erecting the present edifice at 64th st. and Kimbark av.

Among the rocks which have a colorful history is the Karnak Temple stone dating from 1300 B. C. It is a carved stone from a temple, near Luxor, Egypt, and depicts the Pharaoh Seti I receiving a captive Philistine king.

Three stones came from the quarries of the Holy Land. One, from King Solomon's quarry, once adorned the famous temple of antiquity. The other two were imported from Bethlehem and Nazareth.

Two Stones from Rome.

In an honored spot in the chancel floor is a fragment of Porta Santa marble which came from St. John Lateran's church, built by Emporer Constantine at the site of the home of St. Clement in Rome. The oldest church in Rome, it is second in importance to St. Peter's.

In the floor of the chapel, before the altar, rests a stone which was a part of the floor of St. Peter's, the papal cathedral at Rome for about 400 years.

A niche at the south end of the cloister holds a stone brought from the cathedral at Rheims, France. Rheims, one of the most beautiful shrines in Europe, has a stormy history, having been ceded to the English in 1420 and recaptured in 1429 by French troops commanded by the heroic Joan of Arc.

St. Peter's Gives Capital.

In the cloister are stones from ancient Westminster abbey, Chester cathedral, and St. Olave's church of London. St. Peter's of Geneva is also represented, having given a carved capital to the new First Presbyterian congregation in 1928.

St. Peter's was the church in which John Calvin worked and preached, and is regarded as the mother church of all Presbyterian and Reformed churches.

Some from This Country.

The last of the foreign stones is from the Temple du Chabas, built in France by Waldensians, the oldest existing Protestant sect.

Minute sections of the St. Andrew's cathedral of Toronto, Canada, and from the old Rehoboth of Rehoboth, Md.., complete the collection, which holds a history of more than 3,000 years of religion.

This rare collection was acquired by the First Presbyterian church thru gifts donated by various persons and institutions.

South Shore Hospital to Graduate 8 Nurses

The South Shore hospital school of nursing will graduate eight students at commencement at 8 p. m. Friday in the Calvary Baptist church, 2309 E. 80th st. Members of the class are Edith Bortolami, Jean Canty, Dorothy Carey, Pearl Clark, Ardelle Jacobsen, Elaine Neinast, Mary Sweeney, and Shirley Sandquist.

Foliage Frames Church Stones

Foliage at the First Presbyterian church, 64th st. and Kimbark av., effectively frames the stones from places of worship all over the world, some as old as 3,000 years, which are imbedded in the church building. The church was organized in 1833 in the carpenter shop of Fort Dearborn and is the oldest Protestant church in Chicago.

COOK BALANCES PROTEINS, FATS IN PLANE TRAVEL

Meals Planned Far in Advance.

Balancing carbohydrates, fats, and proteins in speeding passenger planes roaring high over the United States is the job of Mrs. Jean F. Arbogust, 5220 Kenwood av., dietitian for United Air Lines.

Two weeks before a meal is served to passengers usually traveling 180 miles an hour at 10,000 feet, the menu is planned by Mrs. Arbogust and eight Swiss chefs who prepare the food in commissaries at eight key cities. Meals are placed aboard the planes just before departure and usually are served within an hour after the take-off.

Insulate Hot Foods.

Hot foods are carried in individual casseroles and placed in insulated boxes. Cold foods are packed with dry ice, and beverages are kept at serving temperatures in vacuum bottles. About 3,000 meals are served aloft daily.

Every stewardess includes passenger comments on the food in her flight rpports. These are forwarded to Mrs. Arbogust to aid her in improving meals. A typical report reads: "Passengers do not like doughnuts as well as Danish pastry. Half doughnuts and half rolls would be better."

A further aid to Mrs. Arbogust is the research kitchen and altitude test chamber located at the air line headquarters, 5959 S. Cicero av. In the kitchen, which is equipped with a luncheon nook, she tries out new menus, recipes, and coffee blends on employes. Food and beverages are tested also in the chamber where the atmospheric pressure of high altitudes can be simulated.

Avoid Fried Foods.

Fried foods are rarely served aloft for the lessened pressure draws out the grease. Meat which must be browned is usually baked and naturally greasy foods are carefully drained before serving.

Some blends of coffee lose flavor from standing in vacuum bottles altho altitude seems to have no effect on the flavor of beverages or food. Both warm food and heated beverages must be watched carefully at high atltitudes for lower atmospheric pressure causes them to cook again. Water boils at 212 degrees fahrenheit on the ground but at 10,000 feet it boils at about 180 degrees.

Rationing was met by Mrs. Arbogust and her staff by using more poultry. More ice cream was used in place of pastries and cake. Desserts prepared with a minimum of sugar were adopted. Fresh fruits were used instead of canned fruits and fresh vegetables and fruits were selected for salads.

Here's Ordinary Menu.

A typical menu contains: for breakfast—chilled orange juice, scrambled eggs and ham, sweet rolls, and coffee; for lunch—fruit cocktail, tenderloin tips saute with vegetables, combination salad, rolls, devil's food cake, and coffee, tea, or milk; for dinner—fresh seafood cocktail, toasted crackers, breast of chicken saute, buttered carrots and peas, hot rolls, fresh fruit salad with cream dressing, chocolate chip ice cream, assorted cookies, and coffee, tea, or milk.

In order that a passenger will not get similar meals from two different commissaries along his route, Mrs. Arbogust carefully checks the menus from all cities before she orders them printed. At the same time she balances meals from the standpoint of calories and vitamins. On June 29 the chief dish from the New York commissary was roast Long Island duckling, in Washington it was roast chicken, Cleveland was serving roast beef, Chicago chefs cooked lamb chops, Omaha served chop suey, and passengers leaving Los Angeles ate baked ham.

Have Some Chicken.

The history of food service on passenger planes is marked by the "box lunch era" and the "fried chicken era." Early passengers depended upon the generosity of mail pilots who shared sandwiches and coffee around a hangar stove between flights.

On the early trimotored transport planes box lunches were passed out by the co-pilot. It soon was discovered that fried chicken kept well in the air and suited most palates.

Tests Cookers

Mrs. Jean Arbogust, 5220 Kenwood av., dietitian for United Air Lines, removes pressure cookers from electrically heated galleys in the altitude test chamber. The mask provides her with the normal supply of oxygen.

OFFER COURSES IN DESIGNING AT ART INSTITUTE

Potential designers of furniture, automobiles, rugs, clothing, and textiles will enjoy new opportunities when the fall school term of the Art institute opens on Monday, Sept. 18, Herbert Ropp, dean, announced last week.

Classes in industrial design will be taught by successful designers and personnel from manufacturing industries. Ropp pointed out that designers with ideas will be in unusual demand during the anticipated post-war boom created by resumption of consumer goods production.

Learn About Materials.

Classes in painting, drawing, and sculpture will be offered again this year, but a class in industrial mathematics and industrial processes has been added to night school courses. This class may be attended by both day and night school students.

For the first time a class called the "vocabulary of materials" will be offered to first year students. This is designed to give students a working knowledge of the possibilities of materials such as metal, wood, leather, plastics, and chemical solids.

Study Psychology of Color.

With post-war planning in mind, a new three-dimensional design class has been added to the architectural sculpture department, and the ceramics department will offer construction and experimental work in tiles.

Carolyn Svrluga Howlett, 712 N. Rush st., head of the art education and junior departments, announced that the study of color will be a required subject for every student. Training will be given them in the psychological effect of color in creating a picture, an advertisment, a dress, or an interior.

BANK CREDIT is a Commodity

Some would have you believe that a bank does you a favor when it lends you money. That is far from the truth.

Next to safe-guarding deposits, lending money is a bank's most important function—its principal source of income. A bank that lends you money is no more doing you a favor than a storekeeper who sells you merchandise at a profit.

BUSINESS LOANS
secured and open line
REAL ESTATE LOANS to buy, build, refinance, modernize
COLLATERAL LOANS
on listed stocks, bonds, life insurance
INSURANCE PREMIUM FINANCING
AUTO LOANS

Of course, a bank must know that its loans can and will be repaid.

Loans that help firms and individuals succeed in their undertaking are the soundest. By making loans of that kind we have helped our customers to grow. Their growth has made possible our own — from $357,000 in 1935 to over 22 Million Dollars today.

Perhaps our broad, liberal credit policy can help you. Call on us when it can.

FASHIONS, FOOD VICTORY SCENES ON PARIS RADIO

French Welcome Yanks Back to Capital.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

After four years of broadcasts by Goebbels' minions from Paris, the voices of Americans and Britishers were again heard last week on the short waves and in rebroadcasts over domestic networks from the French capital. Americans heard eyewitness and earwitness stories of scenes as Paris was liberated relayed by personalities familiar to them.

One of the broadcasts that made a special impact was a recording of the scene as Gen. Charles de Gaulle entered Notre Dame cathedral. A BBC commentator was busy giving a word picture when firing began. His recording was interrupted because some one broke off his electrical cable for a minute. But he got back on in time to describe De Gaulle's failure to take any heed of his peril and the capture of four suspects.

Paris Fashions Described.

At our firesides we heard dramatic accounts by American reporters of the wild scenes of jubilation [sometimes the sounds, too] and descriptions of current French fashions—"full and colorful skirts and deep V-necklines"—and reports of their first meals in Parisian restaurants.

It was all in striking contrast to the last fearful and some times tearful broadcasts from France in June, 1940. Mutual commentators were on the spot and reported the terrible scenes after the break-thru at Sedan. We still remember some of the last reports of Eric Sevareid and Helen Hiett from Paris. And we shall never forget Bill Shirer's on the scene report of Hitler in the World War I. armistice car in Compiegne forest laying down armistice terms for the beaten French.

Four Years Is Too Much!

After the fall of France the Nazis promptly took over French radio, and then followed four years of Goebbels' propaganda barrage on the air, much of it beamed to America in elegant French, some of it in our own language, and, of course, large doses in German. But in four years Americans never grew accustomed to hearing Parisian stations identified in the language of Berlin.

For radio listeners the end of the Nazis in the west was foreshadowed when they abandoned "We're Sailing Against England" and dropped back to the old national song, "The Watch on the Rhine," as a theme song for one of their programs.

American listeners now can look forward to the realization of a hope expressed by an American army colonel when he addressed a group of broadcasting executives.

"I hope," he said, "that the next time you hear me I will be saying: 'I am speaking to you now from an American tank as we enter bomb and shell shattered Berlin.'"

GERSHWIN MUSIC TO BE HEARD ON THEATER OF AIR

A program consisting entirely of George Gershwin's works will be presented by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra, chorus and soloists, under direction of Henry Weber, on the Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and Mutual from 8 to 9 o'clock Saturday night. Entitled "The Pioneer from Brooklyn," the program marks the return of the Theater of the Air to W-G-N's main audience studio following a series of nine special concerts at the Grant park band shell.

The Second Rhapsody will be played by Harry Sukman, pianist. Elizabeth Mulliner, soprano soloist, is to sing "The Man I Love" and "Embraceable You." Selections from "Porgy and Bess" also will be heard. Dramatic roles of the presentation are to be taken by a cast of talented radio actors and actresses. Jack LaFrande, writer and director of the series, will produce the show.

Guest Star.

Tenor Frank Parker will be Andre Kostelanetz's guest on WBBM-CBS at 3:30 p. m. today.

Here's Effie

Edgar Bergen will introduce Effie Klinker, his new feminine dummy, to radio audiences when he resumes his show over WMAQ-NBC at 7 o'clock tonight.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 4.

Make cuttings of bedding plants for stock. The average garden requires only a few good stock plants of each kind to carry thru the winter. Cuttings made now of plants like the coleus, geranium, and others will do well if given plenty of light. They grow more slowly in a cool room, but at the same time the growth is stockier and the plants healthier.

Tuesday, Sept. 5.

Some plants should be taken indoors before the first light frost. These include such tender kinds as the poinsettia, gardenia, and similar tropical plants. They resent a sudden change in temperature, and if it gets too cold the leaves turn yellow and drop. If the plants indoors become sickly without water, cut back the stems to encourage them to start anew.

Narrow glass shelves are just the thing for the more dwarf succulents like the gasterias, haworthias, apicras, and many others. Small growing cacti are among the finest for such a position, and they need little water during the winter.

Wednesday, Sept. 6.

Peonies can be planted any time now. They do well in a wide range of soils. When planting, work in some well decayed manure, or about three pounds of super-phosphate, to each 100 square feet.

A little shade will not retard their flowering, but they do best in full sun. When planting, keep the crown about one or two inches beneath the surface. Planting may be done any time until the ground freezes.

Thursday, Sept. 7.

Harvest onions, allowing the bulbs to cure before removing the tops. Never permit the stalks or sick plants to stand around. Burn them and do not use in the compost heap.

Remove the old canes of blackberries and destroy them by burning. It is not too late to make the new lawn. Water after seeding if it does not rain. Fall is a fine time to examine all trees and remove dead or unsuitable wood. Paint the wounds that are larger than an inch in diameter.

Friday, Sept. 8.

Why not get out the sash and repair and paint it? It should be kept in good condition at all times. It is one of the finest assets the gardener without a greenhouse can enjoy. The perennial border can be made over in the fall, but autumn flowering kinds should not be removed until spring.

Order shrubs for planting. Keep the entire yard in the best of condition at all times. Stake chrysanthemum plants and keep well watered. Watch for insect pests. Rake up the leaves and save for the compost pile, but burn any that are infested with insects.

Saturday, Sept. 9.

Rake up and remove all vegetable refuse, for it may contain disease or insects which may mean more of them next season. Dig gladiolus corms when the leaves turn brown. Carefully save the bulbils for future planting. Order bulbs that will be needed, but many kinds will be short or not available.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.

HOME VACATION CAN BE UTILIZED TO PAINT HOUSE

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

If a "stay at home and paint" vacation is what you have planned, there are a few points to keep in mind before the actual painting starts.

One of these points is that all surfaces should be well cleaned. Metal parts of a house are not easy to replace in war time and too much emphasis cannot be placed on the necessity of keeping all in top shape.

Every corroded place on metal flashings, downspouts, and gutters should be sandpapered or scraped down to the bright metal and then painted or varnished. Always discuss with your paint dealer the proper type of paint to use for work you intend to do.

Clean Screens with Brush.

If metal screens need attention when you remove them this fall, they should be cleaned with a brush which is fairly stiff, but not so stiff that it will distort the mesh. Then they can be painted with screen paint. [Directions on can should be followed carefully.] Or they can be varnished with a varnish sufficiently thinned with turpentine to insure against clogging the openings in the screen.

If walls are to be painted, all loose or scaling paint should be wire brushed or scraped from walls and then, if necessary, they should be sandpapered smooth.

Check for Cracks, Holes.

It also is important to check carefully for any cracks which may be in evidence, any nail holes or other openings. If they are found they can be filled with some type of crack filler. Discuss with your paint dealer the kind of surface you wish to fill so you may obtain a proper filler.

When it is necessary to use putty on an exterior surface around your house, prime holes first with a coat of paint, then apply putty and paint over it. If you are concerned with an interior plastered wall you can obtain patching plaster and various crack fillers in paint stores, hardware stores, and paint departments of other stores.

If you are painting around the exterior of your house it is well to keep on shaded sides of the house while applying the paint—both to permit paint to set somewhat before hot sun rays have hit it, and also for your own comfort.

If you haven't yet made a careful inventory of the condition of your house surfaces, both interior and exterior, from attic to basement inside, and from roof to foundation outside, these are the days to do it.

BIG CITY GYPSIES RETAIN RAIMENT, CUSTOMS OF OLD

They Rove No More; Men on War Jobs Now.

"He's working in a war plant—100 per cent," Lizzie explained. But she couldn't tell where her father is working for Lizzie is a gypsy girl and in her home the bread winning is strictly the man's business.

Unlike her mother's dark head across the room in their store front home on Maxwell st., Lizzie's hair is red, but she has the same black eyes as have her seven younger brothers and sisters. She was wearing, too, the gaudy silk peasant blouse and full skirt—the gypsy costume of her mother that every girl puts on as soon as she is 16 and out of public school.

Part of Colony.

Lizzie and her family are part of the approximately 95 gypsies who reside in the vicinity of Halsted and Maxwell sts. They have given up the roaming life of their grandfathers and for the last five to nine years have resided in the abandoned store fronts in the Maxwell vicinity. Their children attend public school and the fathers shift from job to job, but aside from that their lives are little changed from the romantic wanderings of several decades ago.

The gypsies like rich and colorful things. They are not satisfied with substitutes. The walls of the stores are covered with rich rugs and a gaudy curtain separates the front part of the store, where the women sit in the day time watching the street and passersby from the back part where the mattresses are rolled up and a small gas cooking stove can be found.

Jewelry Gauge of Wealth.

The women wear only real gold and silver earrings and bracelets, and a man's wealth is measured by the amount of jewelry his women folks can wear. Like the bandannas which brides put on their heads on their wedding day and are never seen without again (the single girls go bareheaded), the young and old women, alike, are never without their beaded money pouches fastened about their waists. The more colorful and richly beaded they are, the better the gypsy women like them.

The gypsies now living in the store fronts can no longer sing and dance around the camp fire in the midst of their wagons but when they can afford it, the Maxwell st. clans rent a hall and hire an orchestra. They sadly shake their heads when they tell you they have no musicians in their lot, for a gypsy loves music like a duck the water. Instead they sing and clap their hands and if all the menfolks have been working, they hire a Jewish orchestra which has learned the gypsy tunes from them.

Marriage Big Event.

A marriage feast lasts for three days and is always something to look forward to. Lizzie, who doesn't know whether she is 18 or 19, explained. A match between a boy and a girl is made by their parents when they are anywhere from 9 to 12 years old. The actual ceremony takes place when they are 16 or 17 and is performed by the grandfathers of the two clans. Three days of feasting and dancing usually follow in a near-by rented hall.

Concerned only with the present—and sometimes the future—the Maxwell st. gypsies explained that they have lost all trace of their beginnings. Only the songs, gypsy dress, and the language, which never has been written, have been handed down thru the generations. Altho there are Spanish, English, Brazilian, Russian, Romanian, and German gypsies on the near west side, their physical characteristics, their language, and the women's dress are the same.

War's Effects Felt.

The gypsies are feeling the effect of war time, too. Most of them have sold their cars since gasoline rationing went into effect and Lizzie said she thought there were about four boys in military service.

Old timers in the gypsy community bordering Halsted and Maxwell sts. include the following families: Morris Georgevitch, 606 Maxwell st.; Eli Georgevitch, 613 Maxwell st.; John Wasso, 641 Maxwell st.; George Montes, 1319 S. Jefferson st.; Epherem Montes, 620 Maxwell st.; Ephram Bimbo, 843 S. Halsted st.; Steve George, 1424 S. Halsted st., and Eushin Risticks, 1445 S. Halsted street.

Dusenberry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry D. Dusenberry of Oskaloosa, Ia. The couple is living in Knoxville, Tenn., where Corp. Dusenberry is stationed. Both attended Iowa State college at Ames, Ia.

Five Generations of One Family

Five generations of this family live on the west side. Seated (left to right) are Mrs. William Hasner Jr., 2119 S. 59th ct., Cicero, mother of Frank William Hasner, (standing), Mrs. Anne Kincl, 3145 W. 26th st., grandmother, Mrs. Frank Jaros, 2550 S. Troy st., great-grandmother, and Mrs. Katherine Suchan, 2550 S. Troy st., great-great-grandmother. Mrs. Hasner's husband is stationed in England with the army.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 4.

Make cuttings of bedding plants for stock. The average garden requires only a few good stock plants of each kind to carry thru the winter. Cuttings made now of plants like the coleus, geranium, and others will do well if given plenty of light. They grow more slowly in a cool room, but at the same time the growth is stockier and the plants healtheir.

Tuesday, Sept. 5.

Some plants should be taken indoors before the first light frost. These include such tender kinds as the poinsettia, gardenia, and similar tropical plants. They resent a sudden change in temperature, and if it gets too cold the leaves turn yellow and drop. If the plants indoors become sickly without water, cut back the stems to encourage them to start anew.

Narrow glass shelves are just the thing for the more dwarf succulents like the gasterias, haworthias, apicras, and many others. Small growing cacti are among the finest for such a position, and they need little water during the winter.

Wednesday, Sept. 6.

Peonies can be planted any time now. They do well in a wide range of soils. When planting, work in some well decayed manure, or about three pounds of super-phosphate, to each 100 square feet.

A little shade will not retard their flowering, but they do best in full sun. When planting, keep the crown about one or two inches beneath the surface. Planting may be done any time until the ground freezes.

Thursday, Sept. 7.

Harvest onions, allowing the bulbs to cure before removing the tops. Never permit the stalks or sick plants to stand around. Burn them and do not use in the compost heap.

Remove the old canes of blackberries and destroy them by burning. It is not too late to make the new lawn. Water after seeding if it does not rain. Fall is a fine time to examine all trees and remove dead or unsuitable wood. Paint the wounds that are larger than an inch in diameter.

Friday, Sept. 8.

Why not get out the sash and repair and paint it? It should be kept in good condition at all times. It is one of the finest assets the gardener without a greenhouse can enjoy. The perennial border can be made over in the fall, but autumn flowering kinds should not be removed until spring.

Order shrubs for planting. Keep the entire yard in the best of condition at all times. Stake chrysanthemum plants and keep well watered. Watch for insect pests. Rake up the leaves and save for the compost pile, but burn any that are infested with insects.

Saturday, Sept. 9.

Rake up and remove all vegetable refuse, for it may contain disease or insects which may mean more of them next season. Dig gladiolus corms when the leaves turn brown. Carefully save the bulbils for future planting. Order bulbs that will be needed, but many kinds will be short or not available.

Prepared in cooperation with Garfield park conservatory.

YOUTH PROGRAM BUILDS CITIZENS FOR '2 WORLDS'

Damen Hall Proves Haven for Young People.

In a haven bounded by a city block, 85,000 youngsters gather each year to participate in one of the largest social projects in the city—the Holy Family Youth organization. The organization is directed by the Rev. E. A. Barton, S. J.; the Rev. F. A. Vaughan, S. J., and the Rev. J. F. Henry, S. J.

The movement began in 1857 when Father Arnold Damen, a Jesuit, organizer of Holy Family parish, built the first parish church at 11th and May sts., and added two wings for the use of children. Now 2,475 neighborhood children participate each week in movies, parties, dramatics, roller skating, and other activities offered by the parish.

Damen hall, built in the basement of the church under the supervision of Father Henry, is the youth center of the community. Its 12,000 square feet of floor space and seating capacity of 1,000 persons permit the staging of several functions at the same time. Boys put their talent for craftsmanship and woodworking to good use in the tool shop, while the girls take classes in home economics and cooking in the modern kitchens.

Scout Troop Is Active.

One of the parish groups which has distinguished itself in war and civic activities is the Holy Family Boy Scout troop, which has 53 members. The troop committee is composed of the Rev. J. F. Henry, chairman; Peter Stein Jr., Emil Juliano, Nick Martello, and Sam Orlando. Under leadership of Scoutmaster Earl C. Mertes, the troop has won commendation for its almost continuous participation in the war bond rallies, flag raisings, war book collections, paper and metal salvage, and other activities.

Last winter the assistance of the troop in keeping fire hydrants cleared of snow and ice brought praise from the Chicago fire department. Assisting Mr. Mertes are Edwin Rauscher Jr., Howard Petersen, Carmen Urato, and Lupe Iniguez. The troop has a photographic section with its own dark room and a library of almost 500 volumes. Both of these were set up and are operated by the boys themselves.

40 in Cub Scout Pack.

A cub Scout pack of 40 boys between 9 and 12 also is a part of Holy Family Youth activities. The den mothers who supervise the work of the pack are Mrs. Anthony Agin, Mrs. Anthony Capparelli, Mrs. Thomas P. Collins, Mrs. Nick Martello, and Mrs. Earl C. Mertes. They are assisted in their program, outdoor trips, and picnics, by Boy Scouts known as den chiefs. They are Carl Tristano, Nick Vitagliano, Edmund Ostos, Henry Borjon, and Thomas Stein.

In 1942, the Holy Family Girl Scout troop was organized and now has a membership of 43 girls. Miss Agnes Houlihan is the troop leader, assisted by her sister, Miss Frances Houlihan, and Mrs. Josephine Stein. The girls have furnished and decorated a meeting room in Damen hall with library space for books. At weekly meetings the girls are taught sewing, cooking, new games, songs, and dances. The troop publishes its own newspaper, the G. S. I.

Forms Service Scout Unit.

Girls of high school age and older are members of the senior service Scouts and conduct socials each week in the fall and winter. Mrs. Hazel Mertes, leader of the senior Scouts, and her assistant, Miss Mary Looney, have included in their program a first aid and hospital aid project.

The Ha-Fa-You committee was organized to promote the interests of the friends of Holy Family Youth and looks after the moral, mental, and physical welfare of the youth of Holy Family parish. This is accomplished by providing leaders, equipment, and moral support in the difficult work of helping youths to find themselves. The slogan of the Holy Family Youth organization is: "To assist in making good citizens of this world and in the next."

DRUGGIST KEEPS STORE READY FOR YANK'S RETURN

22 of His 'Boys' Serve Many Theaters.

Sam Endler's drug store at 5636 North av. is a much quieter place now than it was before the war, but the neighborhood druggist expects to see things liven up when the boys come home again.

The boys are the 24 young members of the Austin Trojan Athletic club, all but two of whose members are in service. For four years these boys were schoolmates at Austin High school, gathering after school hours and basketball games on the high stools in front of Sam's soda fountain. Sometimes they were treating their girls to a coke but more often they just met in casual fashion to talk about basketball and football.

Clubroom in Basement.

It is for these boys that the druggist has set up a clubroom in the basement where the boys, when they come home, may drift in and out as they please.

"They are all nice, clean fellows," said Sam, who is regarded by the boys as both friend and adviser. "The Trojans have disbanded as a club for the duration but the clubroom already is serving as a link in keeping the group together.

Upstairs in the drug store there's a large plaque with the names and pictures of the boys. A gold star recently was added under the club's first casualty, Lt. James P. McNellis who was killed in an airplane crash while attending a marine corps pilot school near Jacksonville, Fla.

Store Is Mail Exchange.

The store also serves as a mail depot. Letters come there from the boys overseas and are read and exchanged by other members on furlough. In the clubroom there's a record of names and addresses for all.

When the boys come back home and catch up on experiences while separated, no branch of service will be slighted. Eleven are in the army, nine in the navy, and two in the marines. The two boys at home, Joseph Calafiore and Chuck Pietke, have honorable discharges from the army. Four boys are in the army air forces, and one is in the navy air corps.

SCHOOLS OPEN FOR 450,000 IN CITY TUESDAY

Expect Decrease in Prep Enrollment.

Next Tuesday more than 450,000 boys and girls will trek back to Chicago's public schools. School officials have estimated that there will be a drop of from 3,000 to 4,000 pupils in the high schools and junior colleges and an approximate increase of 1,000 in the elementary grades. About 100,000 will register in high schools. Last year total registration was about 470,000.

Altho war industries and the military services have drawn heavily from Chicago's staff of 12,000 teachers, school officials are not anticipating any serious shortages of regular instructors and substitutes.

Two Late Transfers.

Late transfers of instructors were approved last week by the school board. J. Chester Bilhorn, 3846 N. Kedvale av., former assistant principal at Schurz High school, will begin the school term this week as principal of the elementary school at 37th and Wells sts., and Mabel A. Williamson of Oak Park, French teacher at Roosevelt High school, will report as principal of Lawson Elementary school, 1256 S. Homan av., on Tuesday.

While the public schools are expecting a decrease in enrollment this fall, the Catholic schools of Chicago which will open Wednesday are expecting an increase of more than 2,000 pupils. A total enrollment of 195,000 has been estimated for the 8 colleges, 90 high schools, and 403 grade schools of the archdiocese.

School to Open Late.

One new elementary school, St. Gilbert's at Grays Lake, is nearing completion and is scheduled to be opened later this month. A three day institute for the 4,500 parochial grade school teachers was held last week at Providence High school, 115 S. Central Park av.

With war industries seeking still more workers, the high school placement counselors anticipate a heavy part time working program. Cooperating with the United States employment service and war man power commission, the schools have set up a program which will enable pupils to work part time. Placement counselors in each high school work with the pupils.

Large Percentage Work.

Last year more than 82 per cent of the boys and girls, 16 or more years old, in Chicago high schools worked part time or had heavy home responsibilities. Twenty-four per cent of the high school students under 16 also worked.

In the last few years Chicago schools have organized one of the most extensive club programs in the United States. Among the 917 clubs there is a pre-medicine group at Steinmetz, 3030 N. Mobile av., which meets for laboratory work on scientific experiments and has discussions on various phases of the medical field.

Many Have Camera Clubs.

The seniors at Lake View High school, 4015 N. Ashland av., have a forum at which they discuss everything from the art of conversation, war marriages, and dolls, to taste in dress and makeup.

Camera clubs have been organized at almost every school in the city and last year more than 20,000 model planes were built by the aviation clubs.

HINSDALE D. A. R. SEWS FOR VETS TWICE A MONTH

All Production Goes to Vaughan Now.

Every other Thursday since the attack on Pearl Harbor has been a busy day for members of Capt. Hubbard Burrows Hinsdale chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Since its organization eight years ago, the chapter has been active in Red Cross work, but with the coming of war the group has specialized on the sewing of supplies for veterans' hospitals.

To encourage the sewing bees, Mrs. W. S. Smith has opened her home on County Line rd. for the Thursday sessions. Mrs. Smith is first vice regent and a charter member of the chapter.

16 at Each Session.

No less than 16 members of the chapter have attended each session of the sewing circle in the spacious living room of the Smith home which is set among wooded acres at the east end of Hinsdale. The women have made 150 hospital gowns, dozens of pairs of convalescent slippers, layettes for the wives of service men, and more than 200 scrap books with which invalids may pass their leisure time. A new project of the group is the making of kit bags for hospital cots.

The new Vaughan general hospital at Hines henceforth will be the recipient of the chapter's production, and the chapter realizes that the need for such supplies will continue.

Meetings Last 5 Hours.

It is a rule of the chapter that the sewing sessions start at 11 a. m. and last until 4 p. m. For the luncheon there is a charge of 25 cents which provides a fund to purchase material. Surplus money has been donated for blood plasma processing and to the mountain school in Georgia which is sponsored by the D. A. R. Each member brings sandwiches, salad, and dessert. The hostess provides coffee.

The Hinsdale chapter was named for an ancestor of Mrs. Julia Goodhue, its organizer at the time she was state regent. Mrs. Guy Dart, now a resident of Evanston but still a member of the chapter, was its first regent. Mrs. Addison Warner is the present regent. Other regents have been Mrs. William Jordan and Mrs. Francis Brown.

Mrs. Archibald Hessler, a member of the chapter, is head hostess Sunday nights at the service men's center, 176 W. Washington st.

EARLY PICTURES SHOW VANISHED WEST SIDE ERA

Legler Library Displays Exhibit 50 Years Old.

The metamorphosis of business on the west side is photographically illustrated in the current West Side Historical society exhibit, "Business on the Early West Side," now on display in the Legler branch library, Pulaski rd. and Monroe st. Some pictures date back more than 50 years.

In 1899, John F. Diffenderffer was photographed in his new automobile in front of his real estate office then located on Kedzie av. south of Jackson blvd. "For Sale—Lots on Colorado Avenue, Lexington, Polk, Harvard, South 40th Ct.," reads the sign on a real estate office which in 1900 was located on the southwest corner of Colorado av. [now 5th av.] and 40th st. [now Pulaski rd.].

Open Clothing Store.

Thirty-eight years ago Baer Brothers and Prodie Clothing store opened its first long, narrow shop at 3955 Madison st. In the photo are Leon Baer, Dana Baer, Theodore Prodie, and Al Sanders.

A beautiful "handlebar" mustache was receiving special grooming in Schneider's Barber shop, located on North av. near Keeler av., in 1898 when the photographer stepped in. The photo now on display in the society's collection would arouse most onlookers to burst into "Sweet Adeline" with variations.

Where Are They Now?

West siders will remember P. H. Keegan's saloon at 3938 Madison st., in 1901; Fred Plante's pool room, a popular gathering place in 1895, located at what is now 4038 Madison st.; the Madison Hardware store, which in October, 1915, was at 4013 Madison st.; Brinkman's Moving company, the Bromide Portrait company and shops at 17 N. Crawford av., the Pansy Florist shop at 4041 Madison st., of which Miss Anna Grace Sawyer was proprietor, and Wiley Brothers Dry Goods store at 3931 Madison st.

Ed A. Ahlswede's Dry Goods company was for many years "the store" for the neighborhood around North and Western avs. Miss Lilly Thye has donated an 1886 photograph of the store and a few of its customers. Another photo is that of "millinery row" on 18th and Halsted sts., taken 55 years ago.

Wants More Data.

Photographs of his real estate offices have been donated to the society by John T. McEnery. In 1908, his office was located on the northeast corner of Ashland av. and 12th st. He later moved to 4041 Madison st., in the Garfield park district.

The West Side Historical society desires more photographs on the early business of the west side and will welcome pictures, records, clippings, and other material. Data may be sent to Mrs. Gertrude I. Jenkins, secretary-historian, West Side Historical society, 115, S. Pulaski rd. The collection may be seen any week day from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m.

DROUTH DEFIED! RIVERSIDE WILL HOLD TOWN FAIR

Gardeners to Exhibit Produce Saturday.

Despite the drouth Riverside is planning an annual town fair that will be bigger and better than ever. Both vegetable and flower growers of the community have approved Saturday for the date. The event will be held from 2 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. in the auditorium of the town hall.

The first Riverside town fair was held six years ago before war gardens became popular, but war gardening has given impetus to the fair, which has attracted an average attendance each year of 2,000 visitors.

All Township Invited.

Every gardener of the township, which includes Riverside, North Riverside, and the Riverside Lawn area, as well as the Hollywood section of Brookfield, is being invited to send exhibits.

The auditorium this year will have a center decoration of allied flags, and cut-outs of men and women in different branches of the service will be placed about the hall.

Head Fair Committees.

Mrs. R. T. Pritchard and Miss Josephine Sherman are co-chairmen of table and place setting arrangements. Mrs. Frank J. Mancl is chairman for flower specimens, Mrs. Mabel Johnson Fuller is chairman of flower arrangements. Claude V. Percy and E. J. Muzik are co-chairmen of the vegetable exhibits.

Exhibitors at the town fair compete for ribbon awards and there is always keen rivalry.

Commercial growers in the Riverside vicinity say weather conditions have been the most unfavorable for 40 years, and war gardeners have found it the dryest summer in their experience. It is admitted that exhibits of crops that could not be watered will be reduced considerably. Many gardeners had to change plans for late summer plantings. Plenty of exhibits are promised, however, for what has become an institution—Riverside's annual town fair.

DU PAGE COUNTY SCHOOLS WILL X-RAY TEACHERS

Free chest X-rays for teachers and other employes of schools in Du Page county will be given this fall at the headquarters of the county sanatorium board, Glen Ellyn. A tuberculin testing survey and the accompanying education program is tentatively scheduled for Bensenville High school the week of March 5, 1945.

Mrs. R. C. Oswald, county representative, said the tests are offered because all persons in contact with large numbers of children should have them, since children are especially susceptible to the disease.

Tho teachers' living habits are above the average, she said, tuberculosis may exist in a communicable stage when the carrier is unaware of them.

Garfield Moose Women Will Meet Wednesday

ILLINOIS TECH'S CULINARY SHOP USES UNIT PLAN

Pride of both instructors and students on the west campus of the Illinois Institute of Technology, 1951 W. Madison st., is the newly remodeled foods laboratory built on a "unit plan." The culinary workshop is virtually four modern kitchens in one, the units being individually equipped and decorated.

Each unit of the four-in-one kitchen is equipped with furnishings of different price levels, with the purpose of the workshop being to give students training with utensils, stoves, cabinets, refrigerators, and tables representative of the nation's different income brackets. Two electric and two gas ranges, together with one gas and one electric refrigerator are the basis of mechanical equipment.

Menu planning and food preparation is studied on a gradual basis by 45 home economics majors, with meals ranging from a low cost breakfast to a full formal dinner, under the direction of Dr. Ruth Cowan Clouse, director of the home economics department and former chairman of the Chicago nutrition committee. In a model dining room adjacent to the new laboratory the students try out their foods and learn how to set a table.

Also included in the west side campus department is a large art studio for studies in design and interior decorating, a room for animal feeding experiments and other work in dietetics, and two offices.

Two west side students active in the new kitchen are Margaret Reever, 2411 Adams st., and Ursula Smok, 2700 W. 24th pl.

DU PAGE COUNTY SOCIETY SEEKS HISTORIC ITEMS

Asks Resident Donations for Museum.

With the realization that valuable materials for a future collection must be sought now while they still are available, the Du Page County Historical society recently made its first appeal to residents of the county in possession of possible museum articles.

H. A. Berens of Elmhurst, president of the society, said many of the desired museum pieces were leaving the area and going into the hands of antique dealers. He said the present period was one in which many of the large old homes were changing owners with the accompanying disposition of heirlooms.

List Items Wanted.

Part of the program of the Du Page County Historical society, it is explained, will be the effort to preserve in all possible completeness the story of the county and its people. For this reason many types of material are highly desirable, including books and articles, reports of organizations and institutions, family histories, scrapbooks, diaries, clippings, programs, and photographs. These will comprise library materials.

For museum exhibition purposes, utensils, tools, furniture, apparel, and personal belongings of all kinds are considered appropriate.

Depends on Donations.

A bulletin from the headquarters of the society, 408 Elmhurst National Bank building, Elmhurst, adds that the society presently may be in a position to make purchases but must always depend in large measure on the public spirited generosity of the people of the county. Due credit will be given the donors.

Materials donated will be kept for the present in exisiting library and museum rooms in various parts of the county. After the war, when new building will proceed at the county seat, it is hoped an adequate museum and library rooms will be provided.

Mitchell Museum to Get Some.

All materials pertaining to Naperville and environs, it has been agreed, should be given to the Caroline Martin Mitchell Historical museum.

Materials relating to the Fullersburg-Hinsdale region, as well as all materials relating to milling and mills, are solicited by the society for the museum and library to be established in the old Graue mill.

The society has made an agreement with the Elmhurst Public library to share in the use of its Ullman room for the temporary safe keeping of library material that may be donated to the society or acquired by it.

FASHIONS, FOOD VICTORY SCENES ON PARIS RADIO

French Welcome Yanks Back to Capital.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

After four years of broadcasts by Goebbels' minions from Paris, the voices of Americans and Britishers were again heard last week on the short waves and in rebroadcasts over domestic networks from the French capital. Americans heard eyewitness and earwitness stories of scenes as Paris was liberated relayed by personalities familiar to them.

One of the broadcasts that made a special impact was a recording of the scene as Gen. Charles de Gaulle entered Notre Dame cathedral. A BBC commentator was busy giving a word picture when firing began. His recording was interrupted because some one broke off his electrical cable for a minute. But he got back on in time to describe De Gaulle's failure to take any heed of his peril and the capture of four suspects.

Paris Fashions Described.

At our firesides we heard dramatic accounts by American reporters of the wild scenes of jubilation [sometimes the sounds, too] and descriptions of current French fashions—"full and colorful skirts and deep V-necklines"—and reports of their first meals in Parisian restaurants.

It was all in striking contrast to the last fearful and some times tearful broadcasts from France in June, 1940. Mutual commentators were on the spot and reported the terrible scenes after the break-thru at Sedan. We still remember some of the last reports of Eric Sevareid and Helen Hiett from Paris. And we shall never forget Bill Shirer's on the scene report of Hitler in the World War I. armistice car in Compiegne forest laying down armistice terms for the beaten French.

Four Years Is Too Much!

After the fall of France the Nazis promptly took over French radio, and then followed four years of Goebbels' propaganda barrage on the air, much of it beamed to America in elegant French, some of it in our own language, and, of course, large doses in German. But in four years Americans never grew accustomed to hearing Parisian stations identified in the language of Berlin.

For radio listeners the end of the Nazis in the west was foreshadowed when they abandoned "We're Sailing Against England" and dropped back to the old national song, "The Watch on the Rhine," as a theme song for one of their programs.

American listeners now can look forward to the realization of a hope expressed by an American army colonel when he addressed a group of broadcasting executives.

"I hope," he said, "that the next time you hear me I will be saying: 'I am speaking to you now from an American tank as we enter bomb and shell shattered Berlin.'"

Today's NBC Concert Is for Allied Forces

Works of five noted composers have been selected to Arturo Toscanini for the second of his pair of Symphony of the Air concerts dedicated to allied forces overseas, which he will conduct over WMAQ-NBC at 4 p. m. today. He is to direct the NBC Symphony orchestra in presentations of Bossi's "Intermezzi Goldoniani," Mozart's Symphony in A major, No. 29, selections from Mendelssohn's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Glinka's "Jota Aragonesa," and portions of deFalla's ballet, "Love, the Magician."

Burns and Allen on Air.

George Burns and Gracie Allen will appear as guests on Tommy Dorsey's All-Time Hit Parade program over WMAQ-NBC at 6 o'clock tonight.

Gives Tips on Cleanup Work at Home.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

If a "stay at home and paint" vacation is what you have planned, there are a few points to keep in mind before the actual painting starts.

One of these points is that all surfaces should be well cleaned. Metal parts of a house are not easy to replace in war time and too much emphasis cannot be placed on the necessity of keeping all in top shape.

Every corroded place on metal flashings, downspouts, and gutters should be sandpapered or scraped down to the bright metal and then painted or varnished. Always discuss with your paint dealer the proper type of paint to use for work you intend to do.

Clean Screens with Brush.

If metal screens need attention when you remove them this fall, they should be cleaned with a brush which is fairly stiff, but not so stiff that it will distort the mesh. Then they can be painted with screen paint. [Directions on can should be followed carefully.] Or they can be varnished with a varnish sufficiently thinned with turpentine to insure against clogging the openings in the screen.

If walls are to be painted, all loose or scaling paint should be wire brushed or scraped from walls and then, if necessary, they should be sandpapered smooth.

Check for Cracks, Holes.

It also is important to check carefully for any cracks which may be in evidence, any nail holes or other openings. If they are found they can be filled with some type of crack filler. Discuss with your paint dealer the kind of surface you wish to fill so you may obtain a proper filler.

When it is necessary to use putty on an exterior surface around your house, prime holes first with a coat of paint, then apply putty and paint over it. If you are concerned with an interior plastered wall you can obtain patching plaster and various crack fillers in paint stores, hardware stores, and paint departments of other stores.

If you are painting around the exterior of your house it is well to keep on shaded sides of the house while applying the paint—both to permit paint to set somewhat before hot sun rays have hit it, and also for your own comfort.

If you haven't yet made a careful inventory of the condition of your house surfaces, both interior and exterior, from attic to basement inside, and from roof to foundation outside, these are the days to do it.

CHAPLAIN, JEW BUILD CATHOLIC SERVICE CHAPEL

Result Proves Example of Tolerance.

A Protestant minister and a Jewish boy helped build a Catholic chapel for a Chicagoan who is a Catholic chaplain at an army camp. The Chicagoan, Capt. William J. Dorney, disribes the project as a "fine demonstration of tolerance that is common at Tyndall field."

Triggertown chapel is located about two miles from the main base of Tyndall field, army air forces flexible gunnary school, Panama City, Fla. It all started with Chaplain Taft A. Franklin, who is a Presbyterian minister assigned to the reception center at Triggertown. Previously his office was in the main chapel and he had noticed that frequently Catholic boys would slip into the chapel for a visit and a prayer. He wished the boys at Tarrytown could have this consolation.

Gives Half of Office for Chapel.

He approached Father Dorney, whose mother lives at 7146 Yates av., and said, "Father, I'll be glad to give up half my office if a little chapel could be fixed up where the Catholic boys could say a prayer."

"Swell!" Father Dorney replied. "Only I can't even drive a nail straight." Chaplain Franklin assured the Catholic priest that he was pretty good at carpentry.

Just about this time a young Jewish boy came to the chapel with a problem. As he waited in line, he took a pencil and started to sketch. When his turn came, Father Dorney noticed the sketch and asked him about it. The soldier told him his name was Leonard Dworkins; that he, too, was from Chicago, his folks living at 4306 W. 19th st. He had been an artist in civilian life, drawing under the name of Leon Gordon. He told the chaplain he was grateful for the help he had given him and would be glad to do something for him some day.

Goes Hunting for Artist.

When Chaplain Franklin suggested a mural for the little chapel, Father Dorney thought of the artist. He couldn't remember the name or even to what squadron the artist was assigned. The chaplain went down to Triggertown in hopes of bumping into him. Ten minutes after he had arrived, a lad stepped out of the sea of faces. "Remember me, Father, I was down to see you last week. I'm Leonard Dworkins."

Shortly after that meeting Leonard had the beautiful mural ready for unveiling. With a background of the Stars and Stripes, Christ stands with outstretched arms. On the right panel is the Blessed Virgin Mary in blue with a pilot kneeling before her, and on the other side is St. Barbara, the patroness of gunners, with a gunner on his knees asking her help.

Lt. Mildred Alice Albrecht, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Albrecht, 4829 Berteau av., was a bookkeeper and clerk in the post exchange at Fort Oglethorpe before entering O. C. S. She attended Northwestern university and the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, and had worked as a secretary in Chicago.

83 Students Train as Cadet Nurses at Norwegian-American Hospital

Theory and practice are closely related in the Norwegian-American curriculum. In a sickroom situation, Miss Olga Brumberg, registered nurse, shows cadets how to take blood pressure. Standing, left to right, are Arline Viste, Miss Brumberg, and Evelyn Vonberg. Mrs. Becky Goodman is the patient.

Cadets working in wards and hospital rooms help to relieve the shortage of nurses which has been brought about by the war. Feeding helpless patients is one of their many duties. Here Arlene Barth helps E. P. Oertel, whose hands are bandaged because of a skin condition, to eat the strawberry dessert with which he tops off his evening meal.

NAME FIVE NEW SCHOOL HEADS IN N. W. SUBURBS

Barrington, Palatine Shifts Noted.

Five new superintendents and principals will take over this week when northwest suburban schools open their doors for the fall term, Noble J. Puffer, county superintendent of schools, announced.

After 36 years as superintendent of the elementary and high school system in Barrington, Erman S. Smith has retired and his duties will be assumed by Franklyn Thomas, formerly of Yorkville. A. M. Conger, who spent 19 years as a teacher and principal in the Arlington Heights Township High school, also is retiring and will be replaced by M. F. Egdorf, Watseka High school principal.

He will be succeeded by George Calhoun, principal of Elmwood school. Martin Cordulack, former principal in the Cicero schools, will succeed Calhoun at Elmwood.

Teaching Jobs Filled.

Puffer announced that by Tuesday morning, when the majority of the county schools open, most of the teaching positions will be filled.

Mrs. R. C. Oswald, county representative, said the tests are offered because all persons in contact with large numbers of children should have them, since children are especially susceptible to the disease.

Tho teachers' living habits are above the average, she said, tuberculosis may exist in a communicable stage when the carrier is unaware of them.

Expect Drop in Prep Enrollment.

Next Tuesday more than 450,000 boys and girls will trek back to Chicago's public schools. School officials have estimated that there will be a drop of from 3,000 to 4,000 pupils in the high schools and junior colleges and an approximate increase of 1,000 in the elementary grades. About 100,000 will register in high schools. Last year total registration was about 470,000.

Altho war industries and the military services have drawn heavily from Chicago's staff of 12,000 teachers, school officials are not anticipating any serious shortages of regular instructors and substitutes.

Two Late Transfers.

Late transfers of instructors were approved last week by the school board. J. Chester Bilhorn, 3846 N. Kedvale av., former assistant principal at Schurz High school, will begin the school term this week as principal of the elementary school at 37th and Wells sts., and Mabel A. Williamson of Oak Park, French teacher at Roosevelt High school, will report as principal of Lawson Elementary school, 1256 S. Homan av., on Tuesday.

While the public schools are expecting a decrease in enrollment this fall, the Catholic schools of Chicago which will open Wednesday are expecting an increase of more than 2,000 pupils. A total enrollment of 195,000 has been estimated for the 8 colleges, 90 high schools, and 403 grade schools of the archdiocese.

School to Open Late.

One new elementary school, St. Gilbert's at Grays Lake, is nearing completion and is scheduled to be opened later this month. A three day institute for the 4,500 parochial grade school teachers was held last week at Providence High school, 115 S. Central Park av.

With war industries seeking still more workers, the high school placement counselors anticipate a heavy part time working program. Cooperating with the United States employment service and war man power commission, the schools have set up a program which will enable pupils to work part time. Placement counselors in each high school work with the pupils, checking on their school records and recommending jobs which fit their capabilities and resources, and which afford the least hindrance to their school work.

Large Percentage Work.

Last year more than 82 per cent of the boys and girls, 16 or more years old, in Chicago high schools worked part time or had heavy home responsibilities. Twenty-four per cent of the high school students under 16 also worked.

In the last few years Chicago schools have organized one of the most extensive club programs in the United States. Among the 917 clubs there is a pre-medicine group at Steinmetz, 3030 N. Mobile av., which meets for laboratory work on scientific experiments and has discussions on various phases of the medical field.

Many Have Camera Clubs.

The seniors at Lake View High school, 4015 N. Ashland av., have a forum at which they discuss everything from the art of conversation, war marriages, and dolls, to taste in dress and makeup. The Big Brothers club at Crane Technical, 2245 Jackson blvd., will be busy this week and next as it begins its program of introducing freshmen to the expansive program of the high school.

Camera clubs have been organized at almost every school in the city and last year more than 20,000 model planes were built by the aviation clubs.

The fifth annual convention of the Polish civilian relief unit of the Chicago Red Cross chapter will be held next Sunday in the South Chicago district. Mrs. Victor L. Schlaeger is convention chairman. Proceeds from the convention will go to refugees in Europe.

The convention will begin with a high mass at 10:15 a. m. in Immaculate Conception church, 88th st. and Commercial av. A convention dinner will be served at noon in the Masonic temple, 91st st. and Exchange av., and at 2 o'clock the convention meeting will be held in St. Mary Magdalene auditorium, 84th st. and Saginaw av.

A parade of civilians, Legionnaires, Polish and American war veterans, and Veterans of Foreign Wars will start at 1:30 o'clock from the temple and end at the auditorium.

The Polish unit of the Red Cross consists of 179 branches and has a membership of 30,000. During the last year the unit has produced more than 10,000 garments, 1,000 sweaters for war nurses, several hundred army kits, and a large number of surgical bandages.

80, SHE FOLLOWS WAR IN LETTERS OF 10 GRANDSONS

7 Overseas Keep Mrs. Gieseke Informed.

Since Mrs. Anna Gieseke, 80, has been confined to her wheelchair, the high point of each of her days is the arrival of the mail carrier, who usually brings a note from her 10 grandsons in the service. Mrs. Gieseke's home is in Arlington Heights. Seven of the grandsons are overseas.

Lt. Earl Gieseke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gieseke, Arlington Heights, enlisted in the navy before Pearl Harbor, and has seen active duty. He now is in the Pacific. Pvt. Harold Gieseke, his brother, was recently home on furlough from his station at Camp Howze, Tex.

One in India.

Corp. John A. Gieseke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gieseke, Wheeling, has spent several months with a combat unit in the jungles of India. Corp. Robert L. Gaare, 4428 Montrose av., in service eight months, is stationed at Camp Shelby, Miss.

Corp. Norman Thompson, another grandson, left the United States about a year ago for Australia, and from there went to New Guinea, where he now is stationed. Last spring he was hospitalized with malaria. He reports that his 3 year old daughter, Patricia, has been selected the pinup girl by the boys in his tent.

His brother, Pvt. Harvey Thompson, entered the service in December, 1942, was stationed in the United States for a year, and then sent to Africa. He is with the infantry in Italy, and has seen action. Another brother, E. F. Thompson, seaman 1st class, has been in the South Pacific for six months. He has been in several battles, his base being Guadalcanal.

Returns from Pacific.

Temporarily back in the United States is another of Mrs. Gieseke's grandsons, Lt. Wilbert Gieseke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Gieseke, Arlington Heights. He is a marine corps pilot and navigator, receiving his wings at Corpus Christi, Tex., a year ago. Recently he wrote from San Diego, Cal., "Just returned from a carrier cruise in the Pacific. I had begun to wonder if there was any more land anywhere. The experience was priceless."

His brother, Corp. Arthur Gieseke, now in the Central Pacific, writes, "Am feeling good, I like it here, and get plenty of fruit to eat. The voyage was tough the first days out. We soon got used to it, however. I never cared much about water before, and still don't. Was certainly glad to set foot on land again."

Another brother, Corp. Richard Gieseke, has returned to his station at Muroc army air field, Muroc, Cal., after a three week furlough with his parents.

CONDUCTOR HAS TIME ON HANDS, AND HE LIKES IT

F. J. Mages on Railroad Job for 50 Years.

"Workin' on the railroad just to pass the time away," a well known line from a well known song, doesn't hold true for Frank J. Mages, 3311 N. La Vergne av., a veteran of 50 years with the Chicago and North Western railroad. "I always wanted to be a railroad man," he said. "I've spent practically all my life at it and I'll continue as long as the Lord will let me."

Mages, a gray haired man of medium height, is a familiar figure to hundreds of north side commuters. For the last 12 years his regular run as conductor has been from Waukegan to the North Western station at Canal and Madison sts.

Tells His Schedule.

"I start from Winnetka at 7:49 a. m.," he said, with the exact attention to time that railroad men acquire, "and I'm here at the depot at 8:20. I leave again at 9:47 and arrive in Waukegan at 11:04." After the return ride he makes one more trip to Evanston and is thru work at 5:46 p. m.

After years of collecting and punching their tickets, Mages knows most of the regular passengers. "I can tell a stranger when he gets on the train," he said. This requires a long association with commuters, for as many as 600 passengers ride on one of his trains.

Started Work at 15.

Mages was born in Milwaukee, Wis., in 1876 and started to work at 15 as an agent for a news company on North Western trains, selling tobacco, candy, papers and magazines. Three years later he was hired by the railroad and in 1900 he became a conductor.

Mages is a member of the Order of Railroad Conductors and of the Catholic Order of Foresters. He used to play the violin and the piano, but claims neither as a hobby.

Made His Family His Hobby.

"My only hobby was being with my family when we were all together," he explained. His wife died in May and just one of his two living sons is in Chicago.

"I have no intention of retiring from the railroad for awhile," he said. "I could have retired when I was 65, but I'd rather work."

SGT. J. W. BUSSE AWARDED D. F. C. AS FORT GUNNER

Takes Part in Attacks on Buzz-Bomb Sites.

An 8th air force veteran in England, Sgt. Julius W. Busse, 23, 1333 N. Ashland av., has been awarded the distinguished flying cross for "extraordinary achievement" as right waist gunner on the B-17 Flying Fortress Second Chance.

"I think the plane is well named," Sgt. Busse said recently, "for in a way it gave me my second chance at the Nazis. The first chance was with the Polish squadron of the R. A. F. I enlisted in it in Canada, was sent overseas, and transferred to the American air force in London."

Bombed Gdynia.

Since his transfer he has been on missions over many of Germany's major war plants and military installations. Among these were the docks and ships at Gdynia, Poland.

"Boy, what fighters we got that day!" he said, recounting details of the Gdynia mission. "It was the longest mission we had flown at that time, and we had Germans after us from the time we came over the continent until we left."

"Our second mission to Regensburg, where the Messerschmitt fighter factories are located was the most picturesque mission I've flown. The sky was clear, and I could see all the scenery. It was like opening a history book. The navigator explained all the sights as we flew over them, and pointed out places where old battles had taken place."

Hit Buzz-Bomb Sites.

On a mission to Frankfurt, Sgt. Busse flew as bombardier, releasing bombs on the chemical factories. He made several flights in support of the invasion of France, hitting gun emplacements and buzz-bomb sites. His group started off the St. Lo offensive late in July by showering explosives on targets. The bombs helped clear the area of mines, machine gun nests, and snipers.

Sgt. Busse, son of Mrs. Angeline Busse of the Ashland av. address, was a carpenter with a floor sanding company before enlisting. In addition to the distinguished flying cross he also holds the air medal with three oak leaf clusters.

Students Carry Tradition of 'Lady with Lamp.'

The modern Florence Nightingale wears her uniform with a jaunty air. She probably has a permanent wave and wears bright colored lipstick, but her hands are just as deft and her knowledge of medical science is far more exact than that of the "lady with the lamp" who in the 19th century set the precedent for women nurses on battle fronts.

At the Norwegian-American hospital, 1044 N. Francisco av., 83 cadet nurses are preparing to carry on the tradition of service in war time.

Take Speed-up Course.

As members of the cadet nurse corps, established under the Bolton act in June, 1943, the students are taking an accelerated course in which studies are completed in 24 to 30 months instead of 36 months.

Students have all expenses paid, including tuition, fees, and books. They receive $15 monthly as pre-cadets, $20 as junior cadets, and $30 as senior cadets. Students are expected to remain in the nursing profession for the duration. In their senior year they become members of the Red Cross nurses' reserve.

As pre-cadets, student nurses spend about five hours a day in class work. Orientation courses familiarize them with the history and ethics of the profession. Anatomy, physiology, microbiology, chemistry, and psychology also are included.

Learn Many Subjects.

During the second semester their work includes diet therapy, nutrition, pharmacology, emergency and first aid treatment, pathology, public health, and mental hygiene. Operating room techniques, obstetrics, communicable diseases, pediatrics, psychiatry, gynecology, orthopedics, and dermatology are included in their more advanced work.

One of the oldest hospitals on the northwest side, the Norwegian-American was organized by the Tabitha Hospital society Dec. 7, 1891. The first hospital was a rented frame house which was destroyed by fire in 1892. The following year a brick building was erected to which wings were added as the hospital grew.

Educational facilities include classrooms, science laboratories, a dietetics laboratory, demonstration and practice rooms, and a medical library.

FASHIONS, FOOD VICTORY SCENES ON PARIS RADIO

French Welcome Yanks Back to Capital.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

After four years of broadcasts by Goebbels' minions from Paris, the voices of Americans and Britishers were again heard last week on the short waves and in rebroadcasts over domestic networks from the French capital. Americans heard eyewitness and earwitness stories of scenes as Paris was liberated relayed by personalities familiar to them.

One of the broadcasts that made a special impact was a recording of the scene as Gen. Charles de Gaulle entered Notre Dame cathedral. A BBC commentator was busy giving a word picture when firing began. His recording was interrupted because some one broke off his electrical cable for a minute. But he got back on in time to describe De Gaulle's failure to take any heed of his peril and the capture of four suspects.

Paris Fashions Described.

At our firesides we heard dramatic accounts by American reporters of the wild scenes of jubilation [sometimes the sounds, too] and descriptions of current French fashions—"full and colorful skirts and deep V-necklines"—and reports of their first meals in Parisian restaurants.

It was all in striking contrast to the last fearful and some times tearful broadcasts from France in June, 1940. Mutual commentators were on the spot and reported the terrible scenes after the break-thru at Sedan. We still remember some of the last reports of Eric Sevareid and Helen Hiett from Paris. And we shall never forget Bill Shirer's on the scene report of Hitler in the World War I. armistice car in Compiegne forest laying down armistice terms for the beaten French.

Four Years Is Too Much!

After the fall of France the Nazis promptly took over French radio, and then followed four years of Goebbels' propaganda barrage on the air, much of it beamed to America in elegant French, some of it in our own language, and, of course, large doses in German. But in four years Americans never grew accustomed to hearing Parisian stations identified in the language of Berlin.

For radio listeners the end of the Nazis in the west was foreshadowed when they abandoned "We're Sailing Against England" and dropped back to the old national song, "The Watch on the Rhine," as a theme song for one of their programs.

American listeners now can look forward to the realization of a hope expressed by an American army colonel when he addressed a group of broadcasting executives.

"I hope," he said, "that the next time you hear me I will be saying: 'I am speaking to you now from an American tank as we enter bomb and shell shattered Berlin.'"

GERSHWIN MUSIC TO BE HEARD ON THEATER OF AIR

A program consisting entirely of George Gershwin's works will be presented by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra, chorus and soloists, under direction of Henry Weber, on the Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and Mutual from 8 to 9 o'clock Saturday night. Entitled "The Pioneer from Brooklyn," the program marks the return of the Theater of the Air to W-G-N's main audience studio following a series of nine special concerts at the Grant park band shell.

The Second Rhapsody will be played by Harry Sukman, pianist. Elizabeth Mulliner, soprano soloist, is to sing "The Man I Love" and "Embraceable You." Selections from "Porgy and Bess" also will be heard. Dramatic roles of the presentation are to be taken by a cast of talented radio actors and actresses. Jack LaFrande, writer and director of the series, will produce the show.

Today's NBC Concert Is for Allied Forces

DRUGGIST KEEPS STORE READY FOR YANK'S RETURN

22 of His 'Boys' Serve Many Theaters.

Sam Endler's drug store at 5636 North av. is a much quieter place now than it was before the war, but the neighborhood druggist expects to see things liven up when the boys come home again.

The boys are the 24 young members of the Austin Trojan Athletic club, all but two of whose members are in service. For four years these boys were schoolmates at Austin High school, gathering after school hours and basketball games on the high stools in front of Sam's soda fountain. Sometimes they were treating their girls to a coke but more often they just met in casual fashion to talk about basketball and football.

Clubroom in Basement.

It is for these boys that the druggist has set up a clubroom in the basement where the boys, when they come home, may drift in and out as they please.

"They are all nice, clean fellows," said Sam, who is regarded by the boys as both friend and adviser. "The Trojans have disbanded as a club for the duration but the clubroom already is serving as a link in keeping the group together.

Upstairs in the drug store there's a large plaque with the names and pictures of the boys. A gold star recently was added under the club's first casualty, Lt. James P. McNellis who was killed in an airplane crash while attending a marine corps pilot school near Jacksonville, Fla.

Store Is Mail Exchange.

The store also serves as a mail depot. Letters come there from the boys overseas and are read and exchanged by other members on furlough. In the clubroom there's a record of names and addresses for all.

When the boys come back home and catch up on experiences while separated, no branch of service will be slighted. Eleven are in the army, nine in the navy, and two in the marines. The two boys at home, Joseph Calafiore and Chuck Pietke, have honorable discharges from the army. Four boys are in the army air forces, and one is in the navy air corps.

Tschaikowsky Work on W-G-N's Symphony Hall

Symphony Hall, a program of classical music featuring the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under direction of Henry Weber, will be aired from Chicago's Orchestra hall over W-G-N and WGNB at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night. The overture to Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave," "Forest Murmurs" from Wagner's "Siegfried," and Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 4 are to be played.

Judy Garland to Visit Bergen-McCarthy Show

When Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy, and Mortimer Snerd return to the air via WMAQ-NBC at 7 o'clock tonight, they will welcome Judy Garland and the singing King sisters as guests. # HOME VACATION CAN BE UTILIZED TO PAINT HOUSE

Gives Tips on Preparing for Cleanup Work.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

If a "stay at home and paint" vacation is what you have planned, there are a few points to keep in mind before the actual painting starts.

One of these points is that all surfaces should be well cleaned. Metal parts of a house are not easy to replace in war time and too much emphasis cannot be placed on the necessity of keeping all in top shape.

Every corroded place on metal flashings, downspouts, and gutters should be sandpapered or scraped down to the bright metal and then painted or varnished. Always discuss with your paint dealer the proper type of paint to use for work you intend to do.

Clean Screens with Brush.

If metal screens need attention when you remove them this fall, they should be cleaned with a brush which is fairly stiff, but not so stiff that it will distort the mesh. Then they can be painted with screen paint. [Directions on can should be followed carefully.] Or they can be varnished with a varnish sufficiently thinned with turpentine to insure against clogging the openings in the screen.

If walls are to be painted, all loose or scaling paint should be wire brushed or scraped from walls and then, if necessary, they should be sandpapered smooth.

Check for Cracks, Holes.

It also is important to check carefully for any cracks which may be in evidence, any nail holes or other openings. If they are found they can be filled with some type of crack filler. Discuss with your paint dealer the kind of surface you wish to fill so you may obtain a proper filler.

When it is necessary to use putty on an exterior surface around your house, prime holes first with a coat of paint, then apply putty and paint over it. If you are concerned with an interior plastered wall you can obtain patching plaster and various crack fillers in paint stores, hardware stores, and paint departments of other stores.

If you are painting around the exterior of your house it is well to keep on shaded sides of the house while applying the paint—both to permit paint to set somewhat before hot sun rays have hit it, and also for your own comfort.

If you haven't yet made a careful inventory of the condition of your house surfaces, both interior and exterior, from attic to basement inside, and from roof to foundation outside, these are the days to do it.

CITY SCHOOLS OPEN TUESDAY FOR 450,000

Expect Drop in Prep Enrollment.

Tuesday morning more than 450,000 boys and girls will trek back to Chicago's public schools. School officials have estimated that there will be a drop of from 3,000 to 4,000 pupils in the high schools and junior colleges and an approximate increase of 1,000 pupils in the elementary grades. Last year's total registration was about 470,000.

Altho war industries and the military services have drawn heavily from Chicago's staff of 12,000 teachers, school officials are not anticipating any serious shortages of regular instructors and substitutes.

Catholics Open Wednesday.

Late transfers were approved last week by the school board. J. Chester Bilhorn, 3846 N. Kedvale av., former assistant principal at Schurz High school, will begin the school term this week as principal of the elementary school at 37th and Wells sts.

While the public schools are expecting a decrease in school enrollment this fall, the Catholic schools, which will open Wednesday, are expecting an increase of more than 2,000 pupils. A total enrollment of 195,000 students has been estimated for the eight colleges, 90 high schools and 403 grade schools of the archdiocese.

Plan Two Additions.

On the south side addition of 101 new public school classrooms within the coming year has been approved. One new school will be available Sept. 15 when the building formerly occupied by the La Salle Extension university, 41st st. and Michigan av., will be converted to an elementary school, accommodating 1,500 pupils.

The school board also has let contracts totaling $316,452 for the construction of a 20 room addition to Phillips Elementary school, Pershing rd. and Prairie av. The addition will accommodate 800 more pupils. Construction will start immediately, John C. Christensen, school architect, said, and should be completed in six months.

Continue Work-Study Program.

With war industries seeking still more workers, the high school placement counselors anticipate a heavy part time working program. Cooperating with the United States employment service and war man power commission, the schools have set up a program which enables pupils to work part time. Placement counselors work with pupils, checking their school records, and recommending jobs to fit their capabilities and resources and which afford the least hindrance to their school work.

Last year more than 82 per cent of boys and girls, 16 or more years old, in Chicago high schools worked part time or had heavy home responsibilities. Twenty-four per cent of the high school pupils under 16 also held part time jobs.

917 Clubs Active.

During the last few years Chicago schools have organized one of the most extensive club programs in the United States. The 917 clubs which will resume work again next week are classified into four groups. There are those dealing with the curriculum such as the Spanish, mathematics, and science clubs; the extra curricular clubs organized for social purposes; the organizations participating in school government, and the service groups.

Last year during cleanup week, pupils at Morgan Park High school, 1744 Pryor av., organized the Available Jones club which has been operating all summer. The members mow lawns, trim hedges, and harvest war gardens.

Hyde Park High school, 6220 Stony Island av., has an organization which registers pupils to care for children when parents call, and at Fenger High school, 11220 Wallace st., the hospital volunteers soon will be serving trays at Roseland Community hospital, 11101 Perry av., every day from 4:30 to 6 p. m.

Open House will be observed and visitors will be invited to register for books. The library will serve residents living in the Evergreen Park school district, bounded by 87th st., 103d st., Western av., and Pulaski rd.

Fifteen hundred volumes will be available. Among the larger donations are 200 volumes from the Chicago Lawn branch of the Chicago public library, 70 volumes from Mr. and Mrs. Lester Melrose, Evergreen Park, and 90 volumes from the Evergreen Park Woman's club. The Evergreen Park PTA has set aside $50 for donations and 50 best sellers have been given by residents.

Donations are expected to support the library temporarily but later a referendum on whether to use tax money for its upkeep will be put to voters, said E. F. Cornelius, president of the village board. "The sudden increase in Evergreen Park population, with the accompanying rapid increase in young people, has made the library an educational and recreational necessity," he added. In 1940 there were 3,313 persons in Evergreen Park. Today there are 6,621.

Mrs. James Martin, librarian, is a graduate of DePauw university and also attended the University of Illinois. She will be assisted by volunteers. Library hours will be from 2 to 5 p. m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays; 7 to 9 p. m. on Fridays, and 1 to 5 p. m. on Saturdays.

In 1897 the village installed a water system which did away with the need of a hand operated pump. # COOK BALANCES PROTEINS, FATS IN PLANE TRAVEL

Meals Planned Far in Advance.

Balancing carbohydrates, fats, and proteins in speeding passenger planes roaring high over the United States is the job of Mrs. Jean F. Arbogust, 5220 Kenwood av., dietitian for United Air Lines.

Two weeks before a meal is served to passengers usually traveling 180 miles an hour at 10,000 feet, the menu is planned by Mrs. Arbogust and eight Swiss chefs who prepare the food in commissaries at eight key cities. Meals are placed aboard the planes just before departure and usually are served within an hour after the take-off.

Insulate Hot Foods.

Hot foods are carried in individual casseroles and placed in insulated boxes. Cold foods are packed with dry ice, and beverages are kept at serving temperatures in vacuum bottles. About 3,000 meals are served aloft daily.

Every stewardess includes passenger comments on the food in her flight reports. These are forwarded to Mrs. Arbogust to aid her in improving meals.

A further aid to Mrs. Arbogust is the research kitchen and altitude test chamber located at the air line headquarters, 5959 S. Cicero av. In the kitchen, which is equipped with a luncheon nook, she tries out new menus, recipes, and coffee blends on employes.

Avoid Fried Foods.

Fried foods are rarely served aloft for the lessened pressure draws out the grease. Meat which must be browned is usually baked and naturally greasy foods are carefully drained before serving.

Some blends of coffee lose flavor from standing in vacuum bottles altho altitude seems to have no effect on the flavor of beverages or food. Both warm food and heated beverages must be watched carefully at high altitudes for lower atmospheric pressure causes them to cook again.

Rationing was met by Mrs. Arbogust and her staff by using more poultry. More ice cream was used in place of pastries and cake. Desserts prepared with a minimum of sugar were adopted.

A typical menu contains: for breakfast—chilled orange juice, scrambled eggs and ham, sweet rolls, and coffee; for lunch—fruit cocktail, tenderloin tips saute with vegetables, combination salad, rolls, devil's food cake, and coffee, tea, or milk; for dinner—fresh seafood cocktail, toasted crackers, breast of chicken saute, buttered carrots and peas, hot rolls, fresh fruit salad with cream dressing, chocolate chip ice cream, assorted cookies, and coffee, tea, or milk.

Tests Cookers

Mrs. Jean Arbogust, 5220 Kenwood av., dietitian for United Air Lines, removes pressure cookers from electrically heated galleys in the altitude test chamber. The mask provides her with the normal supply of oxygen.

MOTHER DIRECTS ASSEMBLY LINE AND FARM HOME

Ordnance Plant Keeps Her Days Busy.

With the same efficiency with which she manages a farm household, Mrs. Theresa Havener, Kankakee, supervises a department at the Elwood ordnance plant near Joliet.

During the day she guides 15 women on a booster assembly line who turn out an important mechanism for shells. In the evening she is a busy housewife and mother with three sons, one of whom is serving in the South Pacific.

All Help with Housework.

"It's all in a day's work, if you have a system," explained Mrs. Havener. "My husband, Charles, and my two sons at home all help with the housework in the evening. All the men in the family can cook—even the younger sons, Dale, 15, and Wayne, 17. The first one home in the evening gets dinner for the others. And every Saturday night I do the weekly marketing.

"We even do our own paper hanging and painting around the house. When our work is finished, we sometimes go swimming or to the movies."

Vernon, 19, a seaman 2d class is the son in service.

Day Begins Early.

Mrs. Havener's day begins at 5:30 a. m. She packs a lunch and prepares breakfast for Wayne, who is a truck driver on a road construction project. Then she drives 26 miles to the plant. Dale, a high school student, takes care of the war garden and chickens during the summer months. Her husband runs a small dry goods business in Kankakee.

"We intend to keep on working until Vernon and other boys like him come home," said Mrs. Havener.

GERSHWIN MUSIC TO BE HEARD ON THEATER OF AIR

A program consisting entirely of George Gershwin's works will be presented by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra, chorus and soloists, under direction of Henry Weber, on the Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and Mutual from 8 to 9 o'clock Saturday night. Entitled "The Pioneer from Brooklyn," the program marks the return of the Theater of the Air to W-G-N's main audience studio following a series of nine special concerts at the Grant park band shell.

The Second Rhapsody will be played by Harry Sukman, pianist. Elizabeth Mulliner, soprano soloist, is to sing "The Man I Love" and "Embraceable You." Selections from "Porgy and Bess" also will be heard. Dramatic roles of the presentation are to be taken by a cast of talented radio actors and actresses. Jack LaFrande, writer and director of the series, will produce the show.

FASHIONS, FOOD VICTORY SCENES ON PARIS RADIO

French Welcome Yanks Back to Capital.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

After four years of broadcasts by Goebbels' minions from Paris, the voices of Americans and Britishers were again heard last week on the short waves and in rebroadcasts over domestic networks from the French capital. Americans heard eyewitness and earwitness stories of scenes as Paris was liberated relayed by personalities familiar to them.

One of the broadcasts that made a special impact was a recording of the scene as Gen. Charles de Gaulle entered Notre Dame cathedral. A BBC commentator was busy giving a word picture when firing began. His recording was interrupted because some one broke off his electrical cable for a minute. But he got back on in time to describe De Gaulle's failure to take any heed of his peril and the capture of four suspects.

Paris Fashions Described.

At our firesides we heard dramatic accounts by American reporters of the wild scenes of jubilation [sometimes the sounds, too] and descriptions of current French fashions—"full and colorful skirts and deep V-necklines"—and reports of their first meals in Parisian restaurants.

It was all in striking contrast to the last fearful and some times tearful broadcasts from France in June, 1940. Mutual commentators were on the spot and reported the terrible scenes after the break-thru at Sedan. We still remember some of the last reports of Eric Sevareid and Helen Hiett from Paris. And we shall never forget Bill Shirer's on the scene report of Hitler in the World War I. armistice car in Compiegne forest laying down armistice terms for the beaten French.

Four Years Is Too Much!

After the fall of France the Nazis promptly took over French radio, and then followed four years of Goebbels' propaganda barrage on the air, much of it beamed to America in elegant French, some of it in our own language, and, of course, large doses in German. But in four years Americans never grew accustomed to hearing Parisian stations identified in the language of Berlin.

For radio listeners the end of the Nazis in the west was foreshadowed when they abandoned "We're Sailing Against England" and dropped back to the old national song, "The Watch on the Rhine," as a theme song for one of their programs.

American listeners now can look forward to the realization of a hope expressed by an American army colonel when he addressed a group of broadcasting executives.

"I hope," he said, "that the next time you hear me I will be saying: 'I am speaking to you now from an American tank as we enter bomb and shell shattered Berlin.'"

Here's Effie

Edgar Bergen will introduce Effie Klinker, his new feminine dummy, to radio audiences when he resumes his show over WMAQ-NBC at 7 o'clock tonight.

Have you heard about my "HAVE-MORE" PLAN?

"A little land and a lot of living"

It's The True Story of How We Robinsons Have Found a Healthier, Happier Life — and More Security In This Uncertain World... How You Can Do It, Too!

This "Have-More" Plan

is the story of our family and our place. It tells how we moved to a little place on the outskirts of town—how I've kept my regular, full-time job—how we grow most of our own food in spare time—have fun doing it . . . have better health . . . more sunshine and fresh air . . . more peace and quiet . . . more security and independence . . . in fact more of just about everything that really counts in life.

If You Follow Our Plan Here's How You'll Be Situated

You will have a lovely home and an acre or so of land within a few miles of where you work. Your place will pay for itself as you go along—you will own it free and clear!

You will have hardly any weekly grocery, meat and milk bills. With the small-scale, modern, labor-saving methods I'll show you, you can raise up to 75% of all your family food—do it all in only about one hour of chore time a day—and find real pleasure in doing it!

Your family can become truly self-reliant

You can be healthier and happier. You need never worry very much about losing a job. Or you can retire years sooner, if you want to, and if you will put away enough to be assured of just a small regular income!

NOW IS A GOOD TIME TO START and to Lay Plans for the Future

Our plan does not take a lot of time nor a lot of work nor a lot of money! It does not take a lot of land—even part of one acre can be enough!

You do not have to do it all at once—you can start one step at a time—perhaps with the very home and land you already have! You don't need to know a thing about farming!

My Plan is $1.00

I will send you my plan if you write me, and send me one dollar. I wish I didn't have to charge anything for my plan—but it does cost money these days to get things printed, to mail them, etc. Anyway, I've kept the price just as low as I possibly could.

If, after you study the details, you aren't convinced that my plan means you, too, can have more — then I will gladly send your money back.

Mrs. Robinson and our son, Jack. The home-raised goose I'm holding weighed 10½ lbs. at 10 weeks of age. All the food it ate was stale bread and grass growing around our own place

NOT A BOOK!

Over 50,000 Words; 73 Illustrations

My "HAVE-MORE" Plan is clear-cut diagrams, actual photographs of our place, easy to understand directions, tables, charts, etc. It shows just how we have applied the most modern, easy, practical, small-scale methods at our place. It shows how you can easily do the same, in your spare time and with plenty of spare time left over! Right now is an excellent time of year to start.

CHOOSING THE RIGHT PLACE
(If you don't already have a place.)
This is a most important step. My Plan goes into it very thoroughly . . . just what mistakes to avoid . . . just what to be sure you get. It has a handy, full-page "Score-Card" of what to look for covering location, roads, distance to work, schools, water supply, kind of soil, house and buildings, neighborhood, whether to rent or buy, zoning restrictions, price to pay, etc., etc. (Several folks have written to tell me that this "Score - Card" alone is worth many times the price of the whole Plan.)

A BOUNTIFUL GARDEN
When I see somebody sweating his head off for a handful of insect-riddled produce, I feel sorry for him. There's far less work to gardening the way we do it, and we have so many fine vegetables we can't use them all. Our Plan tells you how

CHICKENS AND EGGS
I've got a broiler a week to eat for the next 6 months — all cleaned and ready to cook — in my quick freezer right now. It stands me around 16c a pound.
My eggs, from a dozen laying hens — all we can use and more too — cost me half of store prices. They're really fresh and take me only 7 minutes a day of time.

DELICIOUS RABBIT MEAT
How to have 150 pounds a year with only two does and one buck — at only 8c a pound even if you buy much of their food instead of raising it yourself

RICH MILK, BUTTER, CREAM
From your own miniature dairy. Goat's milk tastes better and is worth twice what Grade A homogenized cow's milk costs. Yet a goat costs only one-seventh as much as keeping a cow. Using modern methods it's "easy as pie" to keep a goat.

PIGS ARE EASY
I'll show you how easy it is to turn surplus vegetables, kitchen parings, alfalfa leaf, etc., into 150 pounds of luscious ham, pork chops, bacon, sausage.

GEESE, TURKEYS, SQUABS, DUCKS
Easy, interesting and mighty good eating!

LOVELY FLOWERS
For mother

NEW, EASIER PRESERVING
How to preserve and quick freeze not only vegetables and fruits, but also meats and dairy products with new, amazingly easy methods — that taste far better, too!

HONEY BEES
75 pounds of delicious honey — from only one hive and only 10 minutes' work per week. Bees are fascinating

EXTRA INCOME
Selling your surplus crops. (If you ever have to or want to, you can go right on from my "Have-More" Plan to full-time farming and make your whole living from the land.)

FRUIT TREES
How to choose and care for them so that they will bear years sooner. Use them for shade trees.

GRAPES, BERRIES
Your investment back each year — and they are awful good eating! Use them for borders and hedges if your place is small.

LOTS MORE
There isn't room to tell about here. It's how you can have more — more security, better food, better health, more fun, more of just about everything that makes life worth living!

If You Already Have a Place

Maybe you'd like to "compare notes" with us. Our Plan is laid out step-by-step, subject-by-subject, with lots of actual photographs of our place, diagrams, charts, tables, drawings. It shows how we do things the easiest, latest, most practical and scientific ways we can find.

Who knows, maybe we can show you some short cuts, new methods, help you get better results. Just one new, good idea would be worth a lot more than the price of the whole Plan—and you'll have a lot of fun comparing your methods with the way we do things.

A GRAND WAY TO LIVE!

If You Have a Full-Time Job:

You can easily work out the "Have-More" Plan in an hour or so of spare time a day. You can have a beautiful little place within easy commuting distance of your job. (There are hundreds of such places near every city.) If you work unusually long hours and don't feel that you have time to do the whole Plan at present, you can do part of it in as little as 15 or 30 minutes a day. Even so you can have all the health, happiness, and security benefits of this kind of living. You can have a fine garden and beautiful flowers. You can get your fruit trees, berries, asparagus bed, and rhubarb started, perhaps even have a few chickens.

This way of living is especially good for children. You can get your place all paid for and have that wonderful sense of security and independence knowing that you and your family have your place to fall back on—that you could get along with very little cash income if you ever had to

If You Have a Part-Time Job:

If you work short hours, such as 40 hours a week or less, you can get all the more benefit out of the Plan. Perhaps in your work you have several days a week free, or perhaps you have several weeks or months a year free. If you have a place like ours you can invest that free time in your own future security. Not only will you find real pleasure in working around your own place, you will, in effect, be increasing your income by growing most of your food, doing much of your own carpentering, painting, upkeep, etc. You'll be surprised how much farther your income will go—how soon your place will be all yours—all paid for—with all the independence and security this means.

If You Are Planning to Retire:

Or if you are already retired, you can see that the "Have-More" Plan is a very practical way to stretch your retirement income, and to help keep yourself in better health. This way, if you are going to receive Social Security benefits, or with just a small pension or annuity, you can look forward to many years of happiness and security. We've heard from lots of folks from Vermont to California who are doing just this right now!

If Your Income Is Limited:

This Plan is all the more for you if your income is limited. You can start with as little as $50 cash. Perhaps you already have some land, a victory garden, some chickens — so much the better. You'll find it that much easier to add other items in my plan. Remember, you don't have to do all this at once . . . and that it is not only easy . . . it's downright fun to do these things if you apply the simple, modern small-scale methods I'll tell you about!

Honestly, this plan can be the real answer to your long time desire to have more of the really worth-while things in life — if you'll just turn loose and get started!

So sit down this minute and write me. Just put an ordinary dollar bill in an envelope, with your name and address.

Right now is not only a good time to get started, it's an excellent time to make your plans for the future.

Yours for

Ed Robinson

OUR PLAN TELLS HOW

we raise most of our own food in spare time, and find real pleasure doing it.

New labor-saving methods applied to the small homestead are the secret! Believe it or not, I spend only 15 minutes a day on my garden, 10 minutes a day on my poultry, 20 minutes on my milk goats, five minutes on rabbits, a couple of minutes on bees and the rest of an hour taking care of odds and ends—on the year-around average. With the modern small-scale methods I'll show you you can do just as well.

Security Against Hard Times

Maybe you'd like to retire some day. If there's a post-war depression, you might lose your job. I hope not, but it might happen, and if it did, wouldn't it be swell to have a place where you could get by with very little cash income?

Wouldn't it be a good idea to know how to do these things even if you never have to? I can tell you it sure gives me a feeling of independence and security and I'm sure it would do the same for you!

A Healthier, Happier Life

Not only is it fun to have a garden, and to raise lots of the other foods you need—it's healthful. Really fresh vegetables, milk, eggs, meat, etc., have more vitamins and other health giving qualities in them. They taste much better—and of course, raising your own you can have all you want without worrying about ration points! Being outdoors around the place is healthful, too. The whole family eats better, sleeps better, feels better and gets along together better. Your children, if you have any, have more wholesome surroundings. This "way of life" is really the soundest foundation for family happiness.

Would You Like To See My Plan?

Just common sense and some new ideas. Right now is a good time to start. If you'd like my "Have-More" Plan, just put your name, address, and a dollar bill or dollar money order (if bank check, $1.05) in an envelope and turn it over to Uncle Sam's mailman. I'll gladly refund your money if you're not more than pleased. Address:

'Carmen' to Open Chicago Opera Company Season

Repertory and Casts Chosen for 1st Week

By Claudia Cassidy.

When an institution once as glittering as the Chicago Opera company has spent two years in sackcloth and silence, meditating the sins that caused its collapse, what it announces for its new lease on life takes on uncommon significance. Here is Fausto Cleva's choice for the first of five weeks that make up Chicago opera in 1944: Monday evening, Oct. 16—Bizet's "Carmen," with Gladys Swarthout, Christina Carroll, Kurt Baum, Alexander Sved; Wednesday evening, Oct. 18—Verdi's "La Traviata," with Bidu Sayao, Mario Berini, Robert Weede; Friday evening, Oct. 20—Puccini's "La Boheme," with Marjory Hess, Christina Carroll, Nino Martini, Richard Bonelli, Wilfred Engelman, Virgilio Lazzari; Saturday matinée, Oct. 21—Verdi's "Aida," with Zinka Milanov, Kerstin Thorborg, Kurt Baum, Alexander Sved, Nicola Moscona; Saturday evening, Oct. 21—Wagner's "Die Walküre," with Helen Traubel, Kerstin Thorborg, Astrid Varney, Emery Darcy, Herbert Janssen.

Perhaps it isn't altogether fair to call that Mr. Cleva's choice. No doubt some of it was dictated by the budget, and some of it controlled by the fact that he got a late start in the booking handicap and probably was unable to capture some of the singers most in demand. His list has brilliant facets, and flawed facets, and some that are clouded in début uncertainty. For that matter, a lot of this year's opera comes under the wait and see class.

We know Mr. Cleva only by reputation and by a competent performance of "La Traviata" he conducted here in 1942. We have no idea what other conductors he intends to engage, except that he is said to have made a laudable tho futile effort to capture Pierre Monteux for "Pélléas and Mélisande." Our new chorus is in the hands of Konrad Neuger, long a member of the Metropolitan staff. We know nothing in advance about what the Swedish director, Gustav Bergmann, will do to our staging. Balletomanes know that Boris Romanoff, the new ballet master, did not have a success at the Metropolitan, but then neither are they impressed by the work of his successor, Laurent Novikoff. We face the season of 1944 in truly international mood. We have an Italian impresario, a Polish chorus master, a Swedish stage director and a Russian ballet master. Is there an American in the house?

Marjory Hess.

Zinka Milanov.

There will be, among the singers. Miss Swarthout's highly pictorial Carmen will be her first here since that 1942 night at Soldiers' field when Jan Kiepura knocked her out in the third act before killing her in the fourth. Apparently she has faith in Kurt Baum, despite the fact that he was amateur heavyweight champion in his native Czechoslovakia. Helen Traubel will sing her first Brünnhilde here, no doubt smiling ruefully in remembrance of that night in 1937 when she sang an unprepared Sieglinde and was helped out of more than one tight spot by those Wagnerian giants, Flagstad and Melchior.

Bidu Sayao's Chicago début as Violetta sounds as interesting as Lily Pons' impending bow in the same highly decorative role. Remembering Miss Pons' silver lamé in "Lucia," what do you suppose she will wear to cope with Miss Sayao's "Traviata" costumes, all reputedly ablaze with diamonds from her Brazilian father's diamond mines? Miss Milanov's Aida is probably the best now to be heard, a lustrous performance of exceptional vocal beauty, and the stately Thorborg's Amneris is on the side of splendor. But how even this stalwart singer is going to be Amneris is the afternoon and Fricka in the evening is rather beyond me. Do you suppose they got her cheaper that way? Remember the 1930 "Walküre" with Leider, Lehman, Olszewska, Althouse, and Nissen, Pollak conducting? Or the 1937 one with Flagstad, Wettergren, and Melchior, Weber conducting? Never mind me—I just like to tantalize you.

Marjory Hess, the new Mimi, is a Chicago girl who has sung in Europe and with Mr. Cleva at Cincinnati. She appeared here at the opera concert, singing Mozart. Mario Berini, the new lyric tenor, is a Californian who has sung in Mexico, Philadelphia, Montreal, and New York's City Center opera. Christina Carroll is one of the Met's audition winners, who appeared here last spring as a flower maiden in "Parsifal." She will tackle both Micaela in "Carmen" and Musetta in "Boheme." I'm sorry they didn't get Frances Greer for Musetta. She is the best I have heard in years.

Mr. Martini has sung here before, and his pleasant tenor is small for a major role in so large an opera house. What in the world has happened to Richard Crooks, a superb lyric tenor we all want to hear, but somehow don't? Mr. Baum's Rhadames is far from the grand tradition, but the dramatic tenor nowadays is runnerup to the dodo. Emery Darcy is a heldentenor gamble, on the strength of the "Parsifal" he sang in New York last season, substituting for the matchless Melchior. Mr. Sved's baritone is far too mushy and has too much vibrato to make Escamillo thrilling, and he sounds Where are Tibbett and Thomas and like a doubtful bet for Amonasro, Czaplicki and Warren?

Robert Weede is returning for "Traviata." Perhaps you remember him from 1939 when he sang Rigoletto and Tonio in "Pagliacci" and was scheduled for the baritone roles in "Hoffmann" and Ford in "Falstaff," but did not sing them. The Nedda that year was Vivian Della Chiesa, whose fan club is worried—says she isn't coming this season. The opera plays sphinx in the matter, saying nothing at all.

It now seems that Jeanette MacDonald will sing Juliet here on Nov. 4 and 11, and Marguerite in "Faust" on Nov. 13 or 15—the dates are unofficially culled from good sources. Several seasons ago she tried her opera wings in a Canadian tour of "Romeo and Juliet," with Tokatyan, Pinza, and Moscona. One of the managers associated with the tour says Miss MacDonald lost $8,000 in nine performances and the local management lost more. Perhaps it was just expensive rehearsal for Chicago's show.

THE HIDDEN TOWN

By FREDERICK R. BECHDOLT

(Copyright: 1944: By F. R. Bechdolt.)

INSTALMENT II.

THE name Butcher Shop was a survival of former days when bandits used to ride along this same road and travelers often turned up missing hereabouts. The story went that the house had seen a dozen murders, and it had the desolate look which goes so well with houses of evil reputation. A long, one story adobe with shake roof; some of its windows were gone and the earth around it was bare. A woman was standing in the doorway when Yardley brought his sedan to a stop.

Her hair was as gray as his own; her face was as dark as a Negro's and it was seamed with a network of lines. There was a world of evil in her loose, full lips and her restless black eyes were malignant. She was a rawboned creature, her shoulders were as wide as those of a burly man; her bare brown arms were as muscular as those of a wrestler. She waited there for some moments, and Yardley did not move, nor did he speak. And when she came out to the car at last she said:

"I have no money for you."

"You think money grows on bushes, Ursula?" he asked.

"I tell you I have no money," she repeated doggedly.

"Then," he announced, "I will drive down to Queensburg today and I will go to the judge. He will cancel the bond of one thousand dollars which I signed last month. The sheriff will take you to the county jail. And," he added slowly, "I think that when the time for the trial comes you will have much trouble, for it is not easy to hire a lawyer when you have no money and no friends. Do you know what the judge does to one who is guilty of sticking a knife into a man?"

She laid both hands on the car door.

"Senor Alcalde," she said, and there was no violence in her voice. "You know I have no money. What is it that you want?"

"A little thing," he said. "Some wool from a dead sheep."

Then he told her of the things which the shepherd had said. They were speaking the mongrel Spanish of the California hills; it is a language of gentle nuances but when she answered his request there was no softness in her phrasing.

"No!" she cried. "That means prison."

"And if you do not," he reminded her, "that means the prison also. You will bring it to me before tomorrow morning."

• • •

She threw back her head defiantly but her eyes were frightened now, the lines which crevassed her dark face were squirming. After some moments her head came forward again.

"I go," she muttered.

He let in the gears and drove away without another word. And in the cool hour before the coming of the next dawn he wakened to her knock. The old fashioned kerosene handlamp which he carried threw a little puddle of yellow light which followed him as he came to the front door. He bade her step inside. She answered sharply.

"No!" She was breathing fast as if she had been running. "Take it now."

She thrust a mason jar into his hand. The lamplight showed its contents; they looked like the sweepings which one removes from a vacuum cleaner.

"There is," she told him, "enough in this jar to kill off all the flocks in the hills—and all the herders too, if that is your desire." She was turning away when she said it, but she faced around suddenly.

"It is not because I like you, Senor Alcalde, that I tell you now; it is because I think maybe somebody might have seen me with this jar, or maybe somebody might have seen me coming to your house. Who knows? So please remember: do not let your fingers touch what is inside; and when you empty it, you must not let your face come close to it. You must not breathe the dust from this wool. I do not want you to drop and swell up like a dead sheep, for it might bring more trouble to me."

With that she left, and John Yardley took the jar into his bedroom. Some men would have done the thing which he had planned during the next hour, but it was in his mind that, if he were seen abroad by night, the one who saw him would be certain to remember it. If he were abroad by day no one who happened to run across him would give the meeting a second thought. So he bided his time.

It was several hours before he would go to the bank. He returned to his bed, but he did not sleep. Lying there while the darkness paled, he wondered what Dick Huntoon's daughter would look like, after she had dropped dead like a stricken sheep.

Death was industrious in the neighborhood of Escondido during the next 24 hours. He started to work down in the valley the following afternoon at just about the time when John Yardley began operations with that mason jar in the hills.

Of the four drivers who were waiting at the service station when tragedy swooped down upon the place, Nell Huntoon was the first to arrive.

She had come 200 miles since morning and her car was an old model. It was late summer and the first war time speed limit had just gone into effect. Two hundred miles during which the speedometer never passes the 40 mile mark is tedious business even with the limberest of motors. Moreover, the tawny flanks of the California coast range were radiating heat waves like the top of a kitchen stove on baking day, and what wind there was sucked up the long valley from behind her. So, when the service station man failed to appear after she had sounded her horn twice, she welcomed the opportunity to get a breath of air which didn't smell of overheated lubricating oil, and she climbed out to stretch her legs in the grateful shade of the wide canopy before the little red and green building.

Traffic was slackening up these days, but this was a main highway and several cars came tooling by while she was taking the first turn beside the row of stumps. A maintenance crew had been at work along the last mile and the macadam was strewn with loose gravel. Each car appeared out of a thick fog of dust, which closed in behind it as soon as it had passed, hiding the scattered live oaks on both sides and the branch road to Escondido, which turned off to the right a hundred yards ahead.

Nell was walking toward the south facing the side road when the second driver to arrive swung her car out of the dust haze. It was a late model sedan of expensive make, and the film of gray powder which it had picked up was not thick enough to conceal its glossy dark sheen. The motor was so silent that Nell was unaware of its approach until she heard the thud of the slammed door. When she faced around the driver was walking toward her.

The two of them bestowed upon each other that brief, appraising glance by which women strangers make up their minds whether or not to recognize each other's existence. What the newcomer saw was evidently to her liking; a slim, blue eyed girl, golden haired and hatless, clad in tan colored slacks and a scanty sleeveless jacket. Her lips should curve easily but didn't. It was evident that she was holding them too tightly, and the clear eyes had a hint of defiance in their violet depths. What Nell saw was distinctly unusual, but it was pleasant, and she was still hesitant when the other broke the silence.

"Once every week," this one said, "I drive down to Queensburg and they give me the works in the beauty parlor. It sets me back five bucks, and by the time I'm half way home I look as if I had a character part in the Grapes of Wrath."

As a matter of fact, she looked remarkably fresh, considering the wilting heat; and remarkably young considering her gray hair. She was wearing one of those wide garden hats with little blue flowers scattered over its drooping rim; hats which very few middle aged women can get away with, even if they have had good luck with their figures and wrinkles. Yet it didn't look bad at all on her, and she was long past middle age; nor did the scanty sports dress of unbleached linen, nor the silk stockings and the tan and white sport shoes. Her gray hair showed that Queensburg's beautician knew her business, and in spite of numerous tiny lines, the rouge and lipstick seemed entirely apropos. This, so Nell was telling herself, was one of the rare members of her sex who remain ageless. She realized that she was smiling. She was about to say something good natured by way of answer when the third arrival braked a convertible roadster to a stop behind the expensive sedan. He was out almost before the wheels had ceased revolving; he was waving a sunburned hand; he was saying.

"Hello, Beulah!" He was coming toward them, and Nell's companion was answering his wave. The driver of the convertible roadster was young and slim and tall, dark haired with clear gray eyes, and he evidently belonged somewhere in the hill country, for his turned up overalls showed a pair of high heeled boots and his dusty, wide-rimmed hat showed signs of hard usage. He looked hard himself, hard and fit, and his skin was colored deeply by the sun and wind; but there was something in the straight set of his shoulders which hinted at a service uniform rather than this garb of hill riders. He was passing in front of Nell, he was reaching for Beulah's extended hand when the fourth driver brought an ancient jalopie to a halt with its rusted bumper touching the rear bumper of the boy's car.

The raiment of the fourth driver was as gaudy as his car was disreputable—full plaited brown trousers, gaudy pink rayon shirt, and a green coat. His name was Anastasia Rodriguez, and his thin hooked nose was like the beak of a vulture. His little eyes were never still. The tragedy which was drawing close at this moment was not going to fall upon him; it was merely to play its part in hastening his end. And of the four who were under the canopy before the red and green building, he was the only one who saw exactly what happened.

The service station man was crossing the highway. He had heard Nell's horn while he was busy with some young stock in the pasture on the other side of the road, and now the sight of four customers was making him hurry. So he failed to look and listen.

Nell was facing the young fellow in the high heel boots and the battered hat. She saw his eyes narrow. She was conscious of a cloud of gray dust two hundred yards or so away, and of the service station man, a lank, stoop shouldered figure, hatless, in his shirt sleeves, right in the middle of the road. Then the young fellow's arm shot out. He gripped her by both shoulders and he lifted her from her feet with terrifying abruptness. He whirled her around. He said:

"As you are! Don't look."

She heard the thud. It was horribly loud and it was horribly dull. Its suggestion of something soft and yielding struck by something hard and swift was unmistakable. When she turned around in flat disobedience of the order which had been given her, she saw a dense cloud of dust. It swirled into the space under the canopy where she was standing and it stifled her for a moment. Then it passed. Her eyes followed it down the road; she was barely able to distinguish the car which it enshrouded; there were no details, just a dark shape, speeding along within the dust cloud.

The service station man was lying beside the macadam pavement. He did not look like a man now, he looked like a little heap of old clothes. The youth who had handled her so roughly was running toward him. And Anastasia Rodriguez had leaped out of his old jalopie; he too was making for the roadside, but not toward the spot where the dead man had been hurled. His dark face wore a look of great complacency. This Nell remembered afterward, and she remembered how he bent down beside the road to pick up something. But what that something was she did now know, for his back was toward her. And because she did not regard this byplay as important, it passed from her mind when she heard Beulah calling.

"Anything I can do, Harvey?" And then the voice of the young fellow who had laid violent hands upon her a moment ago.

"Nothing." There was a finality in the manner of that one word answer which announced death's presence. The speaker was bending over the pathetic heap of clothes beside the road when he made it. He straightened up while Nell was watching him. The thing which had taken place within a few yards of the spot where she stood seemed curiously remote from her. It was as if her mind had turned its back on the shocking erasure of a human life, as if it was persisting in fixing itself on less important matters. It occurred to her then that she hadn't rebelled when Harvey had turned her around so roughly.

He was running up the road; he was shouting to Anastasia Rodriguez. She saw the resplendent young paisano hurry to his ancient car. He took something from beneath his coat and dropped it into the space before the driver's seat before he turned to obey the summons. She felt a hand upon her arm. Some one was saying:

"Come, dearie." A firm hand, and there was firmness in the rich voice. They brought her back to the grim reality and she said:

"He's dead." Her own voice was flat. It didn't sound as if it belonged to her.

The hand was guiding her to the glossy sedan; the two of them were in the rear seat when Nell spoke again.

"The car that hit him went on by."

"Easy." There was comfort in the older woman's voice; it was as undisturbed as if death were not present. "You just relax. The men are doing all there is to do."

A car was passing; it went slowly, then picked up speed; others followed and dust clouds trailed along with them. From the sedan's rear seat the only view included the branch road ahead of them and part of the main highway; the immediate scene of the crime was just outside Nell's angle of vision. She did not know when it was that the highway patrol car arrived, for it came from the north and she was facing southward. By that time her mind had ceased reviewing what had happened. She was on her guard once more, wary in self defense.

"My name," her companion was saying, "is Beulah Smith."

From the beginning Nell had liked her, and that liking which had been implanted in her against her will—for she was desperately intent on keeping herself to herself in this neighborhood of her old home—had been growing stronger. She was silent for a moment. The silence was long enough to be noticeable. It was interrupted by the highway patrolman. He had come up beside them and he had opened the rear door of the sedan. Like most of those big, late model cars which were being turned out up to the time when motor vehicles were frozen, this low swung body lacked a running board. The patrolman was a broad shouldered fellow, and he wore sergeant's stripes on his sleeve; the booted foot which he placed within the doorway was coated with gray dust; he was touching his visored cap, he held a note book in one hand and he took a pencil from his pocket.

"Sorry to have kept you waiting." His voice was soothing. "Now, if you'll give me your name, please."

He was looking at Nell and he was smiling. Well, it had come and there wasn't any dodging it. She swallowed something and when she answered, her voice had gone flat again. She said:

"My name is Nell Huntoon."

It made no impression on him whatever. And Nell did not dare to look at her companion; she kept her eyes fixed on the good-natured face in the doorway and replied to questions which followed. She remained staring straight ahead of her while he took down Beulah Smith's statement. He thanked the two of them and was closing the door when he said:

"Four of you here, and none of you saw the car that did it. Well, maybe we'll get him. But we'll need some good luck, I guess." The door went shut.

"That Mexican," Nell said, "knows something about it." But the sergeant had gone and Beulah Smith was not concerned with Anastasia Rodriguez.

The little silence which followed seemed to last much longer than it did. Beulah broke it at last and Nell was prepared for what was coming. She was sitting bolt upright and her lips were hard.

"I'm living near Escondido," Beaulah's voice was very gentle. "I bought a ranch out in the hills two months ago. Went in for cattle, dearie. I'd been coming to Escondido every winter for years, and I moved over from Nevada last spring. I had an auto camp and tavern, but you know what happened to business." It was evident that she was not as anxious to explain her own movements as she was to make things easier for Nell.

"What I wanted to tell you, dearie." She laid her hand on Nell's hand. "Don't hold yourself so tight. It only hurts you worse when you do that. I have been up against it myself once or twice. I know. Just take the breaks as they come and look everybody right in the face, and, if you don't like the way they look at you, forget 'em."

"They know I'm coming, then?" Nell asked.

"Of course they know." Beulah's hand stroked Nell's hand. "Most of them have been in Escondido all their lives. That's all they know—the things that happened in their town."

The highway patrol sergeant had finished his questioning. The sunburned young fellow—his name was Harvey, Nell was thinking when she saw his face at the car door—was here to have a word with them. His hand was on the latch when Beulah leaned forward quickly and shook her head at him. He gave her a bewildered look and turned away. She waited until he had gone beyond earshot before she spoke again.

"Might be you won't run across him, for he's here on furlough and he's due to report back to his regiment in a few days. But you might as well know now. He's Harvey Little. It was his father that your father was accused of killing."

"Sit down," Eddie Morton bade Nell, "and get your breath. Those stairs are bad. I can't get used to them myself."

The flight was steep, it lay along the wall, outside the building, like a fire escape, and it led to one of those second floor verandas which are characteristic of old Spanish California architecture. From this railed gallery two doors opened into the pair of rooms where Eddie's father had practiced law. The walls of the front room where they were sitting were lined with shelves; the most of these were vacant, and the remnants of a lawyer's library occupied the others. Old fashioned cane seated arm chairs, a pair of iron cuspidors, a wood-burner stove with a nickel-plated fender, and a map of California which had been out of date before the last World war, were the only furnishings except for the desk behind which Eddie was seated. The top of that desk was covered with green cloth, and the covering was spotted with ink stains. The air was flavored with the indescribable scent which comes from old books and dry rot.

"It's not very comfortable here," Eddie said, "but I thought it might be better if I drove over instead of your stopping off in Queensburg. I've been going thru the records—brought the papers with me." He gestured toward a sole leather brief case, which looked as much out of place on the desk as he did in the office. "There are one or two points which I ran across and they struck me as interesting. It occurred to me that maybe there might be some evidence that hadn't been brought out at your father's trial—that perhaps you might remember something yourself."

What Has Gone Before Nell Huntoon writes to Edward Morton Jr. to reopen her home in Escondido. She is returning after 18 years to review the charge of murder against her father, Richard Huntoon. Eddie's father had defended her father. Eddie is in financial difficulties. His divorced wife is demanding back alimony, and there is also a debt of honor to be met. Scanning the old Huntoon papers, he decides if he can incriminate Yardley it will mean ready money. Realizing preparations are being made for Nell Huntoon's return, Yardley has a fear the past may catch up with him. Banker Yardley is known as the Alcalde. From a herder Yardley learns anthrax is prevalent in the hills. It is as deadly to humans as to animals.

Waldo Frank Gives Outline of Philosophy of Judaism

"THE JEW IN OUR DAY," by Waldo Frank. [Duell, Sloan and Pearce, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Dr. Felix A. Levy.

The author fulfills a promise made in his "Our America" [1919] to write about the Jews. While he does this most sketchily, he nevertheless gives us his philosophy of Judaism, an elaboration of his original thesis, penned a quarter of a century ago, that the Jew must die in order to live, death being an earnest of resurrection. This concept is the central thought of the Judeo-Christian tradition.

Like all thoughtful members of his people, the author is deeply concerned with the future and fate of the Jews. Hitler's decimation of their ranks and the attacks of the anti-Semites are not as great dangers to Jewish survival as is the inertia within.

The dry rot that withers Jewish vitality is exemplified by the Jew's readiness to forget that he is a "peculiar people" and by his striving to become indistinguishable from the gentile, whether this mode of self-extinction takes the form of nondescript "assimilationist" Jew in America or becomes a program for restoration of Palestine into another Norway or Costa Rica—a purely secular power-state.

The Jew, true to his past, must live dangerously; he is the vanguard of and for a new human society, with its democratic and fraternal ideals. Martyrdom is the price that the dissenter must always pay for his gospel of a "new deal" for all men—a gospel that disturbs a smug world—and the Jew must be ready for sacrifice, as was Abraham and as was Jesus. The Jew is the suffering servant of mankind; thru the stripes and wounds of Israel will men be healed and saved.

Mr. Frank summons the Jew to return to his historic role as preached by prophet, taught by sage, and exemplified by the passion of the Man on the Cross.

Ettlinger's Paris Story Is Charming

"FAIR FANTASTIC PARIS," by Harold Ettlinger. [Bobbs-Merrill, $3.]

Reviewed by Will Davidson.

There is only one way in which to take your last look at Paris. That is to climb the steep streets of Montmartre in the late afternoon, until you come out on the steps of Sacré-Coeur. Below you spreads the city—the parts you have come to know well in your days or weeks or years of living with her; the parts you would like to know; the parts you would never know no matter how long you stayed, because only a Frenchman, Paris born, could ever really know them.

Harold Ettlinger closed 12 years in Paris on the steps of Sacré-Coeur and across the storied rooftops, up from the dim recesses of Notre Dame, out of the little bistros, in from the cool Bois de Boulogne, came the memories that found their way into this charming, wise, nostalgic book. Hal was a Chicago Tribune man when he went to Paris, and later joined United Press. By inclination and by profession he achieved a rapport with the great city that all too few foreigners can. He saw her gay, he saw her indolent, he saw her on that terrible February day of the Stavisky riots rise up in bloody wrath against the very forces that, had she known, might eventually have saved her from the boche. He saw Paris relax over aperitifs and he saw her go rather sullenly to war again.

Before he died last spring Hal completed a heartwarming record of the Paris so many of us love—as heartwarming as any you will find. It is the record not only of the Dome and the Sphinx, of the galleries and the markets, of the Champs Elysées and the porte d'Italie; it is the record of Suzy, the little Jewish refugee who loved the Catholic school except for one very little thing, her knees hurt; it is the record of Lola Smith the nude dancer, and Marianne the innkeeper, and Forte the painter.

Fair fantastic Paris is coming back. She would like "Fair Fantastic Paris" because it is the compliment of a good friend; a warm admirer.

This Tells How to Become Good Parliamentarian

"ESSENTIALS OF PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE," by Zoe Steen Moore and John B. Moore. [Harper, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Arthur Bergholz.

This work is primarily designed to aid the busy person who must acquaint himself with correct and accepted parliamentary procedure, and to serve him as a manual for ready reference on procedures regarding which he is in doubt.

In order to achieve this dual purpose the authors have organized their material simply and clearly. The first part of the book is a detailed, easily referred to presentation in logical steps of the essentials of conducting a meeting, and handling the resolutions and questions which arise on the floor. The remaining portion of the book presents the more involved procedures, and concludes with a series of charts which give synoptic visualizations of related procedures, and coördinate specific answers to specific questions.

Those who must train themselves as parliamentarians, or as members of a club or group wishing to know how to utilize parliamentary procedures will find this work simple to use and yet sufficiently detailed to cover all likely cases which arise in typical situations. The table of contents serves as an over-all guide to the material and is excellently supplemented by a thoro index.

Novel Reveals Innate Dignity in Negro Life

"ESCAPE THE THUNDER," by Lonnie Coleman. [Dutton, $2.]

Reviewed by Kenneth C. Kaufman.

Luther Walker knew he had to kill Josh Johnson. Knew it as an inevitable fact, the minute he laid eyes on him after he came back from serving six years for killing a man. Luther had been convicted solely on Josh's testimony, but two or three people knew that Josh had done the killing himself, framing Luther, who had been too drunk to remember anything about it. Now Josh was the big shot of Day street, shoving everybody around.

Lt. Lonnie Coleman.

Luther had sort of wanted his punishment, and now that his debt to society had been paid, he took up life where he had left off, a simple, good natured black giant, without malice. Except that he knew he must kill Josh. When Josh beat up his girl friend and threw her out, Luther simply picked her up and carried her to the shack where he lived with Miss Lula, an ancient, wise black crone. As inevitably as he hated Josh, Luther fell in love with Josh's castoff mistress and married her.

And that would have been all right, except that nobody knew for sure whose baby the girl was carrying soon after, and that Josh, in a drunken fog, took a notion he wanted the girl back. How that led to the murder of Miss Lula and the unpleasant extermination of Josh, without implicating Luther, makes a powerful, dramatic novel of Negro life.

The word dramatic is used advisedly. Lonnie Coleman [now a lieutenant in the United States navy] wrote this book during his senior year at the University of Alabama, but it is mature, thoughtful, as free from sordidness and sensationalism, the easy way for the sewer gang, as it is from idealization and misplaced hero worship, the pitfall of the uplifters. These black people are endowed with an innate dignity, a human integrity which are as natural as their gift for laughter and their underlying sadness. Lonnie Coleman will do to watch.

Prize Novel Coming.

Winner of the first Lewis & Clark Northwest contest, "The Glittering Hill," by Clyde F. Murphy, will be published by Dutton in October.

First Story of Invasion Sets Record

"INVASION!" by Charles Christian Wertenbaker. [Appleton-Century, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Walter Simmons.

This is the first connected story of the European invasion to reach the book stores. The speed of its printing and distribution may have set a war time record—actually, the manuscript was not received by the publisher until Aug. 15.

Wertenbaker has subordinated the massiveness of the overall story to a kind of worm's-eye view of the A. E. F.'s first month in France. To any given soldier on those beaches it may have seemed that the operation was bungled and bloodily lost, but high overhead an observer could see slow progress according to plan. That was the way it went, and that is the difference viewpoint makes.

There are a lot of little stories in the wake of an army—the soldier who attacks a French girl and is promptly hanged for it; the Thunderbolt pilot who strafes his own ground troops; the children who greet their deliverers with the Nazi salute, which is all they know; the officer's gnawing fear that his plan may fail; the priest who tries vainly to save his church; the photographer's stupid assistant who spoils a set of epic pictures; the disemboweled horses and cows in the fields.

The author has woven many of these bright colored patches into his tapestry. The result, altho episodic and lacking a sustained narrative thread, is a frequently exciting and always interesting account of the greatest military operation of all time. There are 16 excellent pictures by Robert Capa.

on the Aisle
by Claudia Cassidy

WHAT would a column do without letters? Friendly letters, angry letters, richly informative letters from people who take the trouble to tell you things you couldn't possibly know without their help? This one would just shut up shop and pull down the curtains.

One fat brown envelope crammed with treasure reminded me, by sheer contrast, of Gertrude Lawrence. You know that lustrous lady whose contracts with producers leave them slightly less than the pictures on the wall? What do you suppose this shrewd bargainer would think of a one page memorandum, beautifully hand written, whereby J. H. Haverly engaged Jessie Bartlett to perform in his theater for a period of three weeks starting July 7, 1879, for the sum of $50 a week, plus traveling expenses, including hotel and railway fares?

Friendly, Angry and Informative Letters to a Columnist

But tho the Lawrence contracts are fabulous, I doubt they are romantic documents. Miss Bartlett's is a love story. It was written and signed for Haverly by one Davis [that would be Will J. Davis, who made her Jessie Bartlett Davis], and at the bottom the beloved contralto wrote, "I accept the above engagement and terms." She signed it Jessie F. [for Frizmont] Bartlett. I have it on loan from their son, the contemporary Will Davis, along with other mementos of the actress he calls "that adorable, never to be forgotten lady, my mother."

Jessie Bartlett.

His father's flowing script, says Mr. Davis, was taught him by a naval officer named Kirkendal, in Goshen, Ind. His mother came from Morris, Ill., where her father was a vocal teacher, and the family toured the state each year in a covered wagon. Mr. Davis sends a bill for Union hall, advertising the Bartlett sisters for Dec. 16, 1874. Even in those days Miss Jessie rated bigger type than Miss Belle. Their show held songs, an olio and a play called "Serious Family," with a curdled character known as Lady Sowerdy Creamly.

Best 'Pinafore' Yet.

There also is a Macauley's theater bill for Sept. 22, 1879, featuring Haverly's Chicago Church Choir company in "Pinafore," with Miss Bartlett as Little Buttercup, Mrs. Louis Falk as Josephine, and Mr. Falk as conductor. THE TRIBUNE'S reviewer called this amateur production the best "Pinafore" yet seen here, and went on to discuss the comic opera's insidious influence. Seems a minister asked a Sunday school class who comforted Job and was told "His sisters and his cousins and his aunts." Maybe this helped offset one of the biggest ads in the playbill, the one that offered succor in large type, thus "Just around the corner! Is the nearest SALOON to this theater."

Almost in the same delivery came a batch of newspaper clippings about the Columbia theater fire in 1900, from the Fred Daniels' collection. THE TRIBUNE illustrated the fire with handsome line drawings, that being before the days of photographers charging to the pictorial fray, and the next most important story was about the Boer war. Headlines told of the hot fight at Karee and speculated over the relief of Mafeking. Editorial comment on the fire began incontrovertibly, "If a theater must burn, then, by all means, it should burn in the day time and on some day when a matinee does not fill the house." The Columbia did just that, injuring only five people in a property loss of more than $200,000. Ellen Terry sent a message, "Am deeply sorry for the loss of my poor godchild. You remember I christened the Columbia."

Fascinating Story of Corona Riccardo.

Remember, too, the entrance of Corona Riccardo on our scrapbook scene? How Selma Walden Lincoln wrote asking the name of the lovely Juliet who played opposite Robert Mantell, and how Charles Willing of Philadelphia identified her? Perhaps you recall, too, that Mrs. Lincoln said Riccardo married an Indian and disappeared from the stage when very young. Well, a fascinating letter from George Dreher of Chicago goes on with the story.

He quotes from Lewis C. Strong's "Famous Actresses of the Day," published in Boston in 1899. Mantell played there in a piece the Boston drama critic considered too old fashioned to review, so he sent the office boy. That perspicacious lad returned in a dither over the leading woman, whereupon the critic sent his assistant, who said she was great. So he went to the next bill himself, and it happened to be "Romeo and Juliet." He "found himself intensely interested in one whose youth, beauty, and exquisite feminine charm stirred his very soul, the music of whose voice was like a soft, soothing melody in his ears, and whose gentle pathos and pitiful suffering greatly aroused his sympathy and moved him to a degree almost embarrassing."

She certainly knocked him off his perch, and she was Corona Riccardo. Mr. Dreher adds that he saw her in "Ben Hur" with William S. Hart as Messala, and sends along her photograph—dark and young and lovely—as proof. Then, he echoes Mrs. Lincoln, she dropped out of sight, leaving no trace. But this isn't all. "Many years after," he adds, "some actor who had worked in her supporting company and knew her intimately was playing a western town. Feeling the eyes of some one fairly hypnotizing him, he glanced down at the first row and there an Indian chief in full regalia sat beside his squaw, beaded and dressed in doeskins. He swore the squaw was the great actress herself." What dark music sounds in that strange tale, ominous, tantalizing overture to a curtain that never rises, a story never told.

One More Letter.

There is other scrapbook stuff galore, when we have time to wander thru it. Meanwhile, one more letter—"Dear Miss Cassidy: My family and I have read all of your musical accounts in the paper and think that you have been very discorteous to artists and conductors. I wonder if you have ever heard the saying which goes, 'If you can't say something nice about a person, don't say anything.' I think if you would say this over to yourself before you write something about some one it would result in a better article and would sound a lot more corteous to the public and especially to the person about whom you are writing. Sincerely, C. R. O." My friend, you may have something there, and it certainly would save paper. Suppose we try it for a couple of weeks—while I'm on vacation.

First Concert of Season Will Be October 12

By Albert Goldberg.

When Désiré Defauw gives the downbeat at the opening concert of the Chicago Symphony orchestra on Thursday, Oct. 12, 10 new faces will be peering over the music stands at the conductor. All will be new to Orchestra hall's stage, that is, tho six of the new members already have made their debuts with the organization during the Ravinia season. Their biographies reveal interesting facts.

Hans Bassermann, the new assistant concert master, was the son of musical parents, his mother having been a pupil of Clara Schumann, famous pianist wife of the composer. Brahms and Joachim were intimate friends of the family, and it was the latter, the greatest violinist of his day, whose recognition of young Bassermann's talent started him on a musical career. On Joachim's advice the boy was sent to the Berlin Hochsschule, where he studied with Henri Marteau, and at the age of 22 became concert master of the Berlin Philharmonic under Arthur Nikisch. Similar positions in Leipzig and Geneva followed, with solo appearances under Mengelberg, Furtwaengler, Weingartner, and other conductors. In 1937 Bassermann was engaged by Bronislaw Huberman as concert master of the Palestine Symphony orchestra for its tour under Arturo Toscanini's direction, and appeared as soloist with the orchestra in Egypt. Before coming to Chicago Mr. Bassermann was a member of the Pittsburgh Symphony orchestra.

The other new face in the first violin section will be Eugene Settani, a native of Camden, N. J., who studied with Emanuel Zetlin and Alexander Hilsberg. He has played first fiddle with the Philadelphia Opera company, the Pittsburgh and National Symphony orchestras, the New York City Center Symphony and Opera, and the Ballet Russe. Lately he has been in commercial radio work. New to the violas will be Charles Foidart, a graduate of the Royal Conservatory of Music of Brussels, who played under Mr. Defauw in the National Orchestra of Belgium for four years.

With Dudley Powers already moved to the first cello chair, left vacant by the resignation of Edmund Kurtz, Jenska Slebos joins the orchestra as his assistant. Miss Slebos is no stranger to Chicago concertgoers, having been first cellist of the Illinois Symphony orchestra for five of the six seasons of its brief existence, during which time she made many solo appearances with that group here and thruout the state. Tho Miss Slebos is a typical American girl in appearance and speech, she was born in Santpoort, the Netherlands, and did not come to America until she was 12. She also was first cellist of the Civic orchestra for two seasons, played with the Saidenberg Symphonietta and for the last two years has been a staff member of the National Broadcasting company and the Blue network. Her study has been with Lois Bichl and Daniel Saidenberg in Chicago, in addition to several summers with the late Emmanuel Feuermann.

Two new players of that trickiest of orchestral instruments, the French horn, will be on hand. Harry M. Jacobs was born in Chicago and graduated from Elgin High school. During a busy 27 years he has collected a bachelor of music degree from the Eastman School of Music and a master of music diploma from Northwestern university, besides playing with the New York Philharmonic, the NBC Symphony, the National Orchestral association, the San Diego and New Orleans Symphony orchestras, and the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo. His most recent engagement was two seasons with the Minneapolis Symphony.

Charles Jackson, the other new horn player, frequently has appeared with the Chicago Symphony as an extra man in works of Richard Strauss and other composers who wrote for more than the traditional four horns. He was born in the Russian city of Kronstadt, a member of an ancient Russian-Lithuanian noble family. For generations the men of the family had been naval officers and accordingly young Charles was sent to the Naval Cadet Corps in St. Petersburg at the age of 12. But his first hearing of a symphony orchestra settled his fate. He acquired a French horn, joined the Cadet Corps band, and shortly, on the advice of the conductor and composer, Napravnik, deserted a naval for a musical career. In 1919, following the Russian revolution, Jackson came to America and headed directly for Chicago. Frederick Stock accepted him for the Civic orchestra, and he later played with the Chicago Opera, was first horn of the Illinois Symphony for its entire history, and most recently has been a member of the Indianapolis Symphony.

The second flute chair, left vacant by the promotion of Harvey Noack to first position, goes to George Gunderson Soeller, whose career has been international in character. Born in Norway, his first professional engagement was with the Warsaw Philharmonic under Mylnarski. From there a checkered path led to Berlin [the Philharmonic under Nikisch and the Komische Oper], to Winnipeg, Canada, as teacher in the Royal Academy of Music, to New York [the Diaghileff Russian ballet under Ansermet, the New York Symphony under Damrosch, the Victor Herbert orchestra], to Cincinnati [the symphony under Ysaye and Reiner], and to Chicago [the Illinois Symphony].

The double basses will have two new recruits. Both are pupils of the veteran section leader, Vaclav Jiskra. James Vrhel is a Chicagoan who turned to his present instrument after a try at the trumpet. He has played with the Civic orchestra, the Berkshire Festival Symphony, the National Symphony of Washington, and the Indianapolis Symphony. Nathan A. Zimberoff was a cellist before sinking to the lower string depths. He was schooled in the Civic orchestra and played with the Detroit Symphony for six seasons. Also in the bass category is the new tuba player, Arnold Jacobs, who studied at the Curtis institute, and played with the Indianapolis Symphony for two seasons, the Pittsburgh Symphony for five, and toured with Stokowski's All-American Youth orchestra.

Post War Aid to Education to Be Based on Results

Committee of College Heads Makes Report

By The Rev. John Evans.

Post-war aid to education will be based on its estimated effectiveness in training youth for citizenship, according to the report of the National Association of State Universities recently made public by President Virgil M. Hancher of the University of Iowa, chairman of the special committee.

"Americans have had great faith in education" the committee states, "but recent criticisms have tended to weaken that faith. Growth of taxes and financial burdens in post-war years may call into question many of our established institutions depending upon public taxation for support."

Education therefore, the report asserts, had to be subjected to critical analysis, lest its province be invaded by less skilful persons, and an analysis made of college practices to determine the values and aims of the entire formal educational process. Five means of improving programs are cited in the report:—student guidance, employment of teachers qualified to handle courses in general education, critical study of instructional methods and ability of teacher in student motivation, remedial clinics and tutorial aids in self-directed study, and tests measuring potential achievement specially for men who have taken courses in army schools or in the Armed Forces Institute.

The committee defines the function of liberal education as that giving a sense of proportion and perspective enabling an individual to live and earn in a contemporary world without accepting it as either the best or worst in human affairs. As a consequence of this definition, the university leaders recommended that the objectives of graduate study be reconsidered.

As an instance, their report urged that a decision be reached on the Ph. D., whether it be a research or a teaching degree. At present, the report observes, it is a research award, altho it is estimated that 75 per cent of its recipients never do any research but use the Ph. D. as "a passport to teaching," a profession for which in reality "they are not equipped by previous training."

Associated with President Hancher were Chancellor C. S. Boucher, University of Nebraska; Chancellor Deane Malott, University of Kansas, and Dr. Malcolm W. Willey, University of Minnesota, who all agreed that objectives in technical, semi-professional and pre-professional education are "essentially utilitarian and reasonably clear."

Riverview in Midst of Gay Labor Day Week-End

Riverview Park, nearing the end of its 1944 season, is in the midst of a gala Labor day week-end. The two mile midway, as usual, is attracting the customary crowds, but a less publicized feature of the park—the picnic and recreation area—is getting a large family patronage this holiday.

Notes of the Theater

"Winged Victory," the most anticipated show of its kind since Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army," opens an engagement of five weeks at the Civic Opera House Monday night, Dec. 11. Written and directed by Moss Hart at the suggestion of Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commanding officer of the army air forces, "Winged Victory" played 237 performances on Broadway to more than 325,000 people, was filmed by 20th Century Fox for subsequent release, and will come to Chicago on a 26 week tour of 13 key cities. The production has music by Sgt. David Rose, who wrote "Holiday for Strings," and is presented in 17 scenes on five revolving stages. Altho Mr. Hart toured air bases for three months collecting material and uses a cast of 300 A. A. F. members, with a 50 piece orchestra and 50 voices in the chorus, he has managed to keep an unexpected intimacy in his show. Essentially the story of three boys determined to be flyers, it takes them from pre-induction days to the battle front. Leading roles are played by Edmond O'Brien, George Reeves, Barry Nelson, Ray McDonald, Mark Daniels, Don Taylor, and the Mauch twins. Whenever possible, the girls in the show have been chosen from wives of men in the cast. So far, "Winged Victory" has earned $1,047,000 for army charities.

Edmond O'Brien.

Ruth Gordon arrives at the Harris Monday night, Sept. 11, in "Over Twenty-One," the play she wrote for herself just to show the playwrights we can get along without them. Her piece is one that goes something like this: Suppose a Dorothy Parker type adored her husband [this isn't necessarily hypothetical] and rushed to officers' candidate school to help him graduate, against all the laws of probability, 271st in a class of 352. Make the man a newspaper editor who had thought his school days were past, add his eccentric millionaire publisher, a few assorted army males and their wives, and thrust in a domicile in a Florida auto court equipped with all the trick gadgets Miss Gordon and her director, George S. Kaufman, could devise. Ask Max Gordon to pay the producing bill, which he did, right down to Raymond Sovey setting and gowns by Mainbocher, and you have one of last season's hits in New York, which would like to be this season's pride in Chicago. Clinton Sundberg plays the badgered husband, Loring Smith the Frank Morganish publisher, Carroll Ashburn the brass hat.

The Chekhov argument, which came to a boil when Katharine Cornell revived "The Three Sisters," will flare up again Oct. 2 when Eva Le Gallienne and Joseph Schildkraut arrive at the Blackstone in "The Cherry Orchard," as first of the American Theater society's subscription bookings. This is the production directed by Miss Le Gallienne and Margaret Webster, and presented by Miss Webster and Carly Wharton. Irina Skariatina made the translation, and the play had a successful New York engagement last season. The subscription series also promises two Theater Guild productions, Miss Webster's "Othello," with Paul Robeson, and the Behrman comedy, "Jacobowsky and the Colonel," plus two additional plays not yet identified. Harriet Watt, subscription secretary, with offices at the Erlanger, says main floor seats are still available for the five plays. They cost $13.80 for evening performances, $10.80 for matinées. Each play has three weeks on subscription.

No Labor day matinée for "Oklahoma!" despite many requests. The Theater Guild thinks nine shows a week all it can ask of its troupe, which reaches its 380th performance at the Erlanger tomorrow night. Brief vacations have been arranged for several of the principals, and Dania Krupska, who dances Laurey in the dream ballet, will rest for another week while Gemze de Lappe, the enchanting youngster with the pigtails, takes her place. Patricia O'Byrne, meanwhile, is dancing the child's role.

Pauline Lord, one of the actresses most people admire and few people see, will appear in a mystery play with the malign title, "Sleep, My Pretty One." . . . If you crave to see "William Tell," it is being staged now at New Glarus, Wis., by the William Tell Community Guild. Today at 1:30 you can discover how it sounds in Swiss, tomorrow at the same hour it is played in English. . . . When "Over Twenty-One" is done in the movies, Irene Dunne will have the Ruth Gordon role. . . . The reason Stefan Schabel isn't with "The Cherry Orchard" is that he is overseas with OWI, broadcasting propaganda to Germany.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

VISITING in Chicago the other day, Rosemary York, editor of Bobbs-Merrill, related that Lt. Lloyd Wendt, now on leave of absence from THE TRIBUNE, is at work on his new novel and hopes to have it ready for publication next spring. . . . With Herman Kogan, Mr. Wendt was co-author of "Lords of the Levee," and he also has "Gunners Get Glory" to his credit, but this is the first time he has turned to fiction. . . . Mrs. York related that Marge Lyon, Tribune feature writer and author of "Green Grass Grows All Around," "Take to the Hills," and "And So to Bedlam," likewise has taken up fiction writing and hopes to have her first novel ready in a year or so.

"With five Chicagoans on our current list," the Bobbs-Merrill editor said, "it looks as if we're going to have a lot of readers around here this fall." . . . The five are Harold Ettlinger ["Fair Fantastic Paris"], Walter Hebert ["Fighting Joe Hooker"], Bernice Bryant ["Future Perfect"], Sam Campbell ["Too Much Salt and Pepper"], and Lt. William H. Fetridge ["Second Navy Reader."] . . . The autographing party season in the Marshall Field & Co. book section will begin Saturday afternoon of this week, when Rose Oller Harbaugh plays hostess to Kenneth Horan. . . . Mrs. Horan's latest novel, "A Bashful Woman," is to be issued by Doubleday, Doran on Friday. . . . Variety magazine announces that Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson, the famed comedians who got their start in Chicago, are doing a dual autobiography for Ziff-Davis. . . . As might be expected, the book will be called "From Gags to Riches."

Effective Oct. 1, Amos N. Wilder, brother of the novelist, Thornton Wilder, will be acting editor of the Journal of Religion, a quarterly published by the University of Chicago Press. . . . The appointment was announced last week by President Robert M. Hutchins. . . . Mr. Wilder came to Chicago last year as professor of New Testament interpretation in the university's divinity school. . . . "Flight to Everywhere," by Ivan Dmitri, will appear under the Whittlesey House imprint Nov. 3. . . . Mr. Dmitri recently returned from a 32,000 mile trip by air to ATC bases thruout the world. . . . His book contains 450 photographs, 150 of them in full color. . . . On Sept. 11 Whittlesey House will issue Stanley Walker's "Dewey: An American of this Century," with 16 pages of photographs centered around the Republican Presidential candidate.

• • •

Harry Maule, editor of Random House, writes this desk: "As you will recall, William McFee's 'Ship to Shore' was announced two years ago and then was postponed from season to season. The definite publication date, which should stick this time, is Sept. 6. We feel that the novel has been well worth the waiting, and hope you will agree." . . . Curtjce Hitchcock, president of Reynal & Hitchcock, writes: "In the next few days you will receive an advance copy of 'Combat Correspondent,' by Lt. # Critic Finds Grand Story in This One

"OASIS," by Willard Robertson. [Lippincott, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Arthur Frederic Otis.

In "Oasis" the author of "Moontide" and "South from Yesterday" has added to his stature as a storyteller. Whether you consider its 220 pages as a long short story or a short novel makes little difference. It is thoroly entertaining.

Willard Robertson.

Frazier is an ex-marine whose wounds have left him with a touch of tuberculosis. He is bitter when he establisnes himself at the Oasis, where an underground river comes briefly to the surface of the desert to form a tiny island of beauty. Within a year, however, that beauty has won him over, and with the help of Endicott, a grizzled old prospector, he has made a home for himself, reconciled to his enforced isolation.

When the sanitarium in the town of Thermo burns, Frazier takes pity on Walter Marmerson, whose wife, Edith, is almost at the point of death from consumption, and takes them to the Oasis. As Edith's condition improves under Frazier's care, Walter, out of funds, joins Endicott in a search for gold. He finds none, grows desperate over his lack of money, and runs away. When Endicott tells Frazier, they agree to report to Edith that Walter has become lost in the desert, as they are convinced that the truth would cause her death.

Edith gets much better. She and Frazier fall in love with each other. To get rid of the ghost of Walter, Frazier finally tells her that he ran away, but Edith refuses to believe it. The riddle of the story concerns the fate of Walter, suspense rising to a climax which provides a considerable thrill.

Three things about the story disturb me. Frazier is never given a first name. I do not believe that Galen Andrews, who tells the story, would have told it to a 17 year old chauffeur, who, in turn, tells it to the reader, all in direct quotes. And the author's insistence on spelling out the title "Mister" invariably results in an irritating interruption of thought. But the story's the thing, and it's a grand story.

THE JUNIOR BOOKSHELF

By Agatha L. Shea.

| TITLE. | SUBJECT. | VERDICT. |
|---|---|---|
| "LAND OF WILLIAM OF ORANGE," by Adriaan J. Barnouw. [Lippincott, $2.] | Clearly told story of Holland, its people, famous cities, and a brief summary of its history and culture. Barely mentions present situation. | Good reading for boy or girl interested in other lands and peoples. |
| "WEST POINT," by E. D. J. Waugh. [Macmillan, $2.50.] | Story of the United States' Military academy from its beginning to the present. Presents overview of the work done, explains requirements for admission, and discusses careers of some outstanding graduates. | Excellent and inspiring reading for any one, but particularly of interest to young readers of upper grades and high school. |
| "MYSTERY AT YOGO CREEK," by Grace and Olive Barnett. [Oxford, $2.] | Dick Cummings and his twin sisters take over the Montana ranch willed them by their uncle while business detains their mother in the east. Sudden disappearances and sinister happenings challenge their courage, but they do not give up. | Excitement and adventure make this vividly portrayed story of ranch life very good reading for mystery lovers. |

THE MURDER CHART

By Drexel Drake.

| ENTRY. | PERFORMANCE. | PAYOFF. |
|---|---|---|
| "THE AMETHYST SPECTACLES," by Frances Crane. [Random House, $2.] | Ray Thayer, engaged to Karen Chandler, returned from trip with another girl his bride. Later, he was dropped into canyon with his skull bashed. Karen's spectacles found in his car. More lives snuffed out while Pat and Jean Abbott untangle puzzle. | Intricate relationships obscure murder motive and scatter suspicion. Story proceeds thru colloquial narrative and added homicides to surprise climax, sustaining moderate suspense. |
| "TOO BUSY TO DIE," by H. W. Roden. [Morrow, $2.] | Johnny Knight and Sid Ames unscramble involved history of mob of jewel thieves, when Hal Rodkins, after calling mysteriously at Johnny's office and leaving package of unset diamonds, gets his throat slashed in hotel room. | This is done in mild form of hard boiled style. Melange of action and excitement, constantly interrupted by assorted females who arouse monotonous comment. Tiresome narrative and dull humor compete with story's bid for undivided interest. |
| "THE SPY IN THE ROOM," by Denison Clift. [Mystery House, $2.] | Nazi cunning planted an agent in the code deciphering room of the British admiralty. When the spy struck with murder, Scotland Yard countered with tactics that outsmarted Nazi trickery and saved one of England's most potent measures of defense. | Ingeniously plotted spy thriller that gets going with remarkable simulation of factual recording. Story turns fanciful in spots, but high-speed action and war color hold interest to surprise climax. |
| "CLUES TO CHRISTABEL," by Mary Fitt. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.] | A year after Christabel Strange, prominent novelist, died, her diary, zealously guarded by her grandmother, became object of contention that led to murder. That opened the door to puzzle of Christabel's lonely life and untimely death. | Murder and mystery are curiously subdued undertones in this drama of lives interlocked by misunderstanding, suppressed emotion, and devotion. Story, excellently written, follows unique pattern. |
| "ON THE DANGER LINE," by Georges Simenon. [Harcourt, Brace, $2.] | Two crime novels translated from French: "Home Town" and "The Green Thermos." Both follow futile thinking of criminal addicts thru underworld byways to inevitable tragedy. The first is startling tale of deep-rooted waywardness carried thru life. The second is an intense clash of destructive wills. | Stories are written with Simenon's established excellence in drawing criminal characters, revealing their warped psychology, painting their squalid haunts, and underscoring the futility of their misdirected energy. |

Willie Carter Was a Rugged Character

"WATCH OUT FOR WILLIE CARTER," by Theodore Naidish. [Scribner's, $2.50.]

Willie Carter is a rugged, one tracked pug who calls his beautiful cafe singer wife, Kiddie, and rather sullenly goes about bashing people's faces in—professionally or for pleasure—in order to hold her love. Watch out for Willie Carter. He may bore you to death.

WILL DAVIDSON.

Faith Made a Practical Life Force

"A FAITH TO FREE THE PEOPLE," by Cedric Belfrage. [Dryden, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Will Davidson.

When Claude Williams came out of the cotton patches of Tennessee to preach the gospel he had only a faint idea of what Christianity really meant. But that faint idea was a persistent one and the more he studied and read, and the more he saw of the desperate and very un-Christian plight of the sharecroppers, both black and white, the more he wanted to make of his religion a practical, every day guide for the lives of men. At first he found support in his church—the Presbyterian. But as his church work assumed more and more of the sociological tinge he began to run up against the stiff opposition of the anti-unionists and the white-supremicists.

Williams even found bitter opposition in the very camp he expected to be friendly—the labor unions. The labor hierarchy showed its true colors when it opposed his reforms and his simplest requests for the benefit of the laborers. But he persisted and eventually was appointed industrial chaplain of the Presbyterian church in Detroit.

This book is both a biography and a polemic. In both phases it is stirring, invigorating, tho provoking Williams may have been something of an extremist as a churchman, but he was fighting a situation that cried for the most extreme and immediate action. A general transfusion of Williams' fighting blood would not harm the body of the Christian church at all. It would be full of vitamins.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By D. A.

DOROTHY PARKER'S acid mot about the lazy writer who likes to spend a quiet evening at home and "raid a good book" suggests an inquiry as to how much of that sort of thing is going on. The answer is: plenty.

Booksellers report a lively market for all sorts of reference books from which ideas can be "borrowed," especially anthologies and collections of proverbs, the "Pensées" of Pascal, the "Maximes" of La Rochefoucauld, "gems" culled from the works of Benjamin Franklin, Voltaire, Mark Twain, even the half forgotten Artemus Ward, and the not yet forgotten Will Rogers.

The trick, when performed by the experts, is to use the old as a springboard, as a catalytic agent to stir the brain so it will produce something that looks new and fresh, dressed in modern garments, applied to a new situation. A pithy epigram written centuries ago turns into a snappy bit of verse done in the language of day before yesterday or day after tomorrow. Or a proverb may be turned upside down so it states the opposite of what it originally said, and the new version is accepted as a "brilliancy." Many a paradox, like those for wnich Gilbert Chesterton and Bernard Shaw became famous, was born that way.

Such not-quite-plagiarisms are as old as literature. Kipling says even Homer, before producing his own epics, had listened to more ancient tales, "an' what he thought 'e might require, e' went an' took—the same as me!"

"Every man," said Emerson, "is a borrower and literature is a quotation." And when Aelius Donatus, about the middle of the fourth century, wrote in witty Latin, "Pereant qui ante nos nostra dixerent," [Perish those who said our good things before us], he was only adding a snapper to line pulled by Terence, who had been dead for five centuries, which suggests that Donatus might have shortened his own mot to "Perish Terence."

• • •

James Russell Lowell defended the right of every author to inherit the wit and wisdom of the past, especially when the newcomer improved on the original. Said Lowell:

"'Tis his at last who says it best."

Even the scrupulous Robert Louis Stevenson has confessed that when he was teaching himself to write he "played the sedulous ape" to Hazlitt, Lamb, Wordsworth, and half a dozen others.

• • •

In Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy" a harsher judgment of such writers is expressed. "They lard their lean books," he says, "with the fat of others' works." And yet Burton himself, whose writings are now a rich mine for borrowers, can be proved a debtor occasionally to brains that antedated his.

There is a story of a modern magazine editor who, frankly encouraging his writers to fatten on the treasure of the past, described them as "cows sent out to pasture and called home for milking," which may have inspired the following sonnet, attributed [erroneously we feel sure] to Halifax Gadley II.

• • •

Les Vaches Heureuses.

How soft the literary life they lead,
These pampered bovines, browsing on a hill
Of ripened poetry and prose. They feed
On mellow libraries and take their fill
Of predigested meditation, then,
When afternoon brings weariness, return
To ruminate the work of better men
And fatten on rewards they never earn.
Thru all the sunny day this dairy herd
May idly graze; but when night shadows fall,
The Editor, who has the final word,
Shall drive them, ruthless, to the stall.
The milking hour has come! They'd better give;
For that's the price of living as they live.

In all this, we think, there is little for the moralist to fret about. Even Dorothy Parker, whose needle is so sharp, was not the first [tho perhaps the best] to make a pun on "raid" and "read." For we remember a Methodist bishop some four decades ago describing the occupation of a literary friend as "raidin' an' writin'."

And we are frank to avow that for almost all the quotations used in this column today we are in debt not to a month of reading in the public library but to an hour with the "Home Book of Quotations."

If that be "raidin'," make the most of it.

A new novel by the author of AND SO--VICTORIA

Vaughan Wilkins

Strong, bold characters—some of them personages from history—throng the pages of this immensely colorful, exciting novel. The adventures of Anthony Purvis, born in Virginia in 1781, take him to France, to England and Wales and even to St. Helena. He and the fascinating and elusive Garland Vane, whom he loves, play strange, dangerous roles in the Napoleonic Wars. Being Met Together carries the reader irresistibly back into those romantic, swashbuckling, violent times—not, oddly enough, so very different from our own.

American Girl Tells Her Life in Adopted Land

"WE STOOD ALONE," by Dorothy Adams. [Longmans, $3.]

Reviewed by Edith Weigle.

This is the story of an American girl's life in Poland, first as a visitor in 1925, and then as the wife of the Polish intellectual, economist, diplomat, and teacher, Jan Kostanecki, son of the rector of Cracow university.

When Dorothy Adams was a bride she believed she never really would become a citizen of her adopted land, but as she grew to know it better, to understand its history, to admire its democratic system of government, and to respect and love the members of her husband's family and their friends she was gradually transplanted, so that when war came she hated to leave, even to return to America.

The author gives many charming word pictures of her days in Cracow and her 10 years in Warsaw, of her happy life with her brilliant husband which ended tragically in his death in an airplane crash in 1937.

Especially interesting is her explanation of the Polish attitude toward Germany before the war, one of grim realism as Hitler's power widened, but one also of fatalism, remembering the wars of the past and the sufferings of many generations, and one that held to the wistful hope that "surely in the end abstract justice will prevail!"

"Poles knew they would have to die if Poland were to live. . . . Surely her dauntlessness in the face of death will show the world what Poland is."

Interesting Contrasts in Blackstone, Drake Stars

Brisson and Farrell Offer Varied Styles

By Will Davidson.

The Drake-Blackstone set is witnessing an interesting contrast in male singing styles these evenings, what with Bouncing Carl Brisson, the Dandy Dane, at the Mayfair room, and Skip Farrell, the Singing Milkman, in Camellia House.

M. Brisson has no especial voice; Skip does. M. Brisson is a living and lively production number; Skip is in the Bing Crosby school of "sing it—don't swing it." M. Brisson gallops all over the Mayfair room, corralling the guests into his p. a. system performance; Skip stands quietly, almost quizzically, letting his effective voice, his easy timing do the work.

When I say Carl Brisson has no especial voice, I don't mean he doesn't entertain. His is a continental style that has tremendous appeal to the Mayfair room type of patronage, and the artificial buildup he gives every number is tailor made for their taste. Proof of Carl's drawing power is visual, and a matter of record. He is packing the room, and he's booked solidly for the next year—a phenomenal record for a man who came back only a few seasons ago after a period of quiescence that followed a tremendously successful European career.

There is a native charm in the Danish numbers Carl sings that is infectious, and when he finds a fellow Dane to do an impromptu chorus the result is informal entertainment at its best. I could do without a lot of the Brisson caperings and with more straight singing, but I am a definite minority, and they pay off on the cash customers. The very personable M. Brisson is a very smart gent.

Returning to Skip Farrell, I merely want to say that he's a thoroly delightful singer. His radio and stage work have given him a poised confidence that is refreshing, and the easy manner in which he sings is a relief after the hyperdramatic styles adhered to by a good many Camellia House singers. Skip selects his numbers well, too, and never strains for an effect that is beyond the reach either of his voice or his personality.

I hope that his two-week stint at the Drake will warrant a quick return engagement, or at least another cafe assignment soon. Skip will be followed Friday by Noble and King, a piano-singing team.

Carl Ravazza has unearthed a wonderfully silly satirical ballad called "Saloon, Saloon, Saloon," and is featuring it in the new show at the Blackhawk restaurant. Written in typically nostalgic style, beautifully worded, and, of course, beautifully sung, it is completely appropriate for Carl's show. He also does the familiar "Renaldo" number, and can't beg off before doing some of his serious songs—the ones that have established him as a peer of all name singers.

Carl continues to play the brand of music that Blackhawk patrons want. So much so that his engagement there is being extended, I understand, more or less indefinitely. That is all to the good.

The new show, about which I can comment only from past experience, since it took place directly behind my back, is well designed for this room. Maurice and Maryea are outstanding favorites at the Blackhawk. Their romantic style is sufficient unto itself, and they wisely avoid the excessive affectations that spoil so many of the mine run dance teams.

Gaynor and Ross, who spent their entire time grazing the back of my neck, are to my mind the most exciting roller skating team in the cafe field. Their acrobatics really warrant the use of that hackneyed word "breath-taking." They are a top flash act.

From the "Recently Arrived" and "Coming Events" files: A unique family feud will be the basis of two top night club shows, come Tuesday, when Buddy Lester opens at the Chez Paree while older brother Jerry is still jesting at the Rio Cabana. Buddy is the kid brother who emulates the old song, "I Plays the Banjo Better Now Than Him Who Taught Me How." Only Buddy does it with gags. Jerry's gags. They tell the story that recently in New York some one saw Jerry and asked, "What's Buddy doing now?" "Me," answered Jerry.

With Buddy will be the incomparable Barrys, whose dances were the rage of a not so distant show at the Chez. The comic Wesson brothers, who do hysterical impersonations, and Susan Miller, the singing beauty who has been so popular in the past at the Drake hotel, round out the revue.

The Latin Quarter last Friday unveiled the Ted Lewis designed show that has the task of following Ted's own musical masterpiece of the previous eight weeks. It features Connee Boswell, Dave Apollon and company; Son and Sonny, outstanding dancers; Marilyn Hale, tap dancer; a line of girls, and Bill Bardo's band, featuring the songs of Vicki Hart and George Komaroff. Mme. Natalie Kamarova, choreographer, is directing the ensembles.

The current show—and the last one on the Beach walk—at the Edgewater Beach hotel stars Manuel Viera, Latin American entertainer; Rolly and Verna Pickert, the stilt dancers; Harold Douglas, singing emcee, and the lovely Dorothy Hild dancers in a variety of routines including a black and white fantasy, a modern jitterbug number, a Scotch turn and a Chinese spectacle.

The Hotel Sherman has done a quick swtich on us, and will bring Les Brown's band in Friday instead of Gene Krupa. Krupa will come in on Oct. 6 for two months. With Brown will be the Douglas brothers, a tap team.

Also on Friday will be the debut of Tommy Dowd, comedian and magician, in the Pan American cafe of the Hotel La Salle. Winnie Hoveler's dancers continue with their drum and baton routine, and will introduce two new numbers, a cowgirl stint and a roller skating act. Donny Kaye's band carries on. Gloria Van, the beautiful singer, has departed to fulfill other commitments.

Boswelling the Bistros:

A date to remember is Sept. 22. The Hartmans, top comedy dance team of the world, return to the Mayfair room that night. . . . Benny Strong's new vocalist is Trudy Marsh . . . and speaking of new vocalists, Lorraine Cain is becoming the talk of the town since her recent appearance as the singer with Henri Gendron's band in the Park Row room of the Stevens.

I certainly wish I had been there to see Victor Borge conducting George Hamilton's band and emceeing the Empire room show, during Spike's illness. The lad is versatile. . . . At this writing the latest word from Al Fuller, Palmer House advertising and publicity director and one of the swell gents of the town, is a vast relief. He's pulling out of a too serious illness.

With the carpenters blasting out an exit in the near-by wall I am forcibly reminded of that very attractive girl singer of several years ago, named Locke. She was something to adore.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(AP).—Paulette Goddard has some pretty nice things on her own dressing table, but she was almost overawed when she took a look at the cosmetics set her studio rented for her in "Kitty." The 15 pieces are of jade and gold, and have been insured, the studio said, at $25,000. The set was borrowed from a local cosmetics firm.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

BEDSIDE books, a popular subject with list makers, ranking perhaps right after the more dramatic [and frequently less honest] desert island selection, are pleasantly discussed by G. B. Stern in her delightful new volume of meditations, "Trumpet Voluntary" [Macmillan], which is recommended by this department. She names the books that are supremely hers—"literally my bedside books, places of escape which are a mixture of masterpiece and funny zigzagging personal choice"—and here they are, a nostalgic muster:

"Vanity Fair," "David Copperfield," all Jane Austen; H. G. Wells' "Kipps" and "Mr. Polly," Maugham's "Of Human Bondage," a volume of "Elizabethan Prefaces and Dedications," Bennett's "Old Wives' Tale," all of Kenneth Grahame, Kipling's "Puck of Pook's Hill" and "Rewards and Fairies," Grossmith's "Diary of a Nobody," "Heartbreak House," both Alices, Sarah Orne Jewett's "Country of the Pointed Firs," Stevenson's "Letters," the poems of Edna St. Vincent Millay, Rebecca West's "Strange Necessity," Sheila Kaye-Smith's "The Children's Summer," Dorothy Parker's collected short stories, all the Lucia books, all the Whiteoaks books, and "Little Women" and "Good Wives," by Louisa M. Alcott.

Bragging Book Lists.

I like this list as well as any I have seen, and better than most. There is a frankness about it that is attractive and reassuring. Somehow one distrusts a list of any kind that begins pompously with Homer and Plato; even when the confessor is obviously telling the truth, one feels that he is bragging. Almost anybody could take over Miss Stern's list in toto and spend a happy holiday in bed with it.

It was Chaucer, no doubt, who began this business of making a small selection of books for reading in bed. Of his "Clerk of Oxenford," he says:

"For hym was lever have at his beddes heed
Twenty bokes clad in blak or reed. . . ."

And he opens the clerk's list with "Aristotle and his philosophye," from which it may be inferred that, unlike Miss Stern, he was making a list for other people. Let us not be too cynical about this young Canterbury pilgrim, however. He had never heard of "Alice in Wonderland" or Dorothy Parker, and he read in "bedde" not so much because he was luxuriously inclined as because his room was cold. Many a poor student in the Oxford of Chaucer's day took an entire reading course in bed, I suppose—during the winter anyway—simply to save firewood.

Difficult Reading.

It would be interesting to know the other 19 books that made up this youth's collection. Not many students of that time could boast so large a library; the average poor scholar had to stand in the college library by the hour and read in the iron-bound volumes chained to the high desks.

There is more warmth in the stories told of the French brothers, Goncourt, Edmond, and Jules, who took to their beds when vexed by anything which awakened their sense of a cosmical grievance, in the words of E. B. Osborn, "and stayed there until the cosmos had readjusted itself." An unfavorable criticism, their inability to find a mot juste, the loss of a sweetheart—any grain of sand in the mechanism of life—drove them to coverlet with an armful of favorite books, and there they stayed until again all was right with the world.

Reading in bed is a habit more prevalent in England, I think, than in our own country. Perhaps this is because central heating is less common, perhaps it is a tradition handed down by the Clerk of Oxenford, or perhaps I am wrong about the whole matter. The bedside lists in my collection of such matters, however, are largely English, and readers of detective literature are aware of that classic situation in all English country house murders, whereby an innocent person falls under suspicion. . . .

Q. How does it happen that you were not in your room when the scream sounded?

A. I had gone downstairs to get a book.

Your commentator, altho a devoted reader of lists and books for reading in bed, has never yielded to the temptation to compile one. In general, he finds it difficult to read in bed. Sleep keeps breaking in.

Auspicious Beginning.

A sort of malignance, thinks Arville Nonweiler, seems to pursue her first public utterance, the clever and literate detective novel, "Murder on the Pike," recently published by Phoenix. After she had written it, in its first form, a maid sold the only copy to a junk man [along with several pounds of magazines and newspapers] for 90 cents. She rewrote it from memory when she got tired of being ribbed by her friends about her choice of publisher. In retrospect, she feels a certain affection for the junkman—by comparison—for her ultimate publishers made her cut the book, then themselves rewrote her final paragraph and changed the title, which was originally "Murder Begins at Home." On top of all this, when THE TRIBUNE'S Drexel Drake gave her a good notice in his Murder Chart, somehow the paragraphs were juggled and another mystery got the notice intended for her book.

An outrageous series of misadventures that augurs well for this midwest writer's future. It was a maid's carelessness that forced Carlyle to rewrite his "French Revolution," and every good writer who ever wrote has had, at one time and another, a low opinion of his publisher's intelligence. It was Byron, wasn't it, who so extravagantly admired Napoleon because he had once shot a publisher? As for newspapers and reviewers, when I think of what I have myself suffered at the hands of these, I smoke with fury. All of which is as it should be. Authors and publishers were not intended to get along together any better than, say, husbands and wives. They are mutually supplementary antagonisms, like male and female, age and youth, life and death, love and hate, which—I borrow the idea from James Joyce—by their attraction, conflicts, and repulsions help to supply the polar energies that spin the universe.

Retorting to my supposition that most writers have been addicted to tobacco, Prof. James Taft Hatfield points out that one of the greatest of them, Goethe, was positively allergic to the stuff. "Tobacco, garlic, and lice," he once said, were "as distasteful [to him] as snakes and poison." His friend Schiller, the professor agrees, was a pipe smoker of considerable stature.

Polite Japs Fooled West, Writer Says

"GENTLEMEN OF JAPAN: A Study in Rapist Diplomacy," by Violet Sweet Haven. [Ziff-Davis, $3.]

Reviewed by Philo M. Buck Jr.

Violet Sweet Haven.

After a dozen or more books like this one, all of them reports by trained observers of Japanese activities in the far east, one wonders why for so many years the western conscience carried its guilt so light heartedly. And why was the menace so carelessly ignored? Miss Haven is one more journalist turning into a book her researches and private experiences in the far east. She corroborates other observers when she says that of all the western powers only the Dutch had the acumen and will to sense the danger and set their house in order. It is a long, black story. Why was the west so little alert to its purport? The title of this book partly answers the question. Japanese "gentlemen," the unsurpassed courtesy of Japan.

Certainly the blackness of their inhuman record is unsurpassed in history in the story of opium. This is the best chapter in the book. Not that the west was not told, time and again, of the illicit trade in narcotics that Japan was forcing upon China. A new manner of waging war—to debauch a people, destroy their virility, and then explain to the world that she was intervening in order to preserve civilization.

It was well known that one single ring of government sponsored agents made 60 million dollars in a year in north China. When the Chinese government tried to protest, it was threatened and silenced.

Why did the conscience of the west bear its guilt so light heartedly? Again, in part perhaps, the same answer—"Gentlemen of Japan." Japanese courtesy is so exquisite, and the Japanese tea ceremony a thing unsurpassed in beauty.

These books do repeat themselves. They may seem to waste necessary paper. But do they? Do we not need to be bludgeoned into knowing that a courteous enemy armed with tea ceremonies and miniature gardens may again cause us to forget and lower our guard?

Bibulous Scots Engineer Makes Debut in Novel

"MR. GLENCANNON IGNORES THE WAR," by Guy Gilpatric. [Dutton, $2.]

Carrying a full cargo, as usual, of Duggan's Dew of Kirkintilloch, the bibulous Mr. Glencannon staggers thru the pages of Guy Gilpatric's newest chronicle of the Scotch engineer's alcoholic adventures. The title is ironic—Colin's carefree nose-thumbing at hostilities seems only to involve him more deeply in everything warlike except getting shot, tho, as Glencannon's admirers already know, he always is half of that.

Singapore [thinly disguised as "Pandalang"], a mysterious south sea island, and, of course, the rusty old S. S. Inchcliffe Castle, are the colorful backgrounds to this hiccoughy, hilarious sea tale.

We believe this is the first time Glencannon has ventured out of the short story into a full length adventure novel. It should be entirely satisfactory to his readers.

New Brogan Book.

Publication of D. W. Brogan's "The American Character" [Knopf] has been postponed to Oct. 23 because of its selection as a dual selection of the Book of the Month club.

Nevil Shute, whose new novel, "Pastoral," is reviewed in this issue by Fanny Butcher.

This Might Be Another "Hyman Kaplan" Success

"WE RIDE A WHITE DONKEY," by George Panetta. [Harcourt, Brace, $2.]

Reviewed by Edw. Wagenknecht.

This one goes under the heading of American racial humor.

George Panetta.

It may be that Harcourt has got hold of another "Education of Hyman Kaplan." But you must put the Italians in the place of the Jews, and add a mild flavoring of bawdry. The sketches evidently have considerable autobiographical basis.

The title comes from a Calabrese proverb, "Mottono supra un ciuccio bianco," which means that if you talk about people you put them on a white donkey, in other words make them conspicuous.

Once Papa had a big dress factory, but when the depression came, he permitted Uncle Louie to burn it down for the insurance money. Then he sat down to wait for the check, while mother ran up bills everywhere. Neither Papa nor Uncle Louie ever bothered much about the small detail that no policy had ever been written on the place.

Papa has never done anything since. Up until 1931 he was waiting for friends and relatives to "pay up"; you could hardly expect him to work with all that on his mind. After 1931 he was learning to write his name, "because he didn't want to take chances with the relief checks the way he did with the factory." And then he got diabetes, which he treats very simply, with eight spoons of sugar in a cup of coffee. Since the book is dedicated to him, this treatment evidently works.

The sketches are written with studied, barbed casualness. "We Ride a White Donkey" sheds new sidelights on what B. L. T. used to describe as "the so-called human race."

Great Sea Stories Make Notable Book

"WORLD'S GREAT TALES OF THE SEA," edited by William McFee. [World-Forum, $1.]

William McFee, himself one of the great writers of the sea, has selected some of the outstanding blue water short stories by such well known writers as Masefield, Tomlinson, Kipling, Morgan Robertson, Stephen Crane, Poe, Jack London, and others. In addition there are three complete short novels by Conrad, Melville, and Conrad. A notable book for the sea shelf.

Mother's Gay Life Sobers Her Children

"MOTHER WENT MAD ON MONDAY," by Ethel Hueston. [Bobbs-Merrill, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan.

As a matter of fact, mother went sane on Monday. She was so tired of father's growling about taxes and reforms, and of the children's wildness, — coming in at all hours till their parents were insane with worry, — that she decided to be a cause for anxiety from then on. And, altho it took courage to step out of character, it wasn't such a bad idea, because the rest of the family proceeded to reform in more ways than one.

Ethel Hueston.

With mother no longer at the helm, but a gay girl stepping around with new clothes and dyed hair and a lot of extraordinary ideas, there had to be something in life to cling to. The Gillespies all went to church in their anxiety, and once they'd exposed themselves to some spiritual truth, became new people. However, before the minister realized that he must cease preaching glittering generalities and tell his congregation how life should be lived.

The center of this story is the girl who tells it, Cherry Gillespie, a charming, pretty, light headed creature who becomes sensible under the adversity of mother's leaving. And it is Cherry's story that forms the romantic background of this parable of what every woman knows—but few women have the courage to accept—that too much mothering is bound to spoil the broth.

Handsome young service men flit in and out of the picture, but the really startling thing about this story is the ingenuity of mother in her determination to make a glamor girl out of a housewife.

Army Life Novel Is Loaded with Too Much Detail

"I GOT A COUNTRY," by Gilbert W. Gabriel. [Doubleday, Doran, $3.]

When an artist paints a picture on a huge canvas, he risks having the unity of his composition lost in a multitude of details. It is perhaps not Mr. Gabriel's fault that his skill with details tempts him to clutter up his story, but it is hard on the reader who is trying to follow the main channel of his narrative.

Gilbert W. Gabriel.

The main drift of this story is carried by three soldiers in Alaska who are thrown much together but have nothing in common except that they are in uniform. Their doings and the doings of a lot of other people, in and out of the service, are told at such length that a kaleidoscopic effect is produced—just as the reader thinks he sees a pattern, it changes to another and then to another.

The title of the story is supposed to represent the mental transformation that many service men undergo—out of an apathy or distaste for military service comes the realization that they are a part of a high emprise—that they've "got a country." The story is too diffuse, however, to be adequate as a psychological study, and its principal interest lies in its sharpness and wealth of detail.

KENNETH HORAN REVIEWS "MOTHER WENT MAD ON MONDAY," BY ETHEL HUESTON

"BEING MET TOGETHER" AN EXCITING BOOK

If You Like Romance, This One's a Thrilling Specimen

"BEING MET TOGETHER," by Vaughan Wilkins. [Macmillan, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle.

This book shoots, as contemporary idiom so pleasantly phrases it, the works. The works of the historical romance. It shoots them right into the lives of Napoleon Buonaparte, of Robert Fulton the American ship designer, of a hard old woman [have you read such a book without such a one?], of young men of courage and legs, in a time when it was the male leg which was exposed and admired, and of what the author's prose would have called a host of fair young things. The hero might almost have been called by another name, relative to his paternity, had not his mother married a dead man [I mean that the man was dead during the ceremony—and after, as far as that goes], not his real father.

After this merry beginning the story really gets going and swings from Virginia across the ocean to France. Here intrigue comes wearing the guise of duty and beautiful woman comes wearing very little at all. Traitors are exposed for what they are and breasts are exposed for what they are. Take your choice.

There is some good, breezy incident here. The complications of the plot scurry about with considerable spryness, considering their age. A British officer in Virginia in 1781 takes a handful of ancestral diamonds from a necklace on a table in the house where he is spending the night, leaving an I. O. U. stuffed in an open door of a miniature village of Camelot on the table. He, of course, is the English officer brought before Buonaparte in the same room in which sits the Virginia woman, who knows he stole the diamonds to buy an advanced commission. Not manipulated coincidence but historical reality, sir!

The young American, Anthony Purvis, reveals his thoughts thus, after meeting a young woman: "He had met the most wonderful, adorable, slim, tall, fairy lady; the princess of his dreams, of whom to think in the terms of kissing was sacrilege." Was it? I wonder if that sentence isn't an outrage on a healthy American youth, as well as on the English language. It must also be chronicled that on one page occurs the proudly trite phrase "the unending tapestry of his dreams" and that only six pages later it has become "the fabric of his dreams."

As historical romances go [and do they go!] this is good. There is excitement. There is better writing than what I have quoted. But if you are going to buy a novel, you'll get more solid nourishment in some good, crisp, contemporary writing, such as Harry Brown's "A Walk in the Sun," or Hersey's "A Bell for Adano." Unless you like billows of bosoms rising out of a foam of satin like a school of mackerel with shark after them.

A Guide to Rifles and Machine Guns

"RIFLES AND MACHINE GUNS," by M. M. Johnson Jr. [Morrow, $5.]

Capt. Johnson [U. S. M. C. R.], author in collaboration with Charles T. Haven of two recent authoritative works, "Automatic Arms" and "Ammunition," brings out alone this newest volume, a modern handbook of infantry and aircraft arms. It is a practical guide to all the important modern military small arms, from pistols and rifles to the 20 millimeter automatic cannon. More than 60 specific weapons are analyzed and discussed in detail in the book, which contains considerable data not found in any previous works of this nature.

Washington Panorama.

"There's No Place Like Washington," described as a behind the scenes panorama, is scheduled for November publication by Putnam. The author is Vera Bloom, daughter of Rep. Sol Bloom.

Life History of a Famous Rebel Raider

"RANGER MOSBY," by Virgil Carrington Jones. [University of North Carolina Press, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Avery Craven.

"When any of Mosby's men are caught, hang them without trial." This was Gen. Grant's order in 1864. "Since the close of the war, I have come to know Col. Mosby personally and somewhat intimately. He is a different man entirely from what I had supposed. . . . He is able and thoroly honest and truthful." These were ex-President Grant's words in 1885.

Taken together these two statements reveal something of the bitterness which produced the American Civil war and the generosity which made reunion possible. They also suggest the reasons for a scholarly study of Mosby, who with Stuart and Forrest and Morgan, laid the foundations for the modern commando and his place in mobile warfare.

John Singleton Mosby and his Rangers were a part of Lee's Army of Northern Virginia. They were well mounted and operated largely thru and behind the Union lines for the purpose of securing information, plundering supplies, and harrassing northern picket lines. Their effectiveness even more than their irregular methods of operation struck terror to opponents and produced much of the barberous retaliation for which Custer and Sheridan were later so much hated in the south. They would sweep down upon a railroad train or creep silently upon an unsuspecting outpost or even pull an officer out of his bed at points supposedly far inside the zone of safety. They became the eyes of an army and often the entering wedge for a successful drive. They introduced an unorthodox element into warfare, but one which proved to be a vital contribution for future times.

When the war was over Mosby proved himself the true soldier and not the brigand he had been pictured, by working for coöperation between the sections. He even supported Grant for the Presidency on grounds of national benefit.

Virgil Jones has written a balanced but rather tedious account of Mosby's career. There is too much detail for the average reader. There is, however, good understanding of the man and of the significance of the methods of war he helped to introduce.

No Ghost Writer.

Lt. Tom Harmon had no ghost writer to assist him in writing his book, "Pilots Also Pray," insist his publishers, the Thomas Y. Crowell company. The book is scheduled for late October publication.

Sketch by Ben Cohen of Vaughan Wilkins, author of "Being Met Together," reviewed today by Paul Engle.

"So Long, Son" Is Comfort to Parents Bereft by War

"SO LONG, SON," by Howard Vincent O'Brien. [Putnam, 75 cents.]

Reviewed by Marcia Winn.

This little book, a father writing to his son, is as thin as a missal. It is a missal. It is tender and devout and full of that strong intangible we call spiritual grace.

It would be both true and brutal to say of "So Long, Son" that it is one of the best things to come out of this war, but how can one say that of heartache shared? And it must have been doubly hard for Mr. O'Brien that the son of whom he wrote after he was reported missing over Germany on his 23d birthday last February should be reported dead on Aug. 25, the day the book was published.

Parts of its 31 pages appeared in Mr. O'Brien's newspaper column during the last seven months. Those parts became engraved in the memory of his readers for their questioning, groping search for an explanation of it all and for their acceptance.

Howard Vincent O'Brien.

"When you become convinced that the flow of life can be halted," wrote this father of a missing boy, "you expose yourself to fear and despair. You try frantically to nail life down, to keep it fixed. . . . But you can no more nail life down than you can nail down a gobbet of quicksilver. . . . Paper crumbles, iron rusts, wood rots, stone disintegrates. The animal begins to die the instant it is born. . . . I am saying only that nothing is sure—and that serenity of soul is possible only to those who recognize the fact.

"What I am trying so awkwardly to say was said many centuries ago, briefly and sharply: 'The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord.' . . . The challenge of 'Thy will be done' must somehow be met."

It might have been a litany from the Book of Common Prayer. It was a litany from a book of common prayer.

There is very little to say about a book such as this except: read it. To all those millions who have a son or father or brother in the war, to all those who have lost one in the war, and especially to those victims of cruel uncertainty whose boys still are missing, this little book will be a rich comfort. For Mr. O'Brien to have shared his great sorrow and his great strength was a generous act.

Cuppy Combination Is Hilarious Book

"THE GREAT BUSTARD," by Will Cuppy. [Murray Hill, $1.98.]

Will [Footnote] Cuppy has long been a master of the ridiculous, and never was he better than in the two collections of wacky works called "How to Become Extinct" and "How to Tell Your Friends from the Apes." Now those two books have been combined into this one hilarious cache of very pseudo science.

Here's Light Reading for Late Summer

"PASTORAL," by Nevil Shute. [Morrow, $2.50.]

"CLUNY BROWN," by Margery Sharp. [Little, Brown, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher.

The two books which will be delivered to the members of the Book of the Month Club for September will, if the summer weather holds, and there are still any hammocks extant, be perfect hammock reading. Some of their readers will find "social significance" or "the spirit of England" in them, but to this reader they are both light reading, and why put lead on their wings?

"Pastoral" is the more serious of the two. It is the story of a bomber command station love affair. The tale is about three-fourths love affair and one-fourth bomber mission, but the description of the bomber missions is so gripping, so intense, so moving, that, like a dash of biting tobasco, it flavors the whole book and gives the love affair, aptly called pastoral, a poignancy which its tenderness alone would not have.

Against the tenseness and terror of the bombing raids is played the pastoral gentleness of the love scenes between Lt. Peter Marshall and WAAF Section Officer Robertson [Gervase Laura by christening]. It isn't the air raids which nearly wreck Lt. Marshall and all of his crew. It is WAAF Section Officer Robertson who doesn't know that she is in love, with him. "The great adventure on this station isn't bombing Germany," says a wise wing commander bitterly. "They don't think anything of that. Falling in love is the big business here."

"Pastoral" is a tender, and gentle love story tensed by the war. It is a graphic picture of life at a bomber command station in England. It is, for part of the time, incomparably gripping as a description of an air raid from the raider's vantage-point. It is even, as Air Commodore Baxter says about its characters and events, "the very stuff of England." But it is still, by the grace of Mr. Shute's skill, light reading.

"Cluny Brown" is a nearly gay farce, altho often a very human, subtly ironic picture of life. Cluny, short for Clover, is an orphan and the able answerer of the telephone at her plumber uncle's when the book opens, but she has shown signs of "not knowing her place." She has wantonly taken herself to tea at the Ritz, and is discovered spending the day in bed, eating oranges, because she had read a piece in the paper about how this rested the nerves and toned the system. When she goes out to fix a plugged drain and is discovered by her uncle just as [he thinks], she is about to be seduced, Cluny is "threaped down" by being sent off into service in Devonshire.

Her readers will be greatly delighted with Margery Sharp's gently ironic picture of life at Friars Carmel, especially below stairs. Mr. Syrett, the butler; Mrs. Maile, the housekeeper; cook, borrowed from a traveling family; Cluny, and Hilda, whose unfathered baby "Mrs. Maile overlooked," are the staff. None of the "upstairs" characters is nearly so amusing. Lady Carmel, living for her flowers; Sir Henry, who is sorry he ever traveled anywhere; their son, who is aware of things, but bewildered; the incredibly named Betty Cream, a raving beauty, and Mr. Belinski, the great Polish writer, are more stock character material, given an amusing life by the author's deft touch.

This Town Called Hollywood

By Philip Scheuer

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. [Special].—During the last year a new kind of suspense has come to the American screen. You may have experienced it in "Phantom Lady," directed by Robert Siodmak, and in "Double Indemnity," directed by Billy Wilder. You will experience it again in "The Seventh Cross," directed by Fred Zinnemann.

The suspense is new in that it is straightforward; you're "in on it" from the start. Unlike Alfred Hitchcock, master of surprise, it uses few tricks [except insofar as all story telling is a form of trickery]; and unlike the movie whodunits, it has no truck with so-called or miscalled comedy relief.

Last week, impressed by a preglimpse of "The Seventh Cross," I went out to talk with Fred Zinnemann. He told me an amazing fact—more amazing to me, in view of what I have set down above, than to him.

He said that he had worked on a picture in Paris when he was a young man, more than 15 years ago.

It was called, in translation, "People on Sunday."

Zinnemann, Vienna born, had been assistant cameraman; Billy Wilder, also Austrian born, wrote and co-directed. The other director, who was born in America but trained in Germany, was Robert Siodmak.

"People on Sunday" was all but plotless, certainly anything but a melodrama of suspense. How curious that three men who had so much to do with the former should emerge as such brilliant exponents of the latter—and all in 1944! Far from being part of a pre-arranged plot, it was, Zinnemann assured me, just a coincidence.

[A fourth man was, for the record, Eugene Schufftan, inventor of the "Schufftan process" and now in Hollywood. He was responsible for the photography in "Hitler's Madman" and "Summer Storm."]

"The Seventh Cross," from Anna Seghers' novel, is really one long screen chase. It is about seven men who escape from Westhofen, a Nazi concentration camp, in 1936, and about one, George Heisler [Spencer Tracy] in particular. It would be too bad if you let the period and subject keep you away, for despite the depressing background, it's the chase that counts.

Nor is the theme dated: It states that there are people everywhere—yes, even in Hitler's Germany—in whom a sense of "God given decency" never quite dies. It is these people, most of them unknown to one another, who help the seventh man escape the seventh cross, which awaits him in the bleak prison yard.

Zinnemann's direction is flawless—in setups, timing, most of all in casting and atmosphere. If you didn't know better you'd swear you were looking at a film from the old German UFA. Supporting players like Hume Cronyn, Signe Hasso, Jessica Tandy, Agnes Moorehead, Herbert Rudley, Konstantin Shayne, Ray Collins, George MacReady, Felix Bressart, George Suzanne, and still others give performances of star caliber—and this, too, was typical of the European cinema.

"How did you do it?" I asked.

Zinnemann, a slight, rather good looking chap with a Zanuck mustache and a slight accent, said he doesn't quite know. Perhaps—well, he always tries to get at the "inner truth" in people, to bring out what makes them tick. "I'm not much of a coach," he apologized. "If the actors had been no good I'd have been helpless. But they were good and the script [by Helen Deutsch] was excellent. Then there was my producer, Pan Berman. He had enough faith in me to give me the chance. I couldn't let him down."

One reason the illusion is so remarkable is that Zinnemann selected his bits—those with a line or two—from among Europeans. "They only had to be themselves," he said, "and so were very effective."

"The Seventh Cross" is his third feature for M. G. M. [the others: "Kid Glove Killer," with Van Heflin, and "Eyes in the Night," with Edward Arnold.] He was promoted from the shorts department, where he had directed since 1938, winning the studio an Academy award with "That Mothers Might Live."

Fred had wanted to make movies ever since, as a law student in Vienna, he saw Von Stroheim's "Greed" and King Vidor's "Big Parade." "They changed my life," he declares. From Paris, where he enrolled in a school for cameramen and later worked on "People on Sunday," he came to America in 1929, the year of the Wall st. crash.

When he reached Hollywood he was broke. After an extra job in "All Quiet on the Western Front," he landed as assistant to Director Berthold Viertel. Subsequently he made a film for the Mexican government, "The Wave," which he describes as "daddy of the documentaries." Then Metro signed him.

Zinnemann is now shooting "The Clock," all about a soldier [Robert Walker] on a 48 hour pass who meets a girl [Judy Garland]. The villain is the clock. That's all the plot there is, really.

"And that's the way I like 'em," Fred says. "The simpler the better. That way I can get inside people."

JANE WYMAN

Jane Wyman brings her glamor to "Crime by Night." At the Garrick.

Three in a Row.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—For the third time in as many pictures, Veronica Lake is eschewing her hair over one eye hairdo, this time in "Out of This World," musical which combines the talent of Eddie Bracken, Miss Lake, Diana Lynn, and Cass Daley. Hal Walker is directing.

Vaudeville

Oriental theater. Frankie Carle, his piano and his orchestra head the stage show this week, with Paul Allen, Phyllis Lynne and Lee Columbo as additional soloists. The dance trio of Joe, Lou and Marilyn Cates also occupies an important spot, as does Senor Wences, the brilliant ventriloquist recently seen at the Chez Paree, after an engagement with the "Ziegfeld Follies."

Downtown theater. Johnny [Scat] Davis and his orchestra are on the opening bill, along with the Milt Herth Trio and Betty Westmore, comedian Jackie Green, Singing Ted Travers, and the Callahan Sisters. The Downtown is the old Rialto, redecorated and generally refurbished, having banished burlesque in favor of motion pictures and stage shows.

Chicago theater. The show is held over for a third week, with Charlie Spivak's band, the Arnaut Brothers and Mack and Desmond featured. Betty Hutton comes on the stellar scene next Friday.

• • •

Regal theater. Louis Armstrong, "Old Satchmo" himself, is this week's star, trumpeting with his band in his only Chicago engagement of the season. Others on the bill are the Zephyrs, Miller and Lee and Otto Eason.

Empress theater. After a year's darkness, the commodious Empress theater at Halsted and 63d sts., reopens to pursue a policy of neighborhood vaudeville plus girls. The opening attraction will be the A. B. Marcus Revue with a cast of 75. The principals include Leon Miller, Harold Boyd and his Jigsaws, Latasha and Laurence, the Maxellos, the Behee Rubyatte troupe, Kirk and Clayton, Ruth Durrell, Bob White, Grace Doro, Janada, Bernice Tassin, the Bush sisters and others, in addition to a beauty chorus.

Notes of Music and Musicians

In keeping with a musical season that is restlessly impatient to get under way, the Woman's Symphony orchestra will give its first concert at Orchestra hall on Friday, Oct. 6, at 8:15. The soloist will be Thomas L. Thomas, one of last summer's baritones at Grant Park, and Jerzy Bojanowski, the new conductor, will present as a novelty a suite from the ballet "Harnasie," by his fellow countryman, the Polish composer Karol Szymanowski. "Harnasie" is based on the life and the music of the Tatra mountaineers. It was written in 1926 and was first produced at the Paris opera in April, 1936, shortly before the composer's death. Mr. Bojanowski conducted the ballet during a European tour of the Polish ballet of Warsaw in 1939, and the performances were repeated under his direction at the New York fair later in the same year. Jennie Tourel, contralto of the Metropolitan opera, last heard here at Ravinia in an impressive performance of the final movement of Leonard Bernstein's "Jeremiah" symphony, will be the soloist at the second concert on Monday, Nov. 13. The third and final concert will be on Monday, Dec. 11, when the soloists will be the gifted Chicago duo-pianists, Gillette and Micari, whose recital in Fullerton hall was one of the bright spots of last season.

Jennie Tourel.

Herman Clebanoff, violinist of the Russian Trio and former concert master of the Illinois Symphony orchestra, has been appointed concert master of the reorganized New Orleans Symphony orchestra under its new conductor, Massimo Freccia. Fritz Siegal, formerly concert master of the Indianapolis, Seattle, and Illinois Symphony orchestras, succeeds Clebanoff in the Russian Trio.

Lawrence Tibbett will open the Concert-Forum series at Temple Sholom, 3480 Lake Shore dr., on Wednesday night, Oct. 18. Four of the 10 programs scheduled for the series will be musical events, the other numbers being devoted to lectures by well known personalities. Gladys Swarthout will appear on Nov. 1, Mischa Elman on Jan. 10, and Alec Templeton on Feb. 7. Season tickets for the series of 10 events are priced at $6 plus government tax.

Two Kimball hall recitals already are announced under Bertha Ott's direction. Dorothy Lane, Chicago harpsichordist, will play on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 26, at the original hour of 5:30. Her program will include sonatas of Scarlatti and Mozart and Bach's monumental set of variations dedicated to his pupil, the organist, clavier player and composer, Johann Gottlieb Theophilus Goldberg. Sarah Gorby, singer of folk songs, will be heard on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 29, at 3:30.

• • •

Ida Krehm, Chicago pianist, an early winner of the Schubert Memorial, has been engaged to play Mozart's D minor concerto with the St. Louis Symphony orchestra under the direction of Leon Barzin in January. This will be Miss Krehm's second appearance with the St. Louis organization, her first vehicle having been Brahms' D minor concerto. The pianist was scheduled to play Liszt's "Hungarian Fantasy" with the Toronto Philharmonic in Varsity stadium last week, with Victor Kolar conducting.

Dimitri Shostakovich is completing the orchestration of an opera by Benjamin Fleishman, a young soviet composer killed in the defense of Leningrad. The opera is based on a short story by Anton Chekov, "Rothschild's Fiddle." Benjamin had written the entire score, but had not completed the orchestration.

• • •

Lucky San Francisco is to hear Pierre Monteux conduct the symphony orchestra of that city in eight Friday afternoon concerts and 12 Saturday night concerts during the coming season. Featured will be a Brahms festival and Wagner's "Parsifal" in concert form, with Frederick Jagel as the untarnished innocent and Dusolina Giannini singing Kundry.

Among the batoneers—Leopold Stokowski, for a number of seasons without a regular post, will conduct at least six pairs of concerts of the New York City Symphony orchestra next season at Mayor La Guardia's City Center of Music and Drama. . . . Otto Klemperer recently emerged from a period of retirement due to ill health to conduct a concert of the Los Angeles Philharmonic in Hollywood bowl, with Lotte Lehmann as soloist. . . . Valter Poole, for 18 years a member of the viola section of the Detroit Symphony orchestra, has been appointed assistant conductor of that group. Poole once appeared in Chicago as guest conductor of the Illinois Symphonic Ensemble. Erich Kleiber has been appointed conductor of the Havana, Cuba, Symphony orchestra.

Now that the public has finally learned to pronounce and scribes to spell the name of Shostakovich, a new jawbreaker appears on the horizon — Alexander Tzsafafsman. He is a young soviet composer who has written an intermezzo for clarinet and jazz orchestra which Benny Goodman will soon perform.

Saturday afternoon broadcasts of Metropolitan opera performances are assured for the next six years. Contracts for that period were recently signed between the Opera association, the Texas company, and the Blue network.

• • •

The prolific and versatile Leonard Bernstein has written a new ballet to succeed his very successful "Fancy Free." It is called "Bye, Bye, Jackie," and, like his former piece, will have choreography by Jerome Robbins and a set by Oliver Smith. The trio plan still a third ballet, the whole to form a trilogy related in character and purpose.

Mackinac Isle Links Present with the Past

By Thalia.

Mackinac Island, Mich. [Special].—Mackinac Island is northern Michigan's most historic spot. Here more than anywhere else in the buxom, bustling life of today's midwest one feels the past. Here one sees yesterday still intact; a sturdy little fort which withstood the Indians of the wilderness when our nation was only four years old; an old 18th century church, square and white and reaching toward God with its tiny steeple; a house in which one of the great American fortunes had its beginning, the house in which John Jacob Astor started his first fur trading post—all mute reminders that time is not just today and tomorrow, but inescapable yesterday.

Like all islands of whatever size, Mackinac has a special "feel." It is only 10 miles from the farthest shore, and unless wrapped in mist, even its houses are clearly visible from the mainland. But when you are on it, you know that you are on an island, and it has retained its atmosphere of the past by allowing no automobiles to remind it of the present.

Old fashioned surreys, with the fringe on top, painted a bright yellow, follow ambling horses that trundle tourists thru the forest roads of the island, roads bearing sometimes such incongruous names as "Leslie Avenue" in the depth of the forest leading to Arch Rock, one of nature's many striking offerings. The snuffling of the horses, and the horse smell seem a proper part of the forest travelse. The forest, an evergreen wood, is naturally tidy underneath, like the French forests, and endless miles of foot trails compass and dissect it.

The entire island except for a small section, is owned by the state of Michigan and maintained as a state park. There are now two main summer residential districts, the east bluff and the west bluff. On the east bluff the home owners own only their homes and not the land, altho their leases from the state are in perpetuity. It is mostly on state property that grow the nasturtiums which are characteristic flowers of Mackinac as azaleas are of Mobile and blue hydrangeas of Newport, altho the nasturtiums outline the walks of private homes.

On the west bluff, in the section known as the Annex [officially Hubbard's annex], the summer residents own their own land as well as their houses. The most attractive of them to Chicagoans is the last in the group, the Edward Cudahys'. The view from their porch is spectacular. One feels as if he were literally on the top of the world, with the waters of Lake Michigan spilling over one horizon, of Lake Huron over another. The straits are underlined in their beauty below one's eyes by the long ore boats which seem drawn by some irresistible force instead of being self-propelled. Terraces, flower planted, lead down the steep bluff. It is all breath-taking.

Mrs. Cudahy, still a bride, and glowing with happiness and plans for redecorating the vast old house, has begun by having its dark brown interior revolutionized with white paint. Paper with vivid red roses covers the upper walls of the great dining room whose windows overlook the water, and there are rose splattered chintz curtains. Mrs. Cudahy, who has grown daughters, has spent some part or all of almost every summer since her girlhood on Mackinac, and she is the center of the social life of Chicagoans there. Nearby are Dr. and Mrs. Selim McArthur, the Ernst Puttkammers, and this year Comdr. Eugene F. McDonald Jr.'s family and the Wil-

3 Chicagoans Plan to Help Civic Groups

By Irene Steyskal.

When women get their heads together you may look for a change in the course of history, whether on the international scene or in the neighborhood. When the heads are those of Mrs. Walter H. Hermsdorf, Mrs. Henry W. Hartough, and Miss Myrtle Carpenter, a trio of veterans known to every woman's organization in the city for their years of voluntary social welfare and community betterment service in Chicago, the prospect offers interesting possibilities for the home town.

At the moment, Mrs. Hermsdorf, Mrs. Hartough, and Miss Carpenter themselves constitute the newly incorporated Community Leadership council. Expansion is imminent, however, for the trio, after several weeks of consultation among themselves and persons experienced along lines of similar civic interest, have invited a score or more key citizens in patriotic, educational, social welfare, city improvement, youth protection, and race amenity organizations to lunch with them Wednesday in the Sherman hotel and talk over a few ideas they have for giving direction and force to the work of laymen's volunteer groups.

Leading spirit of the new council is Mrs. Hermsdorf. Formerly president of the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations and also former 9th district president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Hermsdorf has been for eight years a member of the Chicago recreation commission. She is designated as founder-president of the council.

Mrs. Hartough, prominently identified with the club federation for many years, is now serving as public welfare department chairman and is best known for her work to improve conditions conducive to juvenile delinquency.

Miss Carpenter has worked professionally in the social welfare field with the Chicago Home and Aid society, and women's clubs and church federations have consulted with her in setting up projects for young people. She helped start the Boys' Brotherhood and she organized and directed the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs "friendly coöperation with ex-service men" program after the first World war. Both Mrs. Hartough and Miss Carpenter are to assist Mrs. Hermsdorf in the new enterprise as vice presidents of the council.

Their experience as volunteer workers, Mrs. Hermsdorf explains, led the three friends to the same conclusion: that many citizens' groups dissipate energy or frequently fail in their endeavors for community betterment sometimes for want of informed leadership, sometimes for lack of coöperative support from other community organizations, or at other times from discouragement when a project requires sustained effort over a long period. Between the community groups and the city governmental units and agencies, they believe, she explains, that there has been an essential link missing, and that link the council hopes to supply.

Mrs. Hermsdorf envisions the council as a central clearing house for obtaining, supplying and spreading information; as a delegate agency to back up community groups in bringing their problems to the proper governmental agencies for help and solution. Housing, recreation, juvenile protection, and community education in necessary post-war adjustments, particularly in relation to returning service men, are some of the fields in which she thinks the council could begin work immediately. ## Tribune's 5th Annual Fashion Show to Be Held Oct. 5 and 6

Upon the feminine horizon yesterday appeared the first herald of one of the year's important events. . . . THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S 1944 American Fashions show . . . like the first carmine leaf to give notice of nature's autumn glories.

Fashion show officials announced that tickets for this 5th annual show, a future-shaping event in the realm of style creation, will go on sale by mail late this week. Orders for tickets may be mailed now.

That announcement is a prosaic veil for months of intense activity. Since the period for submission of entries in this $5,000 contest came to a close at midnight of May 1, the judges have selected from among the dreams of the competing designers those which will be seen in glamorous reality at the fashion show next month. Some of the nation's most skilful dressmakers have been translating pen-and-ink sketches into fabric, working magic with color and line and subtle ornamentation. Expert camera men of the Tribune color studio have been photographing the completed ensembles, worn by lovely models, for presentation in color in the rotogravure section of the SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

There will be four public presentations of the 1944 American Fashions show, all in the enchanting W-G-N studio theater, on Oct. 5 and 6. Two of these will be afternoon shows, two evening. Leading style creators and other figures important in the marketing of apparel, who look to these annual competitions for a preview of that subtle thing called trend, will be among spectators.

Mrs. Grace Pickering, noted fashion authority, whose genius has made American Fashions shows a nation-wide influence in styling, promises that the 1944 version will be the most dramatic and exciting yet produced. Emphasizing the keynote of the 1944 competition, "What American Women Will Wear in War or Peace," Mrs. Pickering finds that this has been a challenging stimulus to contestants.

"A year ago," she says, "we were so deep in the war that we could not foresee when we might emerge. Today, we are beginning to see the end of the frightful dream.

"This happy promise of a fairly early return to normal ways of living obviously has been an inspiration to the designers. In their sketches there still are reminders that apparel remains under war time restraints; yet there are delightful touches of originality born of the consciousness that the garments bought today may be part of a post-war wardrobe not so long hence. Therefore a sprightliness of treatment that is new as well as charming is too apparent to be missed."

The sumptuously staged fashion show, always a brilliant spectacle, will be opened by a prologue depicting fashions thru the ages, a richly costumed pageant portraying the evolution of women's dress from antiquity to today. Some of history's most famous beauties will come to life in this drama of style.

At least 35 costumes will be modeled, and from these prize winners will be selected. A grand prize of $2,000 will be given for first place. For second place, $1,000 will be awarded; for third place, $500; while the designer of each creation exhibited will be awarded $50.

Spectators at the American Fashions show will represent not only Chicago and vicinity, but far-distant areas. Shows of other years have been virtually sold out.

Seats at the evening shows will be $2; for the matinees, $1. All checks should be made out to American Fashions, Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., 435 N. Michigan av., Chicago 11, Ill.

Fresh from the Hills . . . . . By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm . . . . . Camp Sylvania

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TOO bad James K. Polk, 11th President of the United States, couldn't have looked 99½ years into the future when he signed an Ozark land grant for one L. L. L. Allen of Missouri. Even a President with a Mexican war and worries about the Oregon boundary on his mind would have enjoyed the sight of 60 pretty girls from 8 to 19 in sweat shirts and shorts or blue jeans sitting cross-legged on a shady porch of a building set deep in the hills of that Ozark tract. Doubtless he would have admired the blonde, black, red, and brown heads bending so studiously over notebooks. But if President Polk had heard those girls spelling words by dits and dahs instead of honest alphabetical letters, he would probably have thought America had come into an attack of the simples. It would have taken some time, more than likely, to explain to Mr. Polk that these girls at Camp Sylvania, near Purdy, Mo., were studying the Morse code in their summer play time in order to qualify as civil air patrol cadets.

Possibly Three-L, as Mr. Allen was known here in the hills, never dreamed that girls would some day come to camp on this Ozark land for which President Polk signed the papers. But even if he did, he certainly had no idea that the girls who might come for a summer play session would be more interested in sending radio messages, sharpshooting, life saving, and learning to fly than in playing. But give Grandfather Three-L credit for one thing. He was the granddaddy of the camp idea. When President Polk signed the Allen land grant on May 1, 1845, generous old Three-L promptly set aside a tract of 100 acres which he called a "Recreation Center for Young Folks." He named the plot Cedar Bluff, because of the cedars and pines on the great cliffs that rose sheer as a rock wall alongside the clear spring fed stream that bordered the recreation center.

This long sighted generosity of Three-L gives the Ozarks of today the distinction of having the first camp site for young people. Now that there are upwards of 20,000 camps in these United States that is a proud claim.

L. L. L. Allen can be credited with another far sighted effort. He knew that the wooded hills of the Ozarks needed settlers to make them a worthwhile section of the country. Settlers were trickling into the country from the southeast, but not in numbers sufficient to suit Three-L. He went to Poland, and thru some method of selection which no one can recall, he brought back a large number of Polish families. These families were brought direct to the land for which President Polk had signed the grant, and there they were provided with stout log houses and given lands for clearing and tilling. To this day, the region about Purdy and Pierce City, Mo., is largely peopled with sturdy hard working men and women who bear strange foreign sounding names, the names of their grandfathers who came direct from Poland to the Ozark mountains. Many of these families are now supplying chickens, butter, eggs, milk, cream, and fresh vegetables to the dining hall of the camp.

Altho Mr. Allen died before he could carry out his plans to establish a young people's camp, his son L. L. [Two-L] Allen had the same vision. The great oak trees of the hundred acre camp site were left just as nature had planted them, and Shoal creek still bubbled over its rocky bed without bridge or dam. Many of the pines and cedars had disappeared, however, and Two-L changed the name to Camp Sylvania, after Pennsylvania. It was still regarded as a boys' camp. Like his father before him, Two-L had the interests of young people at heart. He established the first Sunday school west of the Mississippi river. Because many rough, boisterous characters attended the Sunday schools at which Two-L presided, he developed his own method of keeping order. Tales are still told among the hill people of Two-L entering a school house or brush arbor and proceeding direct to the speaker's platform or the space designated for the speaker. There he would unstrap the two guns that he wore about his waist, lay them alongside the Bible on the table, bow his head and say:

"Brethren and sisters, let us pray!"

The idea of a camp was carried into the third generation of the Allen family. When Elizabeth Allen, daughter of Two-L and granddaughter of Three-L, became old enough to choose her life's work, naturally she chose camping. In one of the camps where she gained experience as counsellor, she met another young woman, Amy Lou Holmes, who was equally interested in girls' camps. Together they planned the camp that would be the culmination of Grandpa Three-L's dream, a camp in the green wooded hills where young girls could enjoy a summer of swimming, hiking, and riding. Soon after Elizabeth's father died, the two girls started to build Camp Sylvania, and the more they built the more respect they had for Three-L. The spot he had set aside as a camp site was ideal in every respect, with its beautiful stream, its wooded trails for hiking, and its excellent cabin locations. But the Allen jinx got in its work again. Soon after the close of the first camp season, Elizabeth Allen died. She had simply worked too hard.

By this time, Camp Sylvania had become a sacred trust in this stanch pioneer family. To Miss Holmes, who would carry on the camp plans, Miss Allen left the Allen home with all its dignified furnishings, the massive highboys, rosewood beds, stage coach trunks, saddle bags used by the pony express, and even the melodion on which President Lincoln thrummed when it stood in the girlhood home of Miss Allen's mother, who was a Chittenden, all these, plus the camp grounds and buildings.

Miss Holmes, as skipper of the camp, has not lost sight of the romantic past, yet she has established innovations that make this Ozark girls' camp a pattern in modernity.

On Sunday evenings when the girls of Three-L's days were sitting with folded hands, the girls of Camp Sylvania, in fatigue uniforms of the civil air patrol cadets, are stepping briskly along to the shouted command of a drill sergeant. Miss Holmes, who has a student pilot's license and is a flight officer in the civil air patrol, realizes that the girls of today will be the women flyers of tomorrow. And the way the girls bounce into their uniforms and tackle their dit-dah lessons speaks well for future women flyers.

Rough-and-ready Two-L would probably be flabbergasted at the sight of these modern girls flat on their tummies, popping away at targets with uncanny marksmanship. Camp Sylvania is an active member of the National Rifle association, and campers win national medals. One pretty 16 year old, attending the camp for her fifth year, brought her own rifle along with her camp togs. For the sake of safety, it stood in the skipper's office except when it was in use on the riflery.

Swimming or wading for mere amusement in Shoal creek is scorned by Camp Sylvania girls. They have a big swimming pool in the valley where Indians camped not so long ago, and there they learn the Red Cross brand of life saving. Dear old Three-L's eyes would literally pop if he could see a slim little blonde trick in a one-piece bathing suit breaking the simulated frantic clutch of a drowning person and bringing her safely to shore. He would be equally aghast at seeing the final scenes of the movie which the girls of Camp Sylvania made last year. In the costumes of calico-clad hill girls, sheriffs and bold bad bandits, the whole camp trooped over to Pineville, Mo., where they filmed their own version of Jesse James, using the props left behind by Hollywood. And no one rode the old side saddle used by the Allen women folks. Camp Sylvania girls take their riding seriously. Each girl rides every day and their mounts are real cavalry horses. The camp season always ends with a traditional horse show and a bang up banquet with cut outs of prancing horses for place cards.

Grandpa Three-L might not have thought this site a "fitten place" for girls, if he had known it contained at least two darkly mysterious caves and Indian relics along the banks of the creek. But these finds have had an unlooked for effect. They inspire tremendous popularity for the Indian art of silver craft. In fact, the craft cabin, presided over by deft fingered Vera Becker, is as popular as the tennis court. And Big Rock, the center of the Indian finds, is a wonderful stage for singing the "Indian Love Call." Strange beings, these modern girls. And mighty sensible!

Camping is America's contribution to education, we are told, and post-war educational plans in both America and England stress camping privileges for all boys and girls. We Ozarkians are proud that far sighted old Three-L Allen made our region first in this great activity. And we are glad that this region is loved and appreciated by these young visitors from other parts of the country. In fact, even the most stout hearted Ozarkian gets a little lump in his throat when he hears those fresh young voices lifted in the song that Camp Sylvania campers sing before each meal, the song that might well be the song of the Ozarks.

For the beauty of these oak trees,
For the sky of brightest blue,
For the joy of heart's endeavor,
For the pride of friendship true,
Father, we thank Thee.

Mackinac Isle Links Present with the Past

liam T. Bruckners of Hinsdale make up the Chicago group. The summer home owners are members of the Wawashkomo Golf club, near British Landing where the cottages are all boarded up this year.

Visitors to the island play on a public course near the Grand hotel which has, it declares, the longest front porch in the world, bordered by 1,500 geraniums. It dates back to the great days of Mackinac when some of Chicago's first families were annual visitors. Walking along its 880 feet of white expanse, inhabited by well padded deck chairs [and humans] and looking out over the water, gives one a feeling of being on an ocean liner.

For the second summer the Moral Re-Armament group [a projection of the Oxford group] has held its summer session here. This year they are almost 700 strong at the moment. They have taken over the Island House, the Murray hotel, two of the island's larger hostelries, and many villas, including the beautiful house belonging to the Hubert Burnhams of Chicago, next to the Cudahys. Dr. Frank Buchman is the head of the group, which includes many nationally and internationally prominent men and women from all walks of life.

Incidentally, Dr. Buchman's name is pronounced as tho he were a man of books, which he is, and not a gay buck, which he is not. He is no longer young and is, while cordial, quiet and slow of speech.

Training is given in the principles of moral rearmament, in the creation of sound homes, in the establishment of teamwork and the elimination of friction between labor and capital, and in uniting America to win not only the war but a permanent peace. I gathered this from Dr. Morris Martin, the poet laureate of the movement, one of whose poems, "The Song of Freedom" was set to music by our fellow Chicagoan, John Alden Carpenter, and performed by the Chicago Symphony orchestra and a chorus in March, 1942. Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter are expected at the conference almost any day. Another great musical figure, Artur Rodzinski and his concert master planned to be here last week, but they have been delayed a week.

Almost 2,000 people will have visited this M. R. A. group this summer from all over the world. Here now is Dr. Chiang Kia-ngau, representing Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek on the questions of industrial reconstruction of China. Dr. Chiang was, I am told, the originator of the Burma road, and was for seven years minister of communications in the Chinese government. There are also K. C. Lee of Singapore, one of China's best known rubber exporters; three Australians, who have come with a message from and the blessing of Prime Minister Curtin; Sgt. Duncan Corcoran, in his nonsoldiering days a labor leader with a rich and furry Scotch brogue; Maj. Max McCree, very dashing in Tartan slacks, who is, I hear, the only man who ever refused the Victoria cross [he had the military cross three times and felt he didn't deserve more, they say]; "Bill" Yates, a fiery labor leader; an assortment of bankers and industrialists, and a group of Princetonians so large that I thought I was watching a gathering of the Princeton Alumni association.

The first person I was introduced to was Mrs. John Henry Hammond of New York, granddaughter of old Commodore Vanderbilt. There are two families of Twitchells. The younger Mrs. Twitchell's father, H. Alexander Smith of Princeton, is Republican candidate for United States senator from New Jersey. Mrs. William L. Wood, who was a Canfield of New York, and her son, Lt. John C. Wood, discovered on the island an impressive statue to their famous forefather, Gen. Lewis Cass, who was the first governor of the Michigan territory.

Last Friday and Saturday nights two dramatic presentations of M. R. A. were given. Friday night's was the industrial drama, "The Forgotten Factor," which was presented in Washington last May to a distinguished audience. Saturday night it was "And Still They Fight," by the late Fredrik Ramm, a Dane, who is said to have done more than any one other person to stiffen resistance in Norway. Their most popular play, a dramatization of "You Can Defend America," has been presented in over 100 cities. The handbook of that name was so praised by the war department and by the United States commissioner of education, I am told, that lessons based on it—"Your Part in Winning the War and Building a New World"—have been taught by schools in Michigan [the first state to adopt them] and 23 other states.

D. A. R. Plans Joint Meeting Next Friday

Constitution day will be observed Sunday, Sept. 17. The significance of the observance at this time in America's history will be emphasized by Mrs. John F. Dille, national defense chairman of the Illinois society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in a talk on the Constitution which she will give Friday before a joint assembly, first of the fall season, of Americanism and national defense units in the Chicago area. The meeting is called for 10:30 o'clock in the tearoom of Carson Pirie Scott & Co.

Mrs. John F. Dille.

The two committees are headed, respectively, by Mrs. Dan Pagenta and Mrs. Robert R. Beak. Mrs. Dille will be presented by Mrs. Beak. For her part of the program Mrs. Pagenta will introduce the two boys and one girl, Edward R. Orr of Riverside, Douglas H. Smith of Harvey, and Miss Helen Brooks of Evanston, who attended the Boy and Girl states this summer in Jacksonville as guests of the D. A. R. Sponsored by the American Legion and auxiliary, the vacation time "states" are schools in citizenship for selected young persons of high school age.

Another speaker at the Friday meeting will be the state chairman of the committee on the D. A. R. manual of citizenship. The manual originally was written for the foreign born to assist the immigrant in naturalization proceedings. Its use has been greatly extended in recent years. Libraries, schools, Girl and Boy Scout, and Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. centers and the army camps and navy stations, all call upon the D. A. R. for its simple and authoritative book on the formalities, rights, and duties of American citizenship.

The D. A. R. Henry Purcell chapter's printing committee will meet Wednesday evening at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Charles James Coffey, 7618 Kingston av., to complete compilation of the chapter yearbook. With Mrs. Coffey, members of the group are Mrs. Albert F. Robertson, Mrs. Warren W. Smith, Mrs. Ross E. Beynon, and Mrs. James E. McBurney.

Another patriotic group opening the season this week is Fort Chicagou chapter of the Daughters of American Colonists. With Mrs. Harry T. Tillotson presiding, chapter members will assemble at 11 o'clock Saturday in the Republic building to hear state and chapter chairmen outline plans for the year.

The program chairman, Mrs. Francis E. Thornton, will present Mrs. Emma Paulsen in a book talk and dialect sketches. The state regent, Mrs. Roy F. Stanton of East St. Louis will attend the meeting, and several state chairmen also will be present, among them Miss Florence Deneen, Mrs. Charles F. Pfiager, Mrs. Harold E. Leopold, Miss Helen McMackin, and Mrs. Ray Garrett.

With the National Association of Women Lawyers meeting here Friday in the Knickerbocker hotel, Miss Charlotte E. Gauer's local committee on program and arrangements is busy settling the innumerable final details for a smoothly running convention. The group had definite assurance last week that the New York jurist, Jerome Frank, will be here to speak on "Women Lawyers" at the Saturday noon luncheon session.

That generalized title which the former Chicago attorney and chairman of the securities and exchange commission has chosen for his address has the program committee smiling. His writings do not lead them to anticipate any honeyed flattery for the females in the legal profession from Judge Frank. Judge Frank presides in the United States Circuit [2d circuit] Court of Appeals. Mme. Wei Tao-ming, wife of the Chinese ambassador and China's outstanding woman lawyer, and Judge Camille Kelly of Memphis, Tenn., are the other speakers who have been invited to address the convention.

Among the eight regional directors and 48 state vice presidents seated at the convention as the important resolutions committee will be two Chicagoans, Mrs. Helen W. Munsert and Miss Gauer. Mrs. Munsert is director of the northwest region and Miss Gauer is the Illinois state vice president. The presiding chairman of the resolutions committee is Mrs. Ethel Murrell of Miami, Fla., a vice president on the national association's board.

To the convention committee on resolutions northwest leaders are prepared to present, for the national association's consideration, several pronouncements on policy and practice which were passed in regional conference last February. Some of the regional conference resolutions called for continued allied collaboration thru such existing agencies as UNRRA [United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration] and lend-lease; for studies of all proposed plans for peace, with a view toward ascertaining the best means for post-war collaboration; for congressional definition of a long term policy on international trade; and, on the post-war domestic scene, the canceling of accrued tax debts for men and women upon their return from military service to civilian life.

Noted in the early fall picture of women's activities is the preelection stir in the League of Women Voters. Starting a few weeks ago with the launching of a membership campaign thruout the state, the march is on toward early registration of voters. Mrs. Florence Fifer Bohrer, president of the Illinois league, has addressed a message to local league presidents, calling upon them to concentrate on election work—registration of eligible voters, organization of and coöperation with community voters' schools; candidates' meetings, and setting up of election information booths—from now until Nov. 7.

Veteran worker in the league's nonpartisan campaigns for clarifying issues and fostering well ordered elections, Mrs. W. W. Ramsey, honorary state president, has prepared two leaflets, one giving information on registration and voting; the other setting forth special information on the voting of service men. League headquarters, 225 N. Michigan av., has announced that Mrs. Ramsey's leaflets are procurable by league members and the public.

Mrs. Ramsey is chairman of a newly appointed special preelection projects committee. Soldier voting has raised inquiries, she says, from wives of men in the service, many of whom have the mistaken idea that the soldier vote law is applicable to them. She stresses that the wives of men in service must register and be otherwise qualified according to the election laws governing civilians.

The Chicago Altrusa club, headed this year by Mrs. Stella Ford Walker, is opening the season Wednesday evening with a visit to the occupational therapy department of the University of Illinois college of medicine at 1853 W. Polk st. Mrs. Walker, counselor on hospital libraries, heads the medical record library at Cook County hospital. She will present as speaker to the Altrusa group a friend and associate, Miss Beatrice D. Ward. Miss Ward is director of the university medical college's new occupational therapy program.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Sept. 9, 1896.

Dear Julia: The new game of golf is being discussed to the exclusion of almost every subject here. I suppose it's so in the east, too, for it has come to us from the east after traveling from Scotland. It seems to be the chief amusement of society people here, and to admit you don't know anything about its rules and traditions is to confess yourself not a member of the haut ton.

Rose Chatfield-Taylor.

It is one of the proud boasts of our city that ever since the organization of the United States Golf association two years ago, the amateur championship has been held by a Chicagoan. H. J. Whigham is the present champion, having won the title from Charles B. Macdonald of the Chicago Golf club of Wheaton. I understand that the new champion is to write a book soon on how to play golf. He also is dramatic critic for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Still further golf honors have come to Chicago by the prowess of Mr. Shaw-Kennedy who has been a winner at the National Golf tournament at Niagara.

This week Lake Forest and Wheaton—a western suburb—are filled with golf enthusiasts, for this is Chicago Golfing week and the Chicago Golf club [Wheaton] and the Onwentsia club [Lake Forest] are holding a joint tournament, lasting all week. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday the players will use the Wheaton links. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday they go to Lake Forest. Women will take an active part in the contests. The Day girls [daughters of Albert M. Day] are among the most brilliant players, I am told. And our lovely Rose Chatfield-Taylor is another good player.

Many Lake Foresters are taking the opportunity to invite their city friends out for a week-end, and Will and I are to be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John V. Farwell Sr. Their sons, Francis and John V. Jr., are to play in one of the contests and their daughter, Mrs. Henry N. Tuttle, has entered her name in the women's match. I want Will to enter what is known as the "yearling match" event, open to those who have not played before Jan. 1, 1896, but I don't know whether I can prevail on him to do so. Will has just taken up the game and like all converts [for he opposed it at first, thinking it beneath the dignity of a man of his years] he has grown very enthusiastic.

The festivities of the week will close with a golf cotillion [or "golf ball," as one of the young men called it] at Onwentsia Saturday night. A feature of the cotillion will be a golf figure, in which the men will contest in a noval way for a parasol presented by Hamilton McCormick. It is said to be handsome—the handle an exact reproduction of the golfer's wooden putter. The silk cover of the parasol was chosen for its colors, the blue and yellow of the club. The man who wins it will make some belle happy by presenting it to her. We shall not attend that festivity, I think. Mr. and Mrs. Farwell are sober and now rather elderly people, somewhat our seniors, and Will and I, too, are glad to stay at home of an evening now. We shall probably attend Sunday service at the Presbyterian church, whose pastor is the beloved Dr. J. G. K. McClure.

Will and I heard Carl Schurz speak in Central Music hall this week in behalf of sound money. He aroused his audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm as he analyzed the free silver theory of Bryan and showed its fallacies. The address was the first of a series which will be heard in Chicago under the auspices of the American Sound Money association. Edwin Burritt Smith is president and the list of vice presidents is impressive: such as N. K. Fairbank, H. H. Windsor, D. H. Burnham, H. E. Greenebaum, Robert T. Lincoln, Leon Mandel, Byron L. Smith, Gen. John C. Black, Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus, and Frank G. Logan.

And now I must close and dress for dinner. Ever lovingly,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Golf.

By 1896 golf was firmly established in America. The game, supposedly of Dutch origin, has been identified with Scotland since the 15th century and is now played thruout the civilized world. The greatest player in the history of golf is an American. He won 13 major titles and in 1930 held the four major world titles—the United States amateur, the United States open, the British amateur, the British open. What is his name?

Science can help restore youthfulness to face and throat
Would you like the skin of your face, your throat, to grow younger again? If so, try scientific ENDOCREME. ENDOCREME, with its 7-year record of success, is helping thousands to improve the very skin itself, not merely its superficial appearance. For thousands, it is doing this to a degree heretofore thought impossible. The secret of ENDOCREME'S success is ACTIVOL. This ACTIVOL is the laboratory counterpart of natural, skin-vitalizing substance . . . a substance that decreases with age. Thus, when you apply ENDOCREME, it helps compensate for this loss. Absorbed under the skin's surface, ENDOCREME acts to rebuild cells, tissues. Thus, ageing, dry, coarse, lined skins tend to become fresher, firmer, smoother, more youthfully attractive. How better can you invest your cosmetic dollars? Many report marked improvement in only 30 days.

Season's First Art Show Sets High Standard

By Eleanor Jewett.

The first important exhibition of the new season is the Artist Associates 24th annual exhibition opening at the Chicago Galleries, 215 N. Michigan av., next Wednesday and continuing thru Sept. 30. The exhibition is one which always has been an interesting event of December, but this year the Chicago Galleries is advancing the date. The exhibit is juried and there are several cash prizes. This is the annual exhibition in which the governing members of the association select their paintings.

There are over 60 paintings in the show and the standard is high. Charles P. Killgore and Orrin White are each represented by a large canvas. Orrin White lives in California and Charles Killgore has been painting with him this summer. Mr. Killgore will probably be back in Chicago after the second week in September.

Edward T. Grigware, long a member of the Chicago Galleries, the Palette and Chisel and the Cliff Dwellers, who has been active in the Navy since early in the war, was back in Chicago recently on a sixteen-day leave. He gave a thrilling talk at the Cliff Dwellers—the men who have been down to the sea in ships in the last few years have seen more than they can say—and is off again to an undisclosed destination in the South Pacific. Mr. Grigware is painting, but all his work belongs to the government at present. What final disposition will be made of it he does not know. We who know the excellence, color, vigor and life of his painting, hope it will be put on exhibition here.

Arnold Turtle is back from New Orleans with a delightful group of sketches made on the bayous and around New Orleans itself. These should be a highlight of the fall season, wherever they are shown. Usually these days Arnold Turtle's pictures are bought hot from the easel leaving him with little new to exhibit. Before these latest works are snatched up an exhibit, his friends hope, may be arranged.

Rudolph Ingerle, noted for his gorgeous landscapes of the Smokies and his paintings of moonlight, has been invited to hold another exhibition at Charlotte, N. C., and will take a group of paintings there this month or next.

In October the Chicago Galleries are opening an exhibit of work by Adam Emory Albright, Frank Peyraud and Charles Dahlgreen, three veteran Chicago painters who have done many important things in art during the last 50 years.

Louis Kronberg sends a card from Rocky Neck, Gloucester, Mass. Apparently many artists and students were able to be there and also at Rockport; that is a comforting note for our painters who may hope to be east again next summer.

The galleries of the Club Woman's Bureau, Mandel Brothers, are showing a large group of camera studies by R. Raymond Raymoth. There are views from many European countries, the spoils of many trips abroad. Before his death, Mr. Raymoth was an instructor in history at the Hyde Park High school. As could be expected, Mr. Raymoth used his pictures in illustrating the countries which he discussed in class.

Among the finest of the prints are "Mt. Aetna," "Dawn Over Mt. Vesuvius," "Old Spadaro" [taken on the Isle of Capri, the most popular picture in the exhibit], the "Lion of Lucerne" and two stunning views of the Jungfrau.

Chicagoans Entertained in Berkshires

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

Several entertainments were given in the Berkshires for Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Wolf and Mrs. Walter R. Kirk of Lake Shore dr., who were the guests this week of Mrs. Donald F. McPherson at Court Hill, Pittsfield. Following an address by Mr. Wolf to Pittsfield's Wednesday Morning club on "History Repeats Itself," they were the principals at a country club luncheon, and Mrs. John L. Senior also entertained for them at her summer home in Lenox.

Still another luncheon hostess for Mrs. Wolf and Mrs. Kirk was Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn, St. Paul, Minn., who entertained at Plumstead, Lenox. Among others in the group were Mrs. Senior, Mrs. McPherson, and Mrs. Owen Johnson, wife of the novelist.

Mrs. Harry C. Holloway of Glencoe had a luncheon party of 14 at the Curtis hotel, Lenox, including Mrs. Wolf, Mrs. Kirk, Mrs. McPherson, Mrs. James Ransom Walker, Mrs. David Shields Cook, and Mrs. Bruce W. Paddock, mother of Mrs. George Allen Holloway.

Mrs. Bernhard Hoffmann, honorary president of Berkshire Garden center, has sent out a request for apple donations for the October harvest festival cider mill and apple butter making plant of which she has been in charge for a number of years. Except for protected orchards a May frost this year nipped most Berkshire apple orchards.

On Tuesday the Richmond Garden club, of which Mrs. W. Rockwood Gibbs is president, is to meet with Mrs. James E. Gregg, Pittsfield, and hear a talk by Mrs. Hugh Peters, Englewood, N. J., on "Our South American Neighbors," to be followed by sound color movies.

Three days a week Mrs. John P. Gould [Lee Higginson] is a nurse's aid at the House of Mercy hospital, Pittsfield. Her guests this week at Mahkeenac Farm, Stockbridge, were Mr. and Mrs. Melzar M. Whittlesey [Adelaide Gould] of New York.

Mrs. Richmond Pearson-Hobson has joined her daughter, Mrs. William E. Dodge Stokes, who expects to be at Lake Cottage, Stockbridge, until the new year. Comdr. Stokes, U. S. N., is in European waters.

Mrs. Warren H. Salisbury also entertained at a luncheon at Tor Court, Pittsfield, for Mrs. McPherson and Mrs. Kirk. Earlier in the week, Mrs. Salisbury had as guests for a week her brother, Wilder L. Kimball, and his daughter, Miss Evelyn Kimball, of Rumford, Me.

America's oldest village improvement society, the Laurel Hill association, Stockbridge, is to hold its 91st annual outing on historic Laurel Hill next Friday. Dr. Louis K. Anspacher will speak from a natural boulder rostrum on "Know Your Enemy, or the Descent from Goethe to Goebbels." Dr. and Mrs. Anspacher are to be guests of Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, president of Tanglewood Festival association. Founded in 1853 by Mrs. John Z. Goodrich, sister of Mark Hopkins, to arouse civic consciousness in a tidy town, the association now has an endowment of $125,000.

Mrs. Arthur F. Schermerhorn [Harriett S. Pullman] is expected for a part of September at her Lenox summer home, which has been closed two years.

Mrs. George O. Forbes was a luncheon hostess Wednesday at Orchard Farm, North Agremont, in honor of Mrs. Wait Talcott and daughter, Mrs. Logan McMenemy of Rockford. Among other guests were Mrs. William Felton Barrett, Mrs. Thomas H. Blodgett, Mrs. Aubrey T. Barnes, Mrs. Albert H. Spahr.

Burn Overseas Wrapping.

Wrapping of packages received from service men should be burned, since they may carry the eggs of destructive insects.

Cape Colonists Attend Island Art Exhibition

CAPE COD, MASS.

The quaint old town of Edgartown located on the island of Martha's Vineyard, off Cape Cod, was a focal point of interest last weekend when a two man art show in the gallery of the Vineyard Painting club by Mary Coles of New York and Ruth Mead of Chicago, was held. The two artists, who have been co-instructors this season of a children's art class conducted at the club, received the guests at a tea which preceded inspection of their work. Drawing especially favorable comment was the Chicago woman's canvas, "All Good Girls Go to Sea," a delightful tangle of boat hulls each bearing a woman's name. A second work which appealed was a sketch of the heart of Edgartown, aptly titled, "Tapestry."

Other Chicagoans who have figured prominently in the news of the Cape Cod resort colonies are Mr. and Mrs. Philip Conrad, vacationing for the season at Provincetown. Voted the best costumed couple at the Beachcombers' "Liberation" ball in Provincetown Town hall two weeks ago, Mr. Conrad won honors also at the annual dance of the Provincetown Art association which was held last Friday night in the same hall. For the first affair, attended by more than 500 persons, the Conrads were dressed in picturesque Chinese costumes and received as a prize a watercolor by Charles Heinz, well known member of the Provincetown art colony.

"Surrealism" was the theme chosen for the art association ball. Easily the most weird and gruesome of all the strange costumes assembled in the grand march, Mr. Conrad's creation was labeled "Moonlight on a Floating Kidney." The association dance brought to an end for this year the activities of the Cape-tip art colony. In another week or so studios will be vacated, and the group which makes the community so colorful and famous thru the summer months will have departed to winter homes and occupations.

Visitors from Chicago who already have departed from Provincetown are Mrs. Frederick Towne Comee and her small son, Frederick Jr., who spent the summer with Mr. Comee's mother, Mrs. Arthur Comee. Planning to leave the first of this week are Mrs. Robert Hewson and her two children, Frances and Roberta. Mr. Hewson was with his family last week at the beach cottage which they occupied thru the months of June, July, and August.

Miss Jeanne Coltman of Chicago has arrived in Hyannis to be a guest of Miss Elizabeth Whelden of Washington, D. C., formerly of Winnetka, Ill. The two girls are having many happy hours bowling, swimming, and recalling days when they were classmates at New Trier High school in Winnetka. Elizabeth was accompanied to Hyannis by her parents, the Junior Chester H. Wheldens and a brother, Chester H., III. All are staying with Mr. Whelden's father, Mr. Whelden Sr.

Sponsors for two lectures in the South Yarmouth Methodist church by two Chicago women, Miss Helen C. Gunsaulus and Miss Helen F. Mackenzie, include Mrs. John K. Graves of Chicago and Bass River and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Smith of New York, former residents of Chicago. Miss Gunsaulus, presented her talk last Friday night before a large audience. At the conclusion of the talk both the speaker, who was dressed in a becoming gown of gray lace and chiffon, and Miss Mackenzie, attired in black chiffon, were feted at a reception in the home of Mrs. Charles D. Voorhis of South Yarmouth.

The Massachusetts branch of the United Nations association benefited from an exhibit of pastels and oils by Dorothy Putnam Paine at the Oyster Harbors club all of last week.

Vacationing in Falmouth until after Labor day are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Robsham of Oak Park, Ill., their son, Lt. Henry Robsham Jr., just back from two years of service in the South Pacific, and Miss Marilyn Delory, Lt. Robsham's fiancee.

Fashions and Fancy

By Judith Cass

About the only top hat, white tie and tails seen in Chicago since Pearl Harbor are being worn nightly at the Blackstone by Carl Brisson, Danish entertainer, whose wife is one of the most smartly clad women to arrive in Chicago in many a moon. While her husband clings to his pre-war trademark of full dress suit, Mrs. Brisson dresses informally in a most distinguished manner. On opening night her costume was a matching dress and full length coat of pistachio silk, ornamented with a sparkling diamond pin at one lapel, and on her head was a frothy concoction of purple and yellow feather flowers tied in brown veiling. She is a tall woman, with dark brown hair which she wears in a low knot on the nape of her neck, and the hat and color of the ensemble were most becoming. On her hands were brown gloves, and she carried a dark red purse. The Edward Morrises and the Harold Giffords had a ringside table, celebrating Mr. Gifford's birthday, and also, belatedly, young Corp. Ted Morris' anniversary. Mrs. Gifford's flattering brimmed hat of several tones of pink and red attracted Mr. Brisson's attention so that he stood beside her to sing her a verse or two from a popular love ballad, and Mrs. Gifford, suddenly finding herself in the limelight, promptly removed her horn rimmed spectacles, responding to that deep seated feminine urge to look one's best in such a situation. Mrs. Donald MacMurray, another guest at Mr. and Mrs. Morris' table, took a more active part in the entertainment, "rendering" a phrase or two from "Mairzydoats" when Mr. Brisson thrust his little portable mike at her. Mrs. Edward Lloyd, with her soft gray curls brushed up around a cunning black skull cap, and Mrs. Frank Hayden, in a sequin bestrewn little hat, made up a dinner two-some, and sitting near-by was Mrs. James O. McKinsey, in a smart off the face hat of white felt covered in flashing sequins.

Mrs. Edward Morris. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Oddly enough for these days, girls were in a minority at the debut tea dance of Miss Carla Hawley at the Racquet club, where the stag line looked definitely pre-war from its number, but distinctly war time in its dress. As most young friends of the bud are away in service, like her twin brother, Jess B. Hawley Jr., their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hawley, of Geneva, invited a large group of midshipmen from the naval reserve training school at Northwestern university to take their places, and these young men, sometimes a bit on the shy side about accepting invitations, turned out in full force. They were not long about getting acquainted, especially when two by two the midshipmen and the debutantes dashed off to sit for a tintype. The question most frequently asked while they waited in line outside the busy photographers' booth was "What did you say your name was?"

Miss Carla Hawley. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Three young women who arrived late were greeted with joy by the hostess, who sent them upstairs in a hurry to help relieve the girl shortage. An older guest who brought along her younger sister, found sister suddenly swept away by a dashing midshipman. "How old is your sister?" some one asked, wondering if the visitor were of debutante age. "About 30," was the answer. A pretty young matron, approaching that age, would have been well on her way towards winning the belle of the ball title if the young navy men had not become aware suddenly of the obvious presence of her husband. The debutante, tall and blonde, wore a traditional gown of white marquisette but with extremely modern accessories, a snood of pearl mesh twinkling with rhinestones and a bouquet of large cabbage roses, made up of hundreds of individual petals shading from poppy red to white. Her six attendants were gowned in replicas of her dress in dusty pink, orchid, powder blue, and pale aqua. Instead of bouquets, they wore little crowns of tuberous begonias.

Equestrian Group to Hold Children's Horse Show Sept. 17

When the Town and Country Equestrian association stages its own children's horse show Sunday, Sept. 17, at Harms woods, one of the most interesting of the 15 events on the program doubtless will be the "originality" class. Youngsters will be permitted to use their own ingenuity in horse showmanship, provided they tell the judge, as they line up beforehand, just what it is they intend to do. Among other classes, there will be one for "trick horses, ponies, mules, or whatnot," and also two western horse parades.

The association's widely varied activities this season include participation in the Oak Brook horse show, being held today, an amateur riding contest, which has enlisted 83 participants, with latest tabulations showing 15 year old Joan Rother in the lead with 715 hours in the saddle to her credit. A two day ride thru the northwest forest preserve trails has been planned for Oct. 7 and 8.

Gerald R. Gorman heads the association, and on the board of directors are Wayne Dinsmore, John McC. Price, and Col. Edward N. Wentworth. Frank W. Bering is advisory committee chairman.

High Schools' "Sloppy" Era Out This Year

By Rea Seeger.

Clothes designers are playing to high school teensters with same snap and enthusiasm accorded the collections made for college girls. Launched at the same time, and timed for the return to books and day by day programs of high school, these collections reveal the likes and pet enthusiasms of a younger crowd with the same appreciation of color fabric and brilliant pattern as clicks with the college shoppers. Everything presented for the girls 14 to 18 years of age is breezy, expertly designed loot to satisfy the demanding bobby sock brigade. Even the mothers are pleased, which makes one of the world's records.

All the new showings feature suits, coats, and dresses especially cut and fashioned for gangling silhouettes, and for the problem figures. Color provides the spirit; plaids, checks, stripes, and dotted materials give all the vivid contrast needed to make these fashions the very essence of youth. Jackets and coats are fitted with the same shoulder widths and swank of sophisticated couturier originals. Contrasts are achieved by master mixers at this game. Details are copied and originated that emphasize the best of the young streamlines, and the results are terrific.

There's a return to neatness in the high school clothes, directly influenced by the college wardrobes of 1944. Sloppy sweaters, six sizes too large, are taboo; jumper dresses, shirtwaist outfits, semi-fitted jackets ready for smooth teamwork with skirts, usually plaited for extra action yardage, are tops with this high school aggregation. So are the snowy white blouses, the vestees to wear under sweaters with the prim white collars over the neckline and all the smart new soft wool blouses. They've even copied the college girl's yen for Scotch plaids in suits, extra skirts, and coats. There's nothing juvenile in any of these new showings.

The best place to shop for high school clothes is, of course, the specialty spots where all such important loot is assembled. Here are the various collections expressly designed and made for high school girls. The sizes are correct, the brilliant colors vivid enough, the accessories easily selected when you buy the outfits, and the shopping expeditions finish with none of the hectic confusion of former years when tracking down the right clothes for a junior miss was comparable to a painful trip to a dentist.

Coats and suits especially should be selected with serious attention, for they are the all-purpose models to be worn for this and another season to come. Buying junior sizes and models automatically reduces the shopping fatalities of having something that doesn't fit and therefore liable to extra costs because of alteration charges. But if you buy clothes in a shop where the junior sizes are exclusively featured every one is pleased.

From such a shop and from one of the season's newest and most exciting high school fashion showings, four important wardrobe items have been sketched. For further information call Superior 0200.

• A. Important winter coat to double for daytime as well as dress parade occasions. This particular model is of soot black wool, with dramatic wide lapels and collar of ocelot. • B. Smartest Scotch mixture in town. The skirt is bright with the plaid of authentic Scotch tartan with a side fringe. The semi-fitted wool jacket is of decided contrast: red, green, or white. • C. The most sensational find of the year, a stunning fur lined three quarter length coat with a double row of buttons in front. There is a slick color range: gray, lime, gold, and purple. • D. No self-respecting high school wardrobe is complete without a rainy day coat. Here is the swankiest, smoothest version available. It's seamed and cut like a man's coat; it's rain repellent and comes in an ideal beige neutral color.

Household Forum

by LOUISE BARGELT

[Have you some household help that lightens labor or conserves on materials? Is there some comfort you could enjoy? We'll be glad to pass on your ideas to our readers. Address Louise Bargelt, The Chicago Tribune.]

Mrs. Ed. T., Chicago—If grease gets spilled on a rug I take the back of a knife and remove as much of it as possible. Then I saturate a bath towel with a good cleaning fluid free of tetraethyl lead and rub the spot with circular strokes. I start at edge of stain and work toward the center to avoid any unsightly ring, and use a clean portion of cloth at all times. This method works in most cases.

• • •

Mrs. Harriet C. Miller, Gary, Ind.—At pot luck or church suppers it is a good plan to use red nail polish, and put one's initials on sides or bottom of pet cake and pie tins. This nail polish is a sure means of identification.

• • •

Mrs. Ted A., Chicago—Why not plastic floor coverings for post-war homes with pigmentation which includes luminous properties, and gives a faint glow to floors when rooms are darkened. I have read that this is a possibility, and it certainly would give added safety to our house interiors, since so many accidents happen by stumbling over articles in the dark.

• • •

Mrs. Sam H., Kalamazoo, Mich.—Drop a cork in boiling water if you want to shrink it a bit so it will fit some bottle it's just a trifle too large for. This treatment also is handy if you want to give a bottle an airtight seal, as the cork will expand a little as it dries.

• • •

Mrs. Henry S., Evanston, Ill.—Our door chimes weren't working well and I discovered a greasy film on the plungers. I poured some cleaning fluid in a small oil can and applied this, which removed the film and gave new life to the chimes.

New Ensemble Brings Color to Baby's Room

By Edith Weigle.

For some time the stores have been showing matched bedroom ensembles for mother or for sister: Bedspread, dressing table skirt and window draperies, ready made. Now his Nibs, the baby, is given a place in the fashion picture, too.

Animals from the zoo furnish the subjects for the amusing decoration of crib spread, draperies, bib apron, towel and place mat, the material being white cotton sheeting and the design being stamped or stenciled in bright tones of red, with touches of black, or in baby pink and blue. There's a tall, lanky giraffe, and there are funny little monkeys, a zebra and an elephant cavorting over the surface of the white sheeting.

The draperies have a narrow ruffled valance, and hems that are bordered with red stars. The crib spread is priced under four dollars, draperies are $5.95 and the bib is only a dollar. [A larger sized spread for a junior crib also is available in this ensemble.]

For a little girl, aged 8 or so to 15, there's a charming bedroom grouping in pale pink seersucker trimmed in white eyelet embroidery. The bedspread, which is made in two sizes, for a single or a double bed, has one full, deep ruffle along the sides and where this joins the top there is a wide band of the eyelet embroidery. An inch beyond this is a corded seam which runs the length of the spread.

There's a special pillow case to be used with this spread, very feminine and ruffled. It, too, has a band of the embroidery.

The accompanying draperies have a pretty little ruffled valance and tie back bands, and are finished with wide ruffles of the seersucker. Then there's a dressing table skirt to complete the ensemble. The nice feature of this material is, of course, that it requires little ironing and launders like a handkerchief.

For a boy's room either at home or away at school there are plain, good looking, tailored spread and draperies of sturdy cotton that resembles homespun. On a beige background the design of green fir trees and red log cabins is worked out in widely separated horizontal stripes. Both spread and draperies are priced at $4.50 each.

There are a number of other patterns in this same type of ready made, heavy cotton ensemble, some in soft rose-pink tones, others in blue.

For a very smart, considerably more extravagant bedroom this same display in a Chicago store is showing a ready made bedspread with a top of bright yellow quilted chintz and ruffled sides of green and white striped chintz. Draperies and dressing table skirt complete the set.

Still another design combines red, white and blue plaid with white quilted chintz and is gay and good looking. Painted and papered backgrounds—walls and floor—furnish complete color schemes for all these ensembles, which are on view in a Chicago store. And in each one you see the spread on an actual bed.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

Present day conditions have made it necessary for the housewife to use care and ingenuity in the upkeep of many household decorations and pieces of equipment. . . . For those who would anticipate trouble and put to rout stains on valuable rugs as soon as these stains appear, we've prepared a leaflet with tips on care and repairs of rugs which are possible at home, and on methods to use for the immediate removal of certain common stains which never should be allowed to set but which should be removed from a rug as soon as they appear.

Certain quality plumbing fixtures including sinks, closets, bathtubs, lavatories and laundry tubs can now be purchased and installed without priority, and if a September checkup of the house reveals worn out plumbing fixtures which should be replaced, it is well to take steps towards obtaining them at the earliest possible date.

First Sunday Story by New Bridge Editor

By Sam Wallace.

In an adjoining column today will be found the first Sunday article by THE TRIBUNE's new Bridge Editor, Charles H. Goren, the nation's No. 1 contract bridge expert.

Recognizing the increased interest in bridge and that systems and experts change, THE TRIBUNE conducted a survey among bridge clubs, teachers, and players. Its findings were that Goren, holder of 19 national championships, is regarded as the foremost expert, player, and author on the game.

Goren's column, which will be entitled Goren on Bridge, will be both a daily and Sunday feature.

Goren is not an adherent to any bridge "system." He advises players to use any system they prefer and be "comfortable" in their playing.

"I try to teach the logic of cards," he has said. "The system used is of no great importance. But the bidding used is of extreme importance. When the bidding has been accomplished to the understanding and satisfaction of your partner, more than half the battle has been won."

For 10 years one of the most active tournament players in the United States, Goren has won more major bridge titles than any player in history. He has accumulated 1,400 master points under the rating system of the American Contract Bridge league to be ranked as a life master—one of 38 players to hold this distinction—which is awarded for obtaining 250 points by winning major tournaments. Since 1935 he has been ranked every year among the first 10 players in the United States, the only expert to be so honored. Four of those years he was ranked No. 1.

In addition to his top ranking as an expert player, Goren is one of the leading authorities on the game. His books, "Winning Bridge Made Easy," and "Better Bridge for Better Players," are regarded as the best ever written on bridge. He not only writes authoritatively but also, unlike many columnists, he writes fluently and entertainingly. His articles often are read for their entertainment value by nonplayers. Experts regard his as foremost among the writers who actually play bridge, and he is one of the few experts who writes his own column.

One of the many tributes on Goren's book, "Better Bridge for Better Players," is that by Ely Culbertson, which appears in the foreword.

"It has everything one could ask for — good writing, good material, good arrangement, and, above all, good bridge," Culbertson writes. "For there are many good writers and many good bridge players, but one must sift them by the million before finding a combination of the two, and that is what I have found Charles Goren to be."

Goren on Bridge

By Charles H. Goren

For many years the bridge playing public has been confused by conflicting claims of accuracy on the part of the rival systems for their table of card values or method of counting. The Four Aces have their 3—2—1—½; Milton Work has his 4—3—2—1; George Reith, his 6—4—3—2; Whitehead his quick trick table, followed by Culbertson's variation, the honor trick table. I have a feeling that these claims have about as much merit as those held forth by rival manufacturers of aspirin; that in all but a few isolated cases the various methods lead to the same conclusion.

"Analysis of thousands of hands has shown," claims one author, "that my count is more accurate by .016." This very argument is its own indictment. Cards do not behave that way. I have never met a hand that was won or lost by a tenth of a trick.

In presenting my bidding technique, I am happiy in the position of having no table of my own to sell to the public. My students are at liberty to count their hands in any manner they find most suitable to their tastes. I admire the technique of my golf professional. He does not care very much how his pupils hold the golf club, but he does insist that they be comfortable. Actually, I do not like counting too much and try to avoid it whenever possible, altho I do recognize that a certain amount of counting is necessary.

Since the majority of players prefer the honor trick measure, I most frequently speak in those terms. The reader should bear in mind that whenever I refer to an honor trick it represents approximately the equivalent of an ace. Therefore, if you are in the habit of using the Four Aces table, substitute the figure 3 for one honor trick. If you use one of the other point counts, substitute the corresponding figure in that method.

The most important place for counting is to determine whether your hand is equal to an opening bid; thereafter the count becomes too confusing, and to remember hundreds of various requirements is entirely too burdensome a task for the player who wants to enjoy the game. Don't get the mistaken notion that to be a bridge player you must have majored in mathematics at college. I have recently had the extreme pleasure of playing in a regular duplicate game against the man who taught me algebra at prep school. He has been for some time regarded as something of a mathematical genius. Briefly, he is my favorite opponent. For the heartaches he caused me as a callow youth, he is now making strange retribution. Perhaps I ought not to confess it [I cannot resist the temptation], but I know he dislikes the extreme politeness with which I analyze his bidding and play.

If you can count to 13, are willing to exercise common sense and are not too stubborn, you can become proficient at America's most popular game. For th next few days, I shall offer suggestions for judging possibilities of a hand without the cumbersome process of counting too much.

Lady of the House

"September stood upon the earth like a goddess of might and glory."

Tho it marks the end of summer, it is such a forward-looking month that sometimes I think the year should begin with September. So many things to do.

Children start to school, perhaps for the first time; and mothers, who were looking forward to that time, feel lost and lonely. The garden still has lovely days, but already we are thinking and working toward next year's, knowing spring will come again. There is still a lot of canning, preserving, pickling, drying, and brining to do.

Houses must be readied for more indoor living. Club programs get under way; church activities are set in liveller motion; and suddenly we are busier than we thought possible, even in times like these.

September used to be the month of ingathering, of summer travel homeward bound, of happy anticipation of many things . . . now there is a sinister black shadow on the golden month—a grim reaper bringing in a grisly harvest.

Just a House.

My house is spic and span today.
There are no blocks or toys about;
No children's voices gaily shout,
It is too silent in and out;
The children started school today.

My home is just a house today.
No stamp collection on the floor.
No calling "Mom" at the back door;
Grown sons have gone away to war—
My home is just a house today.

Today my home is just a house.
Each thing stays primly in its place.
Oh, how I wish a child's sweet face
Would smile at me, and so erase
The loneliness of just a house!

—Helen Adele Lerch Miller.

Sunset.

An azure sky from whose calm breast
A golden winding river flows,
With lovely archipelagoes,
Whose scintillating beauty glows
With violet, and mauve and rose;
Meandering it onward goes,
This glittering stream, and no one knows

—Katharine Isabelle Dignum.

Mud Puddles.

Did you ever put your swimming suit on—
And go out in the rain
With nothing on excepting it?
Have you played around in the street down there
Where the mudholes are—
And the rain from your hair
Goes trickling down along your nose,
And the mud squishes up between your toes?

I tell you it's always lots of fun
To go out in the rain,
With nothing on except that suit,
And you bet when I
Grow up big—and have boys—
First thing I'll buy is swimming suits,
So my kids can be
Chasing 'round in the mud like me!

—Gertrude Robb.

Aunt Ella plans to add a bit to her garden of sweet-smelling things next year. Old fashioned scented roses, spice bush, clove pink, mignonette, stock, lemon verbena, heliotrope, rose geranium are there, but she wants Nicotiana for twilight fragrance and to attract luna moths. Tuberoses are to be added to her beloved old time lilies; one or two newcomers to the herb garden. To give accent to the whole she wants the pungent flavor of cedar after rain.

I hope I'm on the list for a bowl of her favorite potpourri.

New Fall Suits Will Be on Job Around Clock

By Bettina Bedwell.

Suits are back on a 24 hour shift in the fall and winter fashions. Favorite of our American girls and women for years, the suit is going on to new triumphs in the coming months.

One of the more important changes in suit styles is the suppression of the classic suit to a minor place. I won't say that classics aren't part of the show, for they are, but this severe, simple suit is playing a modest part in the glittering spectacle of the new styles.

Big name designers like suits with a general softening of lines. They prefer suits that have personal details to the suit that follows the classic tradition. Important in the styles are the suit with a peplum and the suit with a tunic jacket. Both of these types are runner styles, and will be seen by the millions when fall really gets going.

Quite startling in their newness are suits with long jackets and slim skirts. "Minaret" suits with jutting flares below the waistline of their jackets are so noticeable nobody can fail to see they are brand new.

• • •

Cook Tomatoes with Beef to Tenderize It

By Mary Meade.

Tomatoes, green peppers, and onions are a vegetable triumvirate almost guaranteed to make any piece of beef taste better. We'll be relying upon them more than ever now that we're getting lower grades of beef ration free and in plentiful supply. Gardens right now are yielding tomatoes, peppers, and onions, too—especially tomatoes. I've heard complaints: "What are we going to do with all these tomatoes?"

Aside from eating quantities of them raw in salads and canning other quantities of them, I'd suggest cooking tomatoes with meats, especially with those "utility" cuts of beef.

Tomatoes seem to have a slight tenderizing effect upon beef, too, when cooked with it for a long period of time at a low temperature. Braise beef in the oven at 300 degrees, for tenderness, and cook it on top of the range at simmering. A boiled cut of beef just won't grow tender, no matter how long you cook it. The heat treatment must be gentle.

Mexican Style Swiss Steak.

4 pounds round steak, cut 3 inches thick
¾ cup flour
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons bacon drippings
2½ cups chopped tomatoes
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 onion, sliced
1 green pepper, chopped
1 cup celery, chopped

Season flour with salt and pepper and pound into steak with mallet or the edge of a saucer. Brown meat on both sides in hot drippings. Add other ingredients, cover and bake in a 300 degree oven for 3 hours or until tender.

Left-overs from such a steak might be ground and made into a loaf with the addition of bread crumbs, dry oatmeal, a small amount of extra seasonings to take care of the crumbs or meal, and an egg or two. Any of the left-over sauce should be included in the loaf, and if additional moisture is needed, it could be tomato juice, water, or milk.

Smothered Beef.

3 pounds chuck, rump or clod
Flour, salt, pepper
3 onions, sliced
1 green pepper, cut in rings [optional]
¼ cup drippings
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 teaspoon celery seed
2½ cups chopped tomatoes

Dredge the meat with seasoned flour and brown on both sides in hot fat. Remove from pan and brown onion and pepper lightly in fat. Return meat to pan and add other ingredients. Cover and bake at 300 degrees, or simmer on top of the range, for 3 hours, or until meat is tender.

I predict that we'll be eating more spaghetti with meat balls and meat sauces, for grinding beef is a good way of tenderizing it, and cooking it for several hours in a sauce makes it indistinguishable from the best quality meat.

Italian Spaghetti Sauce with Meat Balls.

[Serves eight or more.]
2 medium onions, chopped
2 cloves garlic, chopped fine
4 green peppers, chopped
¼ cup salad oil
6 cups chopped tomatoes
1 teaspoon basil
2 teaspoons salt [or more]
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons sugar
2 pounds ground beef
1 cup cracker crumbs
1 egg
Salt, pepper

Saute onions, garlic, peppers in oil for 10 minutes. Add tomatoes, basil, salt, pepper, sugar. Simmer in a heavy saucepan for 2 hours. Mix ground beef with egg, crumbs, 2 teaspoons salt, and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Shape into small balls. Brown lightly in a little fat or not, as you wish. Add all but six of the balls to the sauce. Crumble the six into the sauce itself. Continue simmering sauce and meat for 2 hours longer. Serve hot over freshly cooked spaghetti.

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

One of the best buys of this month, to our way of thinking, is a world famous sachet, in six heavenly scents, that is actually a perfume in dry or powder form. We have been awfully weak for this for many years and while we wouldn't countenance hoarding, we do feel that the annual September promotion of this is an extraordinarily good time to stock up.

Because there's a war on, the heavily scented sachet is in a new package, a sturdy cartridge of paper. It used to be in glass. We almost like this better. It is purse size, for one thing, and it's an awfully good traveler, with a top that comes down snugly and sticks. We like "no breakage, no spilling" features in anything that must be tucked into traveling bag or overnight case.

This dry perfume, we think, is a marvelous find for the working woman. She simply can't, if she values her reputation as an efficient woman, and one of good taste, smother herself in heavy, heavy fragrance. But she can, and probably should, use some scent, in a fresh ladylike fragrance and in artful quantities.

The fragrances in this sachet are superb. There is a blue carnation, for instance, that we have never found equaled. It's true and it's beautiful. The others, with the exception of violet and sandalwood, are blends, every single one of them exquisite.

The fine powder, lastingly perfumed, is useable in every way that liquid perfume is—rubbed directly into the skin. Use it generously after bathing and before dressing. It can also be used as a refreshant when you clean up before you leave the office, or when you duke up a bit for a dinner date.

But it has other tricks up its perfumed sleeve. You can, and should, sprinkle a bit of the powder into your freshly laundered clothes. Sprinkle a little into the lining of your pocketbook, too. Use it as a mild deodorant when you feel yourself wilting. And, if you're smart, use it on your hair. You can do this if you have a pomp, or wear your hair in a perfect roll, by sprinkling the dry perfume on cotton and concealing this firmly beneath your locks.

We really needn't go into all the alluring uses of sachet; you undoubtedly not only know them but have artful little dodges of your own. But we do want to tell you this: The good sachet, adroitly used, is one of the most perfect means of scenting yourself delicately and flatteringly. And these sachets, which you'll find all over town this month, are so fine that the word "good" applied to them is understatement.

Some Children Don't Care for Active Sports

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Fathers and mothers both often become disturbed because one of their children, or perhaps their only child, does not care for competitive sports. [With the school year just ahead it's something more to think about.] In fact, sometimes they're so convinced that every child should enjoy playing on a team or indulging in all sorts of athletic pursuits that they express themselves as this mother did:

"My son is well balanced and has lots of friends, yet he prefers always to play with one or two boys at a time. He is most cordial and at ease with persons at home or elsewhere, but he has no desire to indulge in group sports or activities. I know this attitude is wrong and should be corrected, and I have tried desperately to get him to consent to go to camp this summer for just that purpose. I know he knows what I am driving at, and he is so intelligent that I cannot put it over on him at all. But he has a beautiful time here at our country place and sees no reason why he should go away. What do you think?"

We hear a great deal these days on all sides about what a normal child should do; we hear a great deal about what an average child should do; we hear a great deal about social adjustment, and we hear a great deal about the value of sports and the importance of group activities. Certainly almost every mother and father who have a son want him to do all the things that the real boy does.

Sometimes I think there is much too much talk about what the average child should be, and what the normal child should be, and what perfect social adjustment should be. There is, in fact, a little too much of a tendency to try to make all children conform to a pattern, and to believe that they naturally should conform to one pattern.

I have watched too many young persons go thru the years from childhood well into the teens to think it wise to attempt to enforce adult ideas of what is normal and what is average, and expect them to conform to it. In fact, if we do too much of that sort of thing children become conscious, and begin to feel that they are deficient, or have fallen below something that we desire for them. And that is never a good thing for them to feel in relation to their parents.

Any one who has watched children and watched adults, too, must know that there are many individuals who just are not what we might call "groupers." And I am not using that term in a derogatory sense at all. What it amounts to is that there are some boys and girls who simply do not care for competitive sports.

And altho I think camps do a wonderful work for children, I still know many boys and girls who are talented, quite mature, and highly intelligent for their years who just don't want camp life.

It seems to me that the boy in this family is a normal, intelligent, and well adjusted child. He gets along well with grownups; he gets along well with children, and other boys his own age. At school everything goes smoothly, too.

Having had an experience similar to this in my own family, if this were my child I certainly would not try to force him into a new social path—one dotted with football and baseball and camp life. He, like any child, should, of course, have opportunities to be in groups if he wants to, but he should not be made to feel that he is lacking by pressure being brought to bear upon him constantly, or by having his reluctance to be in a group discussed.

It is always a good thing for parents to keep in mind the thought of growth and the changes it brings. What a child is at 9 is different from what he is at 14 or 15. I know of several children who were like this boy and are now in their late teens, and more poised, well rounded, and sociable young persons I would not want to see.

A child who is not run of the mill must be handled in a liberal and understanding way, especially if he is particularly bright and talented. Trying to make him like other boys, especially if he realizes it is being done, may have quite a bad effect upon him.

Fashions

By Angela

The new and smart 36 inch length fall and winter coats are going to offer serious competition to the more conservative full length models of this season. Fur trimmed or plain, these shorter coats have smooth lines which compliment the slimness of arrowlike skirts. Reds, greens, and gold are the rule, with gray, black, and brown the exceptions. All serve as an interesting background for beaver, Persian lamb, leopard, fox, and novelty furs.

An exceptionally striking short coat of kelly green has a handsome ocelot front panel trimming. [A skirt of the same green is sold separately.] The broad shoulders and full sleeves are beautifully cut, having interesting stitching detail. The back, with a hint of the swagger in its lines, has an inverted plait at the hemline. Ocelot panels are cut in such a way as to form pockets. These pockets hold the coat closed. The high round neckline is new and becoming. A narrow band of fur is inset across the back, forming a brief standup collar. Considering smartness, beauty, and quality of material and fur, this coat is one of the best buys on the fashion scene.

Chicago Music Clubs to Open Fall Season

Geographically speaking, interest springs from Chicago to Tulsa, Okla., as music circles resume fall and winter activities. Curtain raiser to the season for the Chicago Woman's Musical club will be a scholarship benefit program Thursday at the quaint and lovely Granville Avenue Methodist church, popularly known as "the little country church of the city." Later in the week music club leaders will be off for Tulsa and the board of directors' meeting of the National Federation of Music Clubs, opening in that city Monday, Sept. 11, and continuing for four days. Heading this state's contingent to the board conference will be Mrs. Alma K. Anderson, president of the Illinois Federation of Music Clubs.

Mrs. Alma K. Anderson. [Seymour Photo.]

Chicago musical club members will gather Thursday in the church garden, behind the white picket fence, at 2 o'clock. The church stands at the Granville av. intersection with Lakewood av. Margaret Jacobson, who serves the club as program chairman, will give an organ. concert, after which the group will repair to the garden for tea.

The afternoon has been arranged by Neppie Melton. Mrs. Cornelius J. Peeples is president of the club.

One of the highlights of the Tulsa meeting will be a concert, presented under auspices of the war service division of the music club federation. On the second night of the meeting, the division will present in joint recital, Carroll Glenn, violinist, and Sgt. Eugene List, pianist. Sgt. List is with the special service division of the army.

In private life, Miss Glenn is Mrs. List. The young violinist was heard on the New York Philharmonic orchestra's broadcast last Sunday as soloist, and Chicago audiences also have heard her in Grant park concerts and with the Chicago Symphony orchestra. She was the winner in 1941 of the federation's young artists award. The federation also has a special interest in Sgt. List, for its war service division has worked in collaboration with him in placing musical kits on hospital ships.

Of particular interest to local clubs is the appearance of the young Chicago pianist, Jean Graham, before the federation leaders. Miss Graham is the winner of the Edgar Stillman Kelly award, another of the national awards given by the federation.

Mrs. Royden J. Keith, past state president and now serving on the national board as finance chairman, will have an important part in the board's consultations. The extensive war time services of the federation will receive special attention at the Tulsa meeting. With peace nearing, the war program will be realigned to meet new needs. Detailed plans are to be worked out for transferring from war front and home military center services to a new "music in hospitals" project for army, navy, and other government operated hospitals. Conducting the Tulsa meeting will be Mrs. Guy Pattison Gannett, national president.

Local Garden Clubs Schedule Fall Festivals

Harvest festivals and flower shows stud the calendars of garden enthusiasts as the summer season wanes. Inspiration for a large number of these exhibits finds root in the Garden Club of Illinois, the parent organization for local garden clubs thruout the state, whose final meeting of the summer, set for Monday, Sept. 11, is being sandwiched in between several of the community shows.

The Kenwood Garden club, of which Mrs. Arthur Jackson is president, will be hostess group at the state gathering, which is to be held in the home of Mrs. Ulysses S. Schwartz, 1125 E. 48th st. The ingenious idea of a window display containing millinery made of real blossoms is being worked out by the Glen Ellyn Garden club, whose show will be presented Friday in the recreation house of Lake Ellyn park. Mrs. Harvey Duvall is general chairman of the club, which is comprised of five member units, and Mrs. Harrison Stearn is in charge of arrangements for the exhibition.

Others among the 17 different classes included in the Glen Ellyn festival will be a winter storage canned goods exhibit, artistic arrangements for buffet tables and home interiors, and an outdoor market. The junior gardeners of the village, whose activities are under the direction of Mrs. F. C. Dickey, are planning their own show, to be held in conjunction with that of the adult group.

Serving on Mrs. Stearn's committee are Mrs. Fred J. Mabrey, Mrs. W. G. Kaiser, Mrs. O. C. Becker, Mrs. R. L. Keitzman, Mrs. Harry E. Heinz, W. L. Skinner, Mrs. Edward Steinke, Mrs. C. Franklin Brown, Mrs. W. P. Gronewold, and Mrs. L. A. Robey.

The Winnetka Woman's club, Oak and Maple sts., Winnetka, will be the setting Tuesday, Sept. 19, for the annual flower fair sponsored by the club's garden department. Following the show, which will be open to the public from 2 until 9 o'clock, both flowers and containers appearing in a bedside exhibit display will be given to service men's hospitals.

Among other exhibits planned under the direction of Mrs. William G. Kelley, president of the sponsoring group, will be a family reunion table setting, a "dinner alone" arrangement, and war garden specimens. Mrs. J. A. Lyford, Mrs. Donald Cook, and Mrs. Edward C. Haase are among those assisting Mrs. Kelley.

The 16th annual flower show of the Algonquin Garden club, to be held at the Algonquin school gymnasium, will precede the Winnetka show by exactly one week. Arrangements for the American home, whimseys and oddities in flowers, and horticultural displays are to be featured by this group, and there also will be a section for juniors. Mrs. E. M. Melahn and her show committee are being assisted by the club president, Mrs. Frank Millchrist, and other officers.

Other festivals and exhibits to be held this month include that of the Wilmington Garden club next Saturday; the Park Ridge Garden club, next Saturday and Sunday; the Sauganash and Edgebrook clubs, both on Saturday, and the Tri City Garden club show, to be held Tuesday, Sept. 12, at the Moline Garden center in Moline.

When Miss Essie L. Maguire assumes her new duties as executive secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association of Chicago immediately after Labor day, she will bring to her office a wide experience in the Y. W. C. A. field. It was 24 years ago that her career with the association began with appointment as program secretary for industrial girls with the Fort Worth, Tex., chapter. Later she served as business and professional department secretary for the Tacoma, Wash., and Portland, Ore., associations.

A member of the Y. W. C. A. national staff in New York from 1928 until 1931, she has been, since then, executive secretary for the New Bedford, Mass., and Indianapolis, Ind., units. For the last three years she has served the San Francisco, Cal., association in similar capacity. A graduate of the University of Oregon, her native state, Miss Maguire received her M. A. degree from teachers' college, Columbia university. She is succeeding Miss Rosalee Venable, whose retirement was announced early this summer.

Two other appointments to the Chicago executive staff recently have been announced by Miss Lilace Reid Barnes, president of the local association. Miss Dorothy P. Powell is relinquishing duties as director of the University of Chicago Y. W. C. A. to accept a position as head of the student department of the Metropolitan Chicago Y. W. C. A., and Mrs. Olga P. Buhl of Oak Park will assume direction of the health education department committee, for which she has been serving as volunteer co-chairman.

Miss Eleanore Schafer, a graduate of the State Teachers college, West Chester, Pa., is to be new director of health education at the West Side center Y. W. C. A., and Miss Mildred E. Holt, who was educated at Denison university in Granville, O., will hold the same position at the Harriet Hammond McCormick Memorial residence Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Stanley Pargellis of Chicago, who last year served the association in a volunteer capacity, has been added to the staff as industrial information secretary.

War Gardens Keep Ephraim Colony Busy

EPHRAIM, WIS.

Horticulture has always had a number of interested fans in Ephraim, and while a shortage of help and material is a handicap this year in any large scale landscaping efforts, small gardens can be seen everywhere, and the topic of flowers and how to grow them is a popular subject of discussion. Gathering at the Ralph Horween home one evening last week, a number of gardening enthusiasts heard a lecture and saw slides on the problem of growing roses in the colder climate of the middle west.

In keeping with the war time trend, gardens here are serving more than a decorative function. In many homes, the care of a large war garden and its harvest are summer-long family projects.

At the William Wilson farm in the Ephraim countryside, young Bill Jr. has had a great share of the responsibility in tending an extensive orchard and vegetable crop. His house guest for several weeks, Robert Meeks of La Grange, Ill., was busy assisting him, and Mr. Wilson Sr. utilized his vacation earlier in the season and several week-end visits from their home in Western Springs, Ill., toward making their food growing project one of the most successful in the community.

A sporting event which draws much interest annually here is the Resorters' Golf tournament held at the Peninsula State park golf course, where many Ephraim residents culminate a season of golfing in friendly competition. While John Bram of Baton Rouge, La., gained men's medalist and championship flight honors, 14 year old Spencer Gould Jr. displayed future championship skill by claiming top honors in the "A" classification. Another up and coming golfer, 14 year old Richard Crawford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Crawford of Wilmette, was defeated by George Clark of Fish Creek and Flossmoor.

Four Seagull boats, representing the Ephraim Yacht club, sailed around the corner to Fish Creek to attend the regatta held there on August 25. Many of Ephraim's sailing enthusiasts enacted the part of landlubbers for the day as interested spectators at the event. It was a tense moment in the seamanship race held at noon before those watching on the large cement dock of the Fish Creek Yacht club saw Sammy and Tommy Randolph of Wilmette and Ephraim break ahead and complete the race's last requirement by sailing backward across the finish line. Each a possessor of the Peninsula Arts association cup for two previous seasons, Ephraim and Fish Creek teams raced in the afternoon to keep it this next year. The Fish Creek team by first, fourth, and fifth positions defeated Ephraim.

A visitor from Los Angeles, Miss Marrianna Browne has been spending this month at the Ephraim home of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Sanborn, and will be joined this week by her sister Margaret, a Lt. [j. g.] in the WAVES, now stationed at Great Lakes. Both girls have been participants in yachting and social activities during vacations here for several summers.

Altenheim Auxiliary to Hold Luncheon Tuesday

The program, which was arranged by Mrs. J. B. Rohm, will include a group of songs by Miss Mabel Katzman, soprano, with Miss Minnie Katzman, piano accompanist. Mrs. Theodore Kuehl heads the woman's service organization.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

Game Season in Northwest Lures Hunters

By Bob Becker.

The railroads have been called upon to handle an unusually large volume of traffic since the war started and the use of private automobiles was curtailed by gasoline restrictions.

This fall they undoubtedly will experience another minor but noticeable flurry from the traveling public, but it will be confined mostly to the rail lines running up thru Minnesota into the northwest states of North and South Dakota where the heavy crops of pheasants, partridges, ducks, and other game birds are the big attraction.

The sportsmen who go to these states in September represent one group of sports-minded fans who have a practical, ration-point saving angle to their favorite hobby. When they spend time for travel they usually come home with meat for the table, a dividend on the sport that conserves the coupons in the family ration book.

It's expected that South Dakota alone will produce a crop of around 4,000,000 pheasants this fall, if ammunition is available to take this harvest. Illinois hunters who can go to South Dakota may bring home at least 35 of these birds for table use plus other game. Last fall South Dakota sold more than 10,000 nonresident hunting licenses.

For more than four weeks we have noticed the increased number of phone calls from war workers asking about the shooting seasons in the northwest where pheasants are so abundant that they're a pest, and also about train connections. Most of these men remarked that they had taken no vacation during the summer so they could get away in September for a few days of superlative hunting plus the dividend of some meat for the table.

Fishing Story of the Year—3 Bass on One Strike!

Not many fishing yarns are coming from vacationists in the lake areas this season because fewer fishermen are able to fish. But the fish yarn that may win all the prizes this season is this one with Alabama as the locale. While fishing the Warrior river, Emmett Calhoun, Birmingham Post employe, cast his plug into some bass that were breaking water in all directions. Something struck like a streamlined train going thru a whistle stop!

"You have two; no, three!" exclaimed fishing partner D. D. Webb as Calhoun began reeling in.

Calhoun had hit the packpot of all fishing experiences—three smallmouth bass on as many hooks. They totaled a little over three pounds.

Resorts at Dells to Operate Thru This Month, Next

WISCONSIN DELLS, Wis. [Special].—Complying with government requests that vacation seasons and facilities be spread to ease travel bottlenecks, Mayor T. J. Howley of this city has announced that hotels, cottages, resorts, and boats of this scenic area will operate thruout September and October.

"September, with its early autumnal colorings and pleasantly moderate climate, is superb in this section of Wisconsin," Mayor Howley declared. "Many vacationers like October's bright blue weather even better. In the case of the Dells, already richly endowed by nature with amazing rock formations and geological wonders, the added color of fall is like gilding the lily."
